The Rich Man's Money.

One of the standard arguments of the silverites is that gold is the money of the rich man.

This silver agitation originated with the mine owners. The Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, with headquarters in Washington, has just issued a statement giving a partial list of the men and corporations who are behind the free silver agitation.

And yet they tell us that free silver is the poor man's money.

If Jefferson could come back it would make him sick to read the stuff that is being talked by those who claim to be following his teachings.

REPUBLICANS should need no urging in regard to the matter of being registered in time to make sure of their vote this fall.

SECRETARY CARLISLE is not saying anything about his party and its ticket, but his son is declaring that Bryan is no Democrat and was not nominated by a Democratic Convention.

The first straw from Maine is that of the 187 newspapers in the State only nine are for Bryan and Sewall.

It is well to keep in mind the fact that the same party which four years ago was offering us free trade is today offering the "free silver" bait.

SPEAKER REED talks in the sensible style of a man who knows how to lose a nomination for the Presidency without forfeiting any of his devotion to his party or any of his zeal and power as one of its foremost champions.

MCKINLEY'S speeches to visiting delegations gain in excellence as they increase in number. That is to say, the principles that he advocates wear well, and his methods of presenting them appeals forcibly to the intelligence and patriotism of the country.

THAT SOME may be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence, is just encouragement to industry and enterprise. Let not him who is homeless pull down the house of another, but let him labor diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built.—Abraham Lincoln.

THOMAS B. REED, the man of Maine, was renominated for Congress Thursday for the tenth consecutive time, the Republicans of the First Maine District being satisfied to keep the man of their choice in Congress until they can see him placed in the Presidential chair.

THE resignation of Robert E. Wright as Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, giving as his reason that he cannot support Bryan and the Chicago platform, is the most serious loss to the Democracy that it has sustained for several days, it being remembered that just such big bolts are occurring almost daily since the Chicago convention adjourned.

In a letter published in 1892, Gov. Boies, of Iowa, predicted that the abolition of the Protective tariff would cause a permanent advance of not less than 30c on every bushel of wheat, 15c on every bushel of corn, and 2c to 3c on every pound of cotton.

SENATOR STEWART, of Nevada, was not always the representative of a special interest. On February 20, 1874, speaking in the Senate on the currency question, he said: "I want the standard gold, and no paper money not redeemable in gold."

A New Kind of Parity.

Watson & Gibson of New York are sending out the following fable in their latest market letter. It's a hard nut for free silverites to crack. The letter says: "One of the most distinguished bankers in this city sends us with the stamp of his approval a very amusing and instructive leaflet. It is a fable entitled 'Wise Men of Kansas,' and the scene is laid in the future. We cannot do better than to quote from it and thus give it additional circulation as a specimen of the clever literature which will be used by the Republicans in this campaign."

"Then the governor assembled the wise men in special session and thus addressed them: "Most noble, brave and mighty yeomen, our people grow. The burden is heavy upon them. Early and late they toil and eat the bread of disappointment and bitterness. Make ye laws for their deliverance."

"We are the greatest state in the union. We are big enough and rich enough to have a policy of our own regardless of what other states may do or may not do. Let us be patriotic. A Kansas policy for Kansas is the need of the hour. Wheat is hard to raise and the yield is light and uncertain; but we are great on corn. The notion that the price must be the law of supply and demand is a superstition by means of which the rich plunder and oppress honest toil. Make ye therefore a law in accordance with which sovereign and august statute corn shall be put upon a par with wheat. They shall be interchangeable bushel for bushel, and the price of corn shall be the same as the price of wheat. Do this, and the people of Kansas shall rise up and call you blessed, and all the world except the money lenders shall hail you as the emancipators of mankind."

"The wise men passed the law as the governor had advised and all the people of the state rejoiced, for their cribs were full of corn. They could hardly contain themselves till the governor had signed the bill which raised the price of Kansas corn from 15 cents to 45 cents a bushel. All the people now feel rich. They bought many luxuries and most of them went into debt. They wondered that they had never before found out that wealth was simply a matter of legislation, and they felt a great pity and contempt for the ignorant and superstitious people of other states. Then the farmers from the other states began hauling their corn to Kansas. Long lines of wagons came winding along every road. Boats floated it down the rivers and railroads rushed it in from every section of the country. It seemed as if the country was all corn and it was all headed for Kansas. The people of Kansas took their medicine, that is, they took the corn and gave up their wheat."

"The farmers of the other states thought the Kansas people queer, but they kept bringing them their corn. Corn came in and wheat went out. And besides all the Kansas people had gone to raising corn because it was more easily produced than wheat and was to bring just as much in the market as wheat, for the wise men had decreed that it should. It was not long until Kansas had all of its own and nearly all of its neighbors' corn."

"When the other states saw this vast accumulation and knew that it must sooner or later come onto the market, the price of corn began to decline till it could be purchased anywhere, except in Kansas, for 10 cents a bushel. In Kansas the price was still 45 cents, which was the price of wheat, but there were no buyers. Neither would anyone exchange wheat for their corn. When the autumn came the Kansas people did not have any wheat for seed. Then they sent to the neighboring states and implored the farmers to exchange wheat at a parity with corn. But the farmers said: 'We will exchange one bushel of wheat for four and one-half bushels of corn.' 'Our law,' replied the Kansas people, 'puts corn and wheat on a parity. They are equal for our wise men said they should be.' And the farmers replied: 'Your wise men are asses; let them eat your corn.' So the Kansans went back home, and all their people were in despair."

"The more corn they had the less it was worth, and they had nothing but corn. Day by day the times grew harder. The governor again assembled the wise men and said to them, 'Most consummate, picturesque and glittering gold-darned fools. There is but one bigger fool than yourselves. It is he that now addresses you.'"

"We thought we could bluff the everlasting law of supply and demand with our statute. We thought we could legislate value into a thing and make our people rich by a law. We thought we were patriotic. We were idiots. Let us honestly acknowledge our assiduity, repeal our old law, get back into line with the other states, and imagine no more that we are wiser than the world."
