-A Keeley bi-chloride of gold cure, a branch of the big one at Dwight, has been started at Tionesta, with Dr. J. B. Siggins in charge. It's a curious fact that the de-RENTING AND COLLECTING mand for and patronage of these "Jag cures' comes so largely from places that have no license. Tionesta has none, and Warren, which has been so largely represented at Dwight, has until recently been classified as a dry town.-Franklin News. Just the kind of place to sober-up in, you know. Franklin parties specially invited to come and bring their "jags" with them. -The great trust of the Standard Oil Company is getting ready to dissolve! It must astonish the general public to learn that the first and greatest of the mighty brood of trusts is likely to be the first to disband. A special meeting of the stockholders, to vote on the proposed dissolution, is to be held on Monday, March 21, Hon. S. C. T. Dodd, general solicitor of the Standard, says the step is brought about by the recent decision of the Ohio Supreme Court against the Standard Trust, and by the opposition and legislation against trusts in different States of the Union. The Standard's action is of great significance. The total capital of the companies in the trust is $95,000,000, and the stock, which is held by over 2,000 persons, has in the last 8 years paid 12 per cent. a year .- Franklin News.

-A private letter from our old friend and former townsman, John Muenzenberger, conveys the intelligence that he and his family are well and all doing well. He also says the May, Purington & Co. brick yard, in which he is working, has been running all winter, having stopped only twice on account of cold weather, and that they made brick when it was 12 below zero. The company sold and delivered in 1891 45 million brick, seven million of which went to the World's Fair, that being the largest contract given out by the Fair people to any one concern. The demand for brick is very great, so great in fact that this company cannot turn them out fast enough to fill orders, and the demand seems to grow rather than diminish. John sends best wishes to all old friends in this community,

-Bre'r Smith, in his Punxsutawney Spirit, says: The happiest moments of our lives are those spent in dreaming-in musing over the sunny days that are gone, or building beautiful castles in the future. Happiness is merely a condition of mind, and a man can be joyful or miserable as he chooses. What is more pleasant for an old man than to revisit in his imagination the scenes of his youth, to chase the golden butterflies over the flowery mead, to wade the pond by the mill and feel the soft, yielding mud ooze up between his toes, to fish for suckers in the eddy, and to go to mill on horseback astride of a two-bushel bag of wheat? Go back to the callow days when he sat in the old school house and looked lovingly over his shoulder at Mary Jane McGlew in her homespun dress and wonder if there ever was another girl so sweet and beautiful. A man's body may become bent with age and his epidermis wrinkled with the lapse of time, but his neart is always young, and he ever loves to pick out the sunny places in the path he has trodden and muse over them. To him it is a consolation and a joy. There is a serene and quiet repose about the happiness of old age, the autumn of a life well tiveness to slights and to physical pain becomes duller, and delights are not enjoyed with so keen a relish, but there is a case for neuralgia and experienced much steadiness of temper and philosophy of

TIONESTA'S KEELEY INSTITUTE.

Our Townsman, D. W. Clark, Gives His Experience to the Derrick Editor.

D. W. Clark, of Tionesta, who was in the city last week, is loud in praise of the possibilities of the new Keeley Institute in Tionesta. He is certain sure that the Keeley cure is all that is claimed for it because he has been to Dwight, and has been cured of dipsomania in its worst form. He says that it took him a week to get to Dwight, and that when he got there, the whisky was running "out of his ears," They gave him all the whisky he wanted, and began to shoot the bi-chloride of gold into him. In a week he did not want the whisky, and began to feel like a man, ate, and slept well, and got control of himself for the first time in years. He says that as a result of a hypodermic injection, there is a tingling all over the body, which gradually disappears. There is also a it all. Nothing but the hardest of rubbing cure is effected. He stayed four weeks at Dwight, and since his return, over a year ago, he has never touched a drop of liquor, and never felt the least desire for it. Mr. Clark is a man who is evidently in the bost of health. His eyes are bright and clear, and his skin is as ruddy and healthy as any one could wish. He has not taken any medicine of any kind since he returned from Dwight, and says emphatically that there is no truth in the story that is expected home to-day after a two week's it is simply getting rid of one habit to take up another. The Institute at Tionesta, he thinks, is destined to be a great success. There is fine air and water, good scenery, hunting and fishing. It is secluded, and at the same time easily accessible, and as soon as it is started will undoubtedly be better .- Mrs. Porter of Pithole Centre, successful .- Derrick, March 14.

AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

An Important capture of a bad man took place at Marienville, this county, on Friday evening of last week. Just one week previous to the above date James F. Mills, Indicted for the murder of Peter Dugan, escaped from the Butler county jail, with five other prisoners, all of whom have since been re-captured. Mills succeeded in making his way to Millerstown, thence to the Allegheny river near Foxburg, by keeping himself hid in the woods. At Foxburg he crossed the river and boarded a freight train on the little P. & W. road, riding on an open car as far as Tylersburg. Conductor William Thurston suspected that the man he was hauling was Mills, and telegraphed ahead to Tylersburg for an officer. The constable there was unwilling to make the arrest, and the car on which Milts was riding was thrown on to a siding. Mills took in the situation and got into a box ear partly filled with barrel staves. T. J. Birch, a young machinist, was at the station. He and Conductor Thurston together bolted the car door so that Mills could not get out. The prisoner attempted to put a barrel stave in the door to prevent it from closing. He failed, and when the train pulled out he was securely caged and knew it. Mr. Birch was determined to see that the man did not get away, so he boarded the train and rode to Marienville, where Deputy Sheriff John Coon was in waiting, he having been notifled by wire.

The Sheriff went to the car where Mills was and called upon him to surrender. Mills acknowledged that they had the drop on him, and said: "If you give me a fair show I will come out." His revolver was useless, for the reason that the cartridges he had were not the proper kind. stere. He ascertained this fact when he tried to shoot Detective Allen several days before. The door was opened and he stepped out. House, and in less than an hour the He was kept under guard at a hotel until building was a mass of smouldering the southbound train left Saturday mornruins. When the fire was discovered the ing, when he was returned to his cell in
