Another reformatory nerons.

Among the questions which confront our lawmakers at Albany is the providing for another State Reformatory. The State Board of Charities recommends that Elmira Reformatory, which is overcrowded, be relieved by the erection of a new reformatory building in the eastern part of the State. The Board presents strong reasons in support of its recommendation, and it remains to be seen whether the Legislature will act in accordance therewith. The tax-payers of the Empire State may, however, well inquire why there is need of this additional reformatory, and what influences are at work to create an increasingly large number of wayward boys and young men with criminal tendencies. In the last analysis there is no doubt that the liquor license system of the State would be found largely responsible for these untoward tendencies. —New York Temperance Advocate. ANOTHER REFORMATORY NEEDED. for these untoward tendence Temperance Advocate.

WHAT DRINK BROUGHT HIM TO.

WHAT DRINE BROUGHT RIM TO.

The su lifed death of a man in a lodging-house in New York one night recently, brought to light something of the history of a remarkable man. The decease! was from a notable and wealthy family in Massachusetts; one which is recognise! as a leading family in this State. He was a cousin of the United States Senator and statesman, Charles Sumper and was a graduate of Harvard College and valedictorian of his c ass. For a number of years he was Superintendent of the Public Schools of Fail River, holding that position when the war broke out. He ealisted in a Massachusetts regiment and did valuable service on the field. He spoke seven languages fluently, and was equally wall educated otherwise. His death was brought about by an over indulgence in drink. For years he ha! been an intemperate man. This love of liquor was the cause of his wife securing a divorce from him; the cause of his son being appointed conservator over him; and the cause of his being ostracized by his friends and relatives. He was worth nearly $50,000 in his own name, but for years he had been compelled to work for any extra money he desired.

TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION IN ENGLAND.

During the series of enthusiastic and successful meetin is which Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard have been holding in the north of Eugland, a special gathering of school teachers took place at Middlesborough. Tais town is in the centre of the vast iron districts (the Euglish Pittsburg), where the effects of the terrible strike of list summer among the Durham coal miners is still visible. The population is almost entirely composed of the wage-earning classes, and the influence of the board or elementary school teacher is naturally a potent force for either good or ill. It was, therefore, with peculiar satisfaction that Miss Willard and Lady Somerset made this their first point of departure in their campaign in favor of the introduction of scientific temperance instruction in public schools. At least a hundred teachers were present—eight-tenths of whom were women—and, although the time was limited, a discussion of considerable animation followed and a resolution in favor of temperance instruction was carried. The ball has since been kept rolling by the letters full of suggestions which several of the teachers have written, and which, it is hoped, will tend to eluc-date the subject and adapt it to the English educational code.

The managers of the London Temperance Hospital recently had to decline, as part of a legacy left to the hospital, 216 bottles of very old wine and brandy, having no use therefor.

Folice statistics show that the arrests for drunkenness in London are at the annual rate of one to every 175 inhabitants, in Bir-mingham one to 153, in Manchester one to seventy-one, and in Liverpool one to fifty. Anchor Ice.

The "anchor ice" by which the steamer City of Boston was imprisoned in the Thames River, at Norwich, is one of the strangest of wintry phenomena It goes by various names. West of New England it is known as "alush ice," and abroad it is called "ground ice." It is not formed upon the surface of water, but collects on the beds of streams

This is the most remarkable thing about it. Many theories have been advanced to account for its formation. One scientist claimed that it was the result of radiation of heat from the river bed, and that it was deposited on the same principle as dew. Another stoutly maintained that it was produced by little spiculæ of hoar frost falling from the atmosphere into the water.

The most acceptable hypothesis, however, is that the whole body of water in which it is found is thoroughly chilled by a mechanical action of the currents of the stream, and that the anchor ice then naturally forms on the stones and other rough bodies at the bottom. After this general cooling of the water to a temperature in the neighborhand of thirtytwo degrees Fabrenheit, the anchor is will speedily coat a pole, for example, that is lowered into the stream. The nucleus having once been formed, the small masses of ice that cling by adhesion to the asperities of the river bed grow in size, and at length attain sufficient buoyancy to loosen their fastenings and rise to the surface. In doing this they frequently tear up small stones and clumps of gravel.

The anchor ice is clearly crystalline in structure, and in the water resembles a kind of fungus or vegetable growth. At times a stream will be seen full of little masses of anchor ice floating along near or at the surface. Its consistency is often very slight, so that if an attempt is made to grasp in the hand it readily melts and disappears. It is confined mainly to swiftly running streams hav-ing gravelly or stony beds, and it is a feature of the winter that proves troublesome chiefly to mill owners. It collects on the head gates of canals and on the racks at the entrances of flumes, and, if it is allowed to pass into a wheel pit, is liable to stop the wheel, as it effectually stopped the paddles of the steamer City of Boston in the Thames.—Boston Herald.

Cooking Becoming an Art.

"It will not be many years," said Mrs. S. T. Rover, of Philadelphia, who devotes her life to gastronomical affairs, "before cooking will form as important a department in the curriculum of our girl's public and private schools as mathemathics and geography. It is in fact on a par with any of the arts, and yet is the most neglected.

"In Philadelphia, Boston and New York it is taught, as it should be, in the normal schools, due attention being given to chemistry and hygiene. The chemistry of food should be thoroughly understood, and is by high priced, trained cheis. Women must be edu cated in cooking, and it is to my mind much more important than the higher accomplishments."-Washington Star.
