

Why a Horse Eats Dirt.

There was a block in the street up town the other day, and a crowd of people and many of cabs, street cars and carriages were generally mixed up and delayed for some time.

Directly in front of one of the cars was a cart loaded with fresh dirt from some cellar. The passengers on the car noticed that one of the car horses was interested in the load of dirt. Finally he stretched his neck out and picked up a small mouthful of the clay, which he seemed to try to dissolve in his mouth, with considerable satisfaction.

"Why, that horse is eating dirt!" said a passenger with some astonishment. "I never seen the like."

"No, I," said another man.

"Recall your gentlemen don't know much about horses," said a quiet man. "A horse," he went on, "knows as much as any animal about his own stomach, and if men knew as much as animals do they wouldn't if he can get a bit of grass with his dirt he takes it that way, but here in the city I suppose he must be glad to get the dirt clean. That's why that horse is eating that dirt."

"I don't pretend to know what they eat dirt for," the man went on, "but I know that they do eat it once in a while, and it must be for the good of their stomachs and that they know what they are doing."

"Animals is knowing things, and so is birds. A hen will eat clam-shells and crackle over them if you'll pound them up fine. A dog will hunt out certain herbs when he is sick. A cow knows when she wants salt as well as a man does, and it's the same way with any other animal except a man."—New York Mail and Express.

Wells in the Desert.

In the year 1857 the French engineer, M. Jus, demonstrated that that portion of the Sahara Desert included within the area of French Algeria contained large underground supplies of water, and the number of wells bored since that time in the departments of Algiers, Oran and Constantine amounts to more than 13,000. These wells vary from 100 to 400 feet in depth, and the pressure of the water forces it a couple of feet above the surface of the ground. It is then led into the vineyards, date trees and wheat fields. No fewer than twelve million acres of barren land have been made fruitful in this way, an enterprise representing perhaps the most remarkable example of irrigation by means of artesian wells which can anywhere be found. Algeria owes to this method of cultivation that it is becoming a most important wine-producing country, as may be gauged from the fact that it sent to France in 1896 10,500,000 gallons.—Chambers's Journal.

TEMPERANCE.

HOME AT LAST. A Hile child fair-haired, with wondering eyes.

Passed through an open door into the street. She wandered, lost in a land of sighs, and wept, "Is there no rest for weary feet?"

Deep in the dark—a door stood open wide, A light streamed from it brighter than the sun.

A mother's voice kept calling: "Here abide, Come home, my little one; you've lost your way."

A wretched man, forlorn, with matted hair, Stood in a crowd of sore, more beasts than men.

Deep curses rent the air, and dull despair, Suddenly reined in that accursed den, But high above it reverberated a sound, Clearer than sea-birds over roaring waves.

The voice of sea and woman! "Lost but not forsaken, my husband! Come, oh, follow me!"

A poor lost soul, cast down with wretchedness, Pained how was raging out his fatal knell; No one to pity, no one here to bless.

The parting hour of one who loved too well, Then suddenly a voice, "Oh, which is best? To live or die? Ever to sin or sigh? This voice eternal whispered: 'Come and rest!'"

Come home, sad soul, and rest eternally! Come home! —Clément Scott.

INSPIRATION TO TEMPERANCE WORK. Lady Henry Somerset told a Chicago audience how she had first been drawn into temperance work. She said she was a dressmaker, a boy and a girl, six years at her father's table, and heard the guests laugh at the boy to go to a drinker's grave. "She had seen the boy go to a drinker's grave," she said.

"But what became of the girl?" she went on. "The girl was happily married and strong, but the fatal seed had been sown ever. The young mother became a slave to drink. I prayed with her and wept with her. She asked me to pray for her, but I could not. When she died, I was left with a child who was a drunkard's child. ASARATOGA GO. MIRACLE.

HELPLESS FOR YEARS AND EXCLUDED FROM HOSPITALS AS INCURABLE.

THE REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE OF CHAS. QUANT AS INVESTIGATED BY AN ALBANY (N. Y.) JOURNAL REPORTER.—A STORY OF SUFFERING AND INTEREST.

ALBANY, N. Y. Journal, March 19th.

ASARATOGA, March 11th.—For some time past there have been reports here and elsewhere in Saratoga County of a most remarkable cure of a most severe case of locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis, simply by the use of a popular remedy known as "Pink Pills for Pale People," prepared and put up by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Morristown, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont.

It was to the effect that Mr. Chas. Quant, a well-known farmer, had been afflicted for eight years with a great sufferer from creeping paralysis and its attendant ills, and had become utterly powerless of all self-help, but by the use of a few boxes of the Pink Pills for Pale People, he was so fully restored to health as to be able to walk and do his usual work as of old.

The fame of this wonderful, miraculous cure was so great that the Evening Journal reporter thought it worth his while to go to Galway to call on Mr. Quant, to learn from his lips, and from the observation and testimony of his neighbors, if his alleged cure was a fact, or only an ungrounded rumor.

As he drove to Galway and spent a day and a night there in visiting Mr. Quant, getting his story and interviewing his neighbors, the reporter was so much impressed by the fact that Galway is a pretty little village of about 400 people, delightfully located near the center of the town of Saratoga, and about 17 miles from Saratoga Springs.

Upon inquiry the residence of Mr. Quant was easily found, and he was every body seemed to know and love him, and to be overflowing with surprise and satisfaction at his wonderful cure and restoration to health.

Mr. Quant was found at his pretty home, on a quiet street near the depot, and he was in response to a knock at the door it was opened by a man who, in reply to an inquiry Mr. Quant lived there and was at home, said "Yes, Mr. Quant lives here."

After a little general and preliminary conversation, and after he had been apprised of the purpose of the reporter's visit, he called upon him, and the reporter, after a long and interesting conversation, told the story of himself and of his sickness and terrible sufferings, and of the ineffectual treatment he had received, and of his cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and cheerfully gave assent to its use for publication.

He said: "My name is Chas. Quant, and I was born in the village of Galway, and, excepting while traveling on business and a little time in Australia, have spent my whole life here.
