—The philosopher of the Titusville World utters a very truth when he says that "those who have a good appetite for turkey on Thanksgiving Day, but do not have the turkey, have more occasion to give thanks than those who have the turkey but not the appetite. For the possessor of health every day of the year should be a Thanksgiving Day."

—Wilbur Grove returned yesterday with his crew of drillers from Clearfield county, where they have been engaged for the past four weeks in putting down a test well for parties in that section. —The last of the boatmen who left here over two weeks ago are just returning, having encountered a good many obstacles on their way to Pittsburgh—high wind, low water, etc.—but all got through without serious damage. Another nice flood came as a result of the rains of the past few days, which will allow of a general clearing up of all the boats and barges that were not in time to catch the previous flood. The present rise ought to make a "coal flood" in the Ohio, and allow the great fleets that have been tied up at Pittsburgh all summer to get down to the lower markets, in which event there will be general rejoicing all along the line.

NOTICE—All those holding "purchase tickets" and entitled to enlarged pictures free of charge, should bring the card and photo not later than this week if you wish the picture for Christmas. Miles & Armstrong.

—Tramps are getting entirely too numerous in these parts, scarcely a day passing that does not see a whole drove of them in town. This surfeit of bad rubbish is accounted for by the fact that neighboring towns are adopting means to rid themselves of the nuisance, such as building pens with stone piles for the gentry to exercise their muscles upon, and it might be well for Tionesta to adopt similar measures for their abatement. A good "hand-out" has no terrors for the festive hobo.

—The boarding house connected with the lumbering plant of Collins & Siggins, on the headwaters of Otter creek, Hickory township, and which is conducted by Charles Dotterer and his sister, Mrs. George Herring-ton, was totally destroyed by fire last Friday afternoon. The building was so quickly consumed that very little of the furniture or clothing was saved. Mrs. Herrington losing fifty dollars in money besides most of her clothes. We are without particulars as to cause of fire, or extent of loss.

—The down passenger train which arrives here at 12:10 met with an accident between Irvineton and Thompson's that might have proved serious, but which, fortunately only resulted in an hour's delay of the train. A broken flange on a wheel of the hind truck of the smoking car threw the trucks off the track, and before the train could be stopped it had run several rods on the ties, bumping and jostling the passengers promiscuously, and for a time creating quite a panic, but injuring no one. The disabled car was left, and the passengers transferred to the other coach.

—The statement has recently been made in several Sunday papers that Will Carleton is writing very little nowadays, and stays at home "nursing his health." The statement is true with these exceptions: Mr. Carleton writes more and lectures more than ever, has just published a book of new poems, has a book of prose nearly ready for the press, is in perfect physical health, and has been so almost intermittedly for the past ten years. Mr. Carleton will deliver two lectures during institute week in this place, and should be heard by all who can possibly make it convenient to attend.

—Orrie Metzger, a young man aged 21 years met with a painful accident at the Fogle Farm, Harmony twp., on Monday of last week. He was running the engine at one of the power houses on Col. Carter's place, when his clothing was caught by the key of the engine fly wheel and so tightly wound up that the engine was stopped. The young man was thrown in such a manner as to break one of his legs between the hip and knee, and was otherwise badly bruised. His cries brought help in time to perhaps save his life, as the steam was rising fast and the engine would soon have been under motion again.

—During his short stay in town last week, Editor Shick, of the Marienville Express, was thus impressed with the place: "Behind J. Scott Bell's sorrel driver we made a trip to the county seat the first of the week, our first trip to that town since becoming a resident of Forest county. We found Tionesta a pretty residence town, built along the river, with one street a mile and a half in length lined with neat residences and business places. The town has several good hotels, (where the large crowd of Marienville people who were down attending court were housed and well fed and cared for), two good printing offices, good stores, an excellent carriage shop, and best of all for the town—the county buildings. The court house, although not a new building, is substantial and comfortable, and the contractors have just completed a very substantial jail and sheriff's residence that cost the county about $16,000 and is a building that every citizen and taxpayer of Forest county can point to and speak of with pride. In a week or two we will print a cut and description of the new jail. We had always heard Tionesta spoken of as a 'sleepy town,' but there were enough people down from Marienville this week to give the place some appearance of life, and we enjoyed our short visit."

Death of an Estimable Lady.

After an illness of about four weeks, Mrs. Mary E. Landis died at her home in Barnett twp., Forest Co., Pa., of typhoid fever, on Oct. 31, 1895, aged 45 years, 7 months and 5 days. She was born March 26th, 1850, her maiden name being Mary E. Deford, and was united in marriage with Joseph R. Landis, March 18th, 1869. She has been a member of the M. E. church for a number of years, and died with the blessed assurance of a Heavenly home. She leaves a mother, a husband, and six children, together with a host of relatives and friends, to mourn her death, and as she peacefully passed away she requested her friends to meet her on the brighter shore, where death and parting are no more. Her remains were laid to rest in the Clarington cemetery, Nov. 2nd, 1895, the Rev. Mr. Stone officiating at the funeral.

