C. C. Barnes, of New Castle, has in his ossession a "Georaphy of the World" printed at Hartford, Conn., about 1800. It speaks thus of Pittsburg: "Pittsburg is on the west side of the Allegheny Mountains, between the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers about 320 miles from Philadelphia. A growing town in a pleasant situation. In 1767 it had a population of 700 hundred inhabitents." Of Philadelphia it says: "Philadelphia is the largest city in the United States," Of Lancaster, Pa., it remarks: "Lancaster is the largest inland town in America. It has a handsome Court House, a number of churches, about 1,000 houses, and has 5,000 inhabitants." The geography contains this: "There is a creek in the North part of the state called Oil Creek, on whose waters flows an oil similar to Barbadoes tar, and several gallons may be gathered in a day."
