

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

COUNTY. Treasurer, JAMES H. FONES. Associate Judge, JACK McCRAE.

The People's party held its State convention in Williamsport lately and nominated the following ticket: State Treasurer, George W. Dawson, Beaver; Superior Court Judges, Wm. C. Rheem, Venango county; J. H. Stevenson, Pittsburg; J. B. Young, Beaver; J. W. Allison, Erie; D. C. Coughlin, Luzerne.

In passing upon the appropriation bills, Gov. Hastings has dealt quite a blow at the Institution for Feeble Minded, in course of erection at Polk. He signed the bill, but excepted $250,000 appropriated for the construction and completion of a chapel, three double cottages and an industrial school, for which the Commission have an optional contract. The veto is made because of insufficient funds. Considering that Contractor Ralph's contracts for material, made before the recent large advance in prices, would enable him to complete the work according to the plans adopted, at a figure many thousands of dollars below what the State will have to pay under a new contract, it is false economy to defer the completion of the Institution, to say nothing of the urgent need of room and accommodations for the class of unfortunates for whom it is intended.—Franklin News.

EDITOR SMITH, of the Punx's Spirit, was a boy once, and with some of the rest of us thinks the "main chance" in the modern celebration of the glorious old 4th is lost sight of to a great extent. Hear him:

There was one thing lacking in our Fourth of July celebration. There were no speeches—no reading of the Declaration of Independence. The struggles of our Revolutionary ancestors were not retold. The bloody foot-prints of the heroes of Valley Forge were not shown to our youth, and there was nothing said of Israel Putnam or Ethan Allen, nor were any references made to Lexington and Concord and Bunker Hill. All this is old to you and I, and the eloquence of the parvenue orator who rehearses all this might be monotonous to us. But it was the delight of our youth, and thrilled us with patriotism and pride. To those old Fourth of July speeches we owe much of our love and loyalty to the flag. That custom should not be permitted to become obsolete. A Fourth of July celebration that does not make clear to our youth why we celebrate, inflame into their minds a little of the spirit of '76, and make them glad and grateful for liberty, proud of our institutions and of the achievements of our sturdy ancestors, does not accomplish its best purpose.

The Situation as It Is.

The Uniontown News-Standard so thoroughly sizes up the real status of the case in the following words that comment is unnecessary. There is not a Republican in the State who desires in the least to stand in the way of the Governor's desire to preside over the coming convention, but there are very few outside of Philadelphia and Allegheny who have any love for the Magee-Martin combine, or that will endorse the effort of that beautiful pair to stab Senator Quay. The article follows:

"There is a great amount of dust, wind and bluff in this business, which will hardly deceive anybody. As we have said before, there is no important party principal at stake in this contest, it being merely a struggle of ambitious city politicians to overthrow Senator Quay in order that they may themselves succeed to state leadership. If anybody prefers to risk the lead of this municipal combine to that of Senator Quay, he can do so without affecting his party status. As for the News-Standard, if it is compelled to choose between Senator Quay's leadership and that of the combine, it vastly prefers the former. In fact Senator Quay today stands as the hope of protection to the rural Republicans and the rural people against the aggressions of city spoilsmen whose record in the late legislature was not only a disgrace, but a menace to the future of the party in Pennsylvania.

"All this talk about holding up the hands of the governor is simply dust to blind the eyes of the people. Nobody is making war on the governor. It is the combine making war on Senator Quay. The combine are making a great ado about the failure to pass the apportionment. As we have said before, the apportionment should have been passed, but why did not the combine proceed to pass it? They had the speaker and the organization of the legislature. Why did they consume five months of the session in putting through their city jobs without ever attempting an apportionment?"

Thaddeus Stevens.

Thaddeus Stevens is one of the few great civil characters developed by the civil war that will grow in lustre on the pages of American history, long after many of the men who were engaged on the field and forum during that conflict, shall have been forgotten. He held the one civil position during the war that could be held only by pre-eminently deserving it. He was the great Commoner of the conflict.

Presidents, Cabinets, Senators and Representatives may be accidents, and even generals may come to lead great armies and achieve undying fame by accidental triumph on the field, but the Commoner of the four years' civil conflict, whose leadership was undisputed by any during all that period, filled the one office being confessed by all as "the leader of leaders."

Thaddeus Stevens was not only a picturesque figure in the most memorable civil conflict of modern times, but was one of the most unique characters ever developed in Pennsylvania politics. He was the founder of the free school system of our State, although a native of the chilly hills of Vermont, and it is undisputed that he won the final victory for the free education of the youths of our State by the most convincing and eloquent appeal ever made in the House of Representatives at Harrisburg. He was without wife or children, and his battle was solely for those who were strangers to his blood. In that great conflict against the prejudices of Pennsylvania he was entirely consistent with himself as one of the noblest philanthropists who enriched the annals of the Commonwealth by his achievements.

So strong were the prejudices of the people of Pennsylvania against general education aided by the State, that Mr. Stevens lost his re-election to the House on that single issue, but he never faltered in his great task and he was subsequently returned to his legislative duties by overwhelming majorities to complete the beneficent work he had inaugurated. While generally regarded as a man of radical views and aims, he was simply in advance of practical attainments in the best efforts of humanity, and the world has steadily progressed since his day until it has reached the full fruition of nearly every humane teaching he gave during his public career.

The history of a man like Thaddeus Stevens is full of romance, and yet he was one of the most stern and practical of all our public men. With his great record as the Commoner of the war students of history are familiar. Altogether his life is one of the most interesting studies the age.—Phila. Times.

NEWSY NOTES.

It is now proposed to devote the proceeds of the recent Warren centennial to the erection of a hospital rather than donating it to the library fund.

Judge Harry White, who during his first term of ten years refused all applications for license to sell liquor, has recently granted the petitions of three hotels in Indiana county.

Switt's livery stable at Franklin was burned on Sunday night last, and with it four valuable horses and large part of the rig, robes, etc., kept in the stables. Incendiarism is suspected. Loss about $3,500. No insurance.

By the death of his mother, Mrs. T. B. Hoffman, of Warren, Andy Ludlow, Warren's "Coal Oil Johnnie" comes into the possession of $100,000. Andy has already finished up about a million dollars and is the best known sport in the oil regions.

Electricity has, to a large extent, pushed the horse aside for draught purposes, and now comes the "horseless carriage" to end the uses of the noble animal for pleasure purposes. A road carriage propelled by electricity recently made the run between Paris and Bordeaux and return, a distance of 736 miles, at an average speed of fifteen miles an hour. A Chicago firm has just offered a prize of $2,500 for the best time made by a similar carriage on a proposed race from Chicago to Milwaukee—Franklin News.

The grape-growers in Erie county are of the opinion that about one-half the usual crop will be harvested this year, but they are not down-hearted over this fact. The price to be charged for grapes will be fully twice as much as was charged last year. The spring frosts proved most disastrous to many of the grape-growers, but some of the vineyards will show up half a crop. This is the opinion of the vineyard men, based on the present condition of the crop. In some localities the bunches seem to be hanging on the vines just as thick as the vines can hold. The bunches themselves seem to be fine ones. Where the frost was escaped, the amount promises to be above the average.