LOCATION OF THE BUILDING.

The structure is located about fifty feet north of the Court House, and on a front line even with it, facing Elm street. It is built of brick with stone trimmings, and rests upon an excellent stone foundation. The Sheriff's dwelling is of a fine style of architecture, and presents a splendid appearance both in respect to beauty and solidity. The jail, which is at the rear on the east side, is constructed on the latest improved plans for prisoners. All plans for institutions of the kind in the State, conforming to all the requirements of heat, light and sanitation. So perfect is the plan in every detail that not a single inch of room is wasted, and the symmetry of the whole structure without and within must be pleasing to the most aesthetic eye.

THE JAIL.

The jail proper is thirty-three feet eight inches by forty-two feet eight inches, and save the iron bars that stretch across the windows on the three sides, would scarcely be thought sufficient to restrain the characters that are at times confined in a prison. But when one steps inside the outer corridor of the jail his views quickly change. The brick walls he saw from the outside are only a kind of veneering, as it were, and have practically nothing to do with keeping the prisoners in. They might rather be thought of as masonry to keep the prisoners' friends out. Inside this brick enclosure, and surrounded by a four foot corridor on every side, is a large steel burglar-proof cage, with upper and lower tiers. Each tier has a corridor six by twenty-four feet through the middle from east to west, dividing the large cage into six smaller ones, three on each side. These smaller cages are eight by fourteen feet and are separated from each other by solid steel partitions. This, as will be seen, gives twelve cages—six on each tier. The ends of the cages next to the central corridor are composed of steel bars, as are also the ends opposite; the partitions only being solid. This affords light, air and heat.

The upper tier is arranged a little differently. The outer corridor is removed, thus giving more room in each of the cells, which are closed in front giving more privacy to the inmates. These upper cells are intended for women and boys, and prisoners that could not be classed with criminals. The furnishing of these cells are rather more comfortable and convenient than the others, to suit the class of prisoners that will be confined in them. The upper tier is completely isolated from the lower tiers by a thick cement floor, the floor of the corridor being composed of iron and glass which admits light to the lower corridor. The floor of the lower cells consists of about eight inches of concrete, that is harder to dig through than stone, and on top of this is a solid sheet of half-inch steel. Water for washing and drinking purposes is supplied to each cell on the upper tier, but in the lower it is furnished at the end of the central corridor, and can only be operated by an attendant.

There is not a particle of wood within reach of the prisoners in the lower tier, even the bed or bunk is of iron, fastened by hinges on the partitions and swung into position by chains. All the steel in the jail is of the finest quality and is so tempered as to defy the drill, file or saw.

The entrance to the jail is from the south side next the court house, where one passes from a very neatly constructed porch into a small room known as the Sheriff's reception room. From this a large, heavy wooden door, with its massive lock admits one into the outer corridor of the jail, which is four feet wide and extends around the entire cage, between it and the walls of the jail. In this corridor the prisoners are never admitted, being used only by the attendants, from which they can have a full view of every part of each cage and from which also the prisoners' meals are served to them through apertures in the bars. This entirely prevents the escape of prisoners by overpowering the jailer and using his keys, which so frequently happens. A prisoner once placed inside the large cage is never outside of it, nor does the keeper need to go inside.

The lock on the cage, or of the door of the central corridor of the cage, is by no means the least interesting part. The locking apparatus, which is a combination lock, is at the one end of the door enclosed in a small case. It is so arranged that when the door of this case is closed the door of the cage is locked and it cannot be unlocked nor opened until the door of this case is opened. The door of this case is also well meddled with. In this case there is also an arrangement by which each cell door is opened or locked, so that there is never any occasion for any one to enter the corridor, which being 6x24 feet, furnishes abundant space in which the prisoners may take exercise. A stairway leads up from the Sheriff's reception room to a landing at the entrance to the corridor of the upper tier of cells, which is 28 ft. 10 by 38 ft. 2.

THE SHERIFF'S DWELLING.

The Sheriff's dwelling faces Elm street, and is entered through a handsome porch that opens into a large hall. This hall leads back to the Sheriff's reception room, but is shut off from it by a door, so that the jail and dwelling are practically separate.

To the right, upon entering the hall, a door opens into a parlor eleven feet six inches by fourteen feet two inches. To the left is the dining room fourteen feet by fifteen feet five inches, and back of this, on the east side, is a kitchen twelve feet one inch by thirteen feet two inches, floor of hard maple, with a large pantry attached. Leading up to the second floor is a handsome stair case of easy ascent with banisters and posts all of hard-wood and beautifully finished. On the second floor are four commodious and well lighted chambers and a bath room. In the attic are two more bed rooms of good size and pleasant. The wood work inside is of Georgia pine throughout, natural grain, with highly polished hand finish. The basement, which is large, contains a laundry thirteen feet six inches by twenty-eight feet ten inches, with water attachments, and the furnace, of the latest and best make, with which both jail and dwelling are heated. Natural gas is used for heating purposes and city water is used throughout the building.

