JOHN F. CRAIG.

Our Republican Candidate for State Senator.

John F. Craig was born in a log cabin near the village of Sligo, Clarion county, Pa., May 8, 1832, and is a brother of the late lamented Col. C. A. Craig, of the 105th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, who died on the field of battle near the close of the war—a noble soldier and regiment, recruited in the several counties of this section and of which the Potomac army was proud.

Mr. Craig spent his early life driving team, working in his father's mill and attending a small country store. After receiving a common school education he entered Elder's Ridge Academy, under the instruction of the venerable Dr. Donaldson, and by teaching school in winter, at $16 per month, prepared himself to enter the Junior Class at Jefferson College in 1854 and graduated from that institution with Gen. James A. Beaver and others in the class of 1856.

He then became principal of an Academy in his own county and afterwards in Missouri, and began the study of law, and, entering the law office of the Hon. James Campbell, was admitted to the bar in 1858. He went south and engaged in the practice of his profession, but after the breaking out of the civil war returned home and embarked in business as a wool manufacturer. In 1876, in company with his father and brother, they erected the fine flouring mills at New Bethlehem, known as "Red Bank Mills," and also engaged in the mercantile business. To these pursuits he has devoted his life, in all of which he has been eminently successful and has proved himself a man of ability, energy and industry.

After embarking in the woolen business, he took off his coat, took hold of the machines himself, became thoroughly practical and produced a line of goods second to none. None enjoyed a higher reputation throughout his own and adjoining counties. Mr. Craig for years drove out with a wagon himself and distributed the product of his mills to farmers and others the best flannels, blankets, etc., that had come within their reach and none better since, as all will vouch, because they were honest goods and honestly made. Mr. Craig in turn bought all the wool that came within his reach, paying a fair price for it. But, his business growing larger from year to year, he increased his plant and turned his attention to the largest wholesale markets of New York and Pittsburg—in which he achieved an equally high reputation, being the manufacturer of the celebrated "Rose of Sharon Blankets," known in all counties of Western Pennsylvania.

The flouring mills with which he was connected acquired an equally high reputation, known as the best and among the foremost industries of Clarion and Armstrong counties, and of which they have always been justly proud.

His experience, his knowledge of the wants of the people, being a laboring man himself, a manufacturer and an educated man, make him a man of the people, for the people, and one who will make his mark in the Senate of the great State of Pennsylvania.

The death of General Nathaniel P. Banks, the once conspicuous politician and military leader, occurred at his home in Waltham, Mass., on Saturday morning last. Gen. Banks' great services to his country has made his name dear to the American people, in whose memory he will live for many generations.

WILLIAM C. ARNOLD,

Republican nominee for Congress in this District, composed of Centre, Clarion, Clearfield, Elk and Forest Counties.

The Twenty-Eighth District.

Aaron Williams of Bellefonte has received the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 28th district. This district is composed of the counties Centre, Clearfield, Clarion, Elk and Forest and stretches from the Susquehanna river on the east to the Allegheny river on the west. When the district was formed it was intended to take in all the invincible democratic counties in the central and western sections of the State. But the only way to hitch Clarion to it was to tie the little, staunch Republican county of Forest to this Democratic Juggernaut.

Time rolled on and the material interests of the district, under Republican administrations, were rapidly developed. Coal mines were opened which necessitated the building of railroads. A people full of enterprise and energy flocked into the district and built up such towns as "DuBois, Phillipsburg, Johnsonburg, Marienville and New Bethlehem. The Welsh, Scotch and Swede miners from Tioga county and other coal sections found plenty of work and good wages in this new field, and prosperity reigned on every hand. A Democratic president was elected, backed by a Democratic congress. Threats were made that the coal would be put on the free list. Operators became alarmed and began to restrict operations. The consumers of coal found that they did not require as much fuel as formerly. The tide turned. Wages were reduced and strikes followed.

Another election was held last winter. The great Republican protectionist, Hon. Galusha A. Grow, sought the votes of the electors of Pennsylvania that he might represent them in the lower house of congress. His competitor was James D. Hancock of Venango county, a pronounced free-trader. The miners and laborers of the 28th district concluded, that if the mere threat of free trade brought them to the verge of ruin the reality would surely complete their impoverishment. Consequently they voted for Grow and protection. At the election in November, 1893, the district gave 1689 democratic plurality. In February following Grow received 1963 plurality, a change of 3651 votes in less than four months. The name of the next congressman from this district will be Wm. C. Arnold, Republican, instead of Aaron Williams, Democrat.

Cleveland vs. Cleveland.

President Cleveland's letter of July 19 to Senator Wilson, and that of Aug. 27, addressed to Hon. T. C. Catehings, are slightly at variance on some rather vital points. Should he chance to be confronted at a single review with their divergent sentiments the shock might extort the sudden ejaculation of a party who some time ago found himself in a like dilemma and with a gaze said: "Where am I at?" High office at this stage of American progress and political exigencies will in no way screen the incumbent from such criticism as his language and public acts seem to justify. He cannot gaze through the cylinder of a political kaleidoscope and recite lessons from its projections of divers colors, its various delineations of proportion and recite healthy lessons of the day to those looking over his shoulders. Even though his hearers stand in plain view of his heavy weight, his words fail to convey the slightest conviction that they arise from personal experience touching home industries or honest motives. His letter to Mr. Wilson was a sort of preamble relating to a little of everything, yet more particularly designed to guide the action of the tariff builders on the article raw sugar. This now famous letter was the means of consummating his wishes and handing over to the Sugar Trust upwards of $40,000,000. His language employed in the affirmative on this question was as clear as the negative in his last. He says: "I do not believe that we should do evil that good come, but it seems to me that we should not forget that our aim is the completion of a tariff bill, and is taxing raw sugar for proper purposes and within teasonable bounds. Whatever else may be said of our action, we are in no danger of running counter to Democratic principles." In his recent letter to Mr. Catehings he says: "I cannot be mistaken as to the necessity of free raw materials as the foundation of a logical and sensible tariff reform. There is common habit of underestimating the importance of free raw materials and regarding them only as concessions to be made to our manufacturers. Their influence is so far-reaching that without them a beneficial scheme of tariff cannot be enacted. It will thus be seen that free raw materials and a just and fearless regulation and reduction of tariff would carry to every humble home blessing of increased comfort and cheaper living." The comparison of the two letters shows clearly enough that Mr. Cleveland holds the opinion that imported raw sugar is not raw material or else he had forgotten what he had written on July 19th, with reference to having this article taxed to liquidate a Democratic promise to pay. When forgetfulness crops in so brief an interlude, they had better be kept in embryo for an unborn generation. Free trade and free raw materials advocates stop too short in their rhetoric. Mr. Cleveland is now the party organ who should explain to the manufacturers how to proceed in keeping up wages and competing with outsiders at same prices for his raw materials as his foreign competitors, and in some instances higher cost of stock. Also post the millions forced to idleness where and how to obtain their funds for buying cheap goods.—Oil City Blizzard.