The grounds around have been graded and terraced, and walks of Cleveland stone have been laid.

Altogether this new addition to the county buildings presents a most pleasing appearance. Architecturally it is a real ornament, and a credit to the county. As a place in which prisoners may be kept in security and receive humane treatment it meets with all the requirements of the nineteenth century prison reforms, and it is so substantially built of the kind used that it will stand for generations.

The total cost of the entire structure, including the grading of the grounds, walks, etc., will not exceed $16,000.

The erection of a new jail had become an absolute necessity, and had been recommended by many grand juries. Last winter the present board of County Commissioners set about to obtain plans and make preparations for it. After careful investigation they accepted the present plans, and the beautiful, substantial and serviceable structure that has just been finished proves the wisdom of their course.

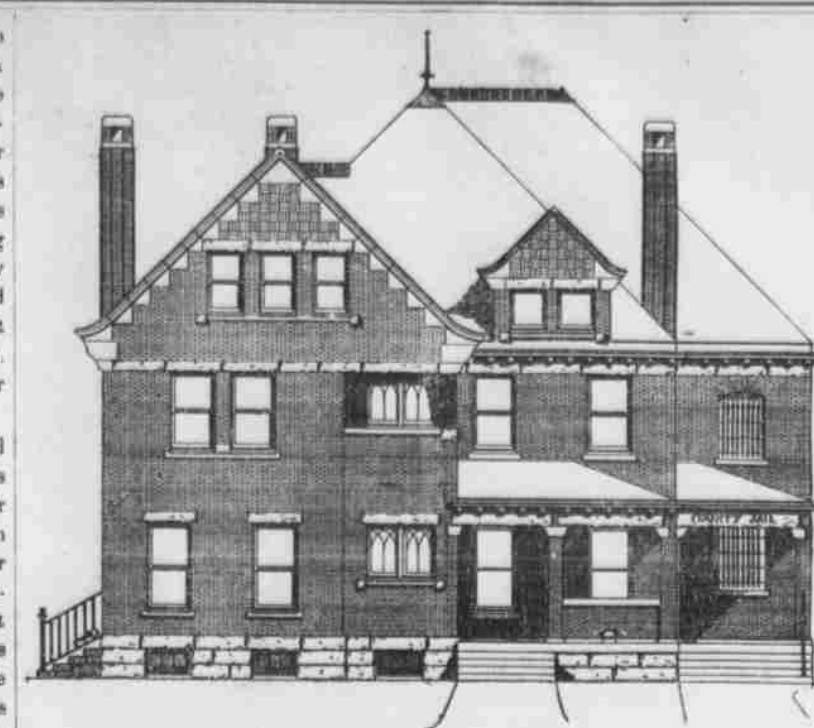

The contract for the construction of the building was let to the Van Dorn Iron Works Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, and by that company was sublet to W. L. Corrin, of Oil City. Mr. C. has faithfully performed his work, and to the minutest detail has fulfilled the exacting requirements of the original plans and specifications, the result being the completion of a jail which, competent judges declare, surpasses anything of the kind in the State.

—Miles & Armstrong are headquarters for overcoats, ulsters, dress suits and furnishings. When you can't find what you want go to them. They have it, and give your money back if not suited.

—Any person desiring first-class dental work done well do best to bear in mind that I will be in Tionesta for the week commencing on the first Monday of each month.

Forest County's New Jail and Sheriff's Dwelling.

We present to our readers this week a cut of the new County Jail and Sheriff's dwelling. While the cut by no means gives an adequate idea of the real proportions and dimensions of the structure, it will serve to aid in forming some conception of it.

LOCATION OF THE BUILDING. The structure is located about fifty feet north of the Court House, and on a front line even with it, facing Elm street. It is built of brick with stone trimmings, and rests upon an excellent stone foundation. The Sheriff's dwelling is of a fine style of architecture, and presents a splendid appearance both in respect to beauty and solidity. On motion of Comrade Parsons the thanks of the representatives were tendered to Comrade Albaugh for his energy and zeal in starting association, to which Comrade Albaugh responded with appropriate remarks. Other remarks were made by Knox, Morrow, Whitmore and others, to the effect that this organization would be an aid to the posts, and renew interest in the cause. That is Ohio in particular, the posts of counties marched together at encampments and it was a good regulation. On motion resolved that the Committees of the different posts of the county meet at Tionesta at Irwin's office on the 3rd Monday of May next to fix the time and place of the first reunion, and that the rules and regulations and three minutes be published in all the county papers. Adjourned in J. C. S. & L.
