The Late Hon. Lewis Arner.

In chronicle the fatal accident to ex-Judge Lewis Arner last week, by being struck by the pilot of a freight locomotive near Hunter station, we were unable, owing to lack of time, to give any sketch of his busy career extending over a period of nearly eighty years.

—Will Craig has been stationed at Parker, Pa., in the largest pump station in the country. It seems that the N. T. Co. are favorably impressed with our young friend, and as he is an honest, steady good fellow, we would not be surprised, a few years hence, to hear of him as one of the leading officers of the company.

—S. S. Canfield has sold his famous cow to Col. J. J. Carter, and she was taken to Riverside Stock Farm, at West Hickory, on Monday. The bovine was weighed just before she was taken away and she tipped the beam at 1,345 pounds. This is the cow that gave birth to the monstrous calf, last spring, weighing 1241 pounds at birth.

—Amser is always "to the fore" with something new. In the near future it is his intention to start a news stand in connection with his store and he will handle all the standard weekly and monthly story papers and magazines, as well as a full line of up to date novels. Persons wishing to subscribe for any publication can leave their order now.

—One of the unfortunate things for the average man is the fact that he gets most of his valuable experience at the wrong end of life. Just about the time he has accumulated enough information about life and how to run things he finds himself at the end of the race. If the whole thing could be reversed and he could have his experience to start on he would make things hum.—Ez.

—The postal authorities say that any reduction of the size of a postal card by clipping, rounding off the corners or otherwise will subject the receiver of the card to a charge of one cent on delivery. Many persons inclose postal cards that correspondents in envelopes too small, and then imagine a little clipping will not make any difference. Others round off the corners for convenience.

—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dryar, who live on Hunter run, two miles from Tionesta, were called upon to mourn the death of their little daughter, on Sunday evening last after a short illness. The little one was aged 14 months. Funeral services, conducted by Rev. Buzza, were held on Monday afternoon. The afflicted parents have the sympathy of all their neighbors in their sorrow.

—The first Quarterly meeting of Tionesta charge will be held in the M. E. church commencing on Friday evening at 7:30. Presiding Elder C. O. Mead will preach. Love Feast on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, followed by preaching at 11 o'clock by the Pastor. Sunday evening at 7:30 Presiding Elder Mead will preach. Rev. Buzza will commence a series of meetings at the M. E. church on Sunday evening.

—Adjutant General Stewart has secured quarters for Governor Hastings and staff at the Arlington Hotel, Washington, during the week of the inauguration of President-elect McKinley. It is not yet settled whether the whole division of the guard will take part in the exercises. The Adjutant General will consult Major General Snowden and other general officers as to whatever conclusion is reached by them will be endorsed by General Hastings.

—Our old friend John N. Heath, who is stopping at Haynie, Clarion county, at present, came in one day last week and secured a "license to wed" of Register Arner. John didn't let his friends into the secret as to just when the happy event was to take place, but we venture to say they would all be delighted to "dance at his wedding." We join his large circle of Forest county friends in extending congratulations and best wishes in advance.

—A number of the ladies of Geo. Stow Relief Corps attended a banquet given by the Tidoult Corps to Mrs. Boyden, State President, last Saturday evening, at which they were royally entertained. Among the number were Mrs. J. L. P. Craig, Mrs. S. D. Irwin, Mrs. J. P. Grove, Mrs. Dr. Morrow, Mrs. C. M. White man, Mrs. L. Agnew and Mrs. L. J. Hopkins. Stow Corps will be inspected this Wednesday evening by Mrs. Charlotte Cummings, of Tidoult, on which occasion Mrs. Boyden will also be present.

—Mr. R. O. Carson of Nettilton, Pa., met with a most painful accident on Monday. In stepping off a wagon he tread upon a round stick which rolled under his foot in such a manner as to throw his right ankle out of joint, leaving the foot turned squarely out. In this condition he was brought to town and Dr. Morrow summoned, who, with the assistance of Dr. Bowman, was obliged to administer an anesthetic before the foot could be replaced. The hurt is a very severe one, and will not only lay Mr. Carson up for several months, but will probably cause him much annoyance for years to come.

—Proper Bros. have begun drilling on a well near Hemlock creek, not far from the wells put down by them last fall. The Tionesta Gas Co. finished another fairly good gasser in the Hemlock field last week, Grove Bros. doing the work. J. B. Hagerty expects to finish the well he is drilling for the company in the same district within the next week. He has had considerable bad luck since starting this well. It is reported the Tidoult Citizens Gas Co. struck another good well in the Queen run district, Hickory twp., a day or two ago. Fifteen barrels an hour is said to be the size of it.

—In the annual report of the forestry commission of Pennsylvania, William Findlay Shunk, the well-known civil engineer, treats of the water sheds of the Commonwealth, wild lands from which forest reserves may be selected, and the influence of woods on the flow of streams. He says that not more than 90 per cent. of its territory is drained by the Delaware, Susquehanna and Ohio rivers, and that about one-third of the aggregated water sheds of these streams, including those portions which drain into Pennsylvania, lies up stream from us, and beyond our jurisdiction in contiguous states.

—"The slopes and summits of our water sheds," says Mr. Shunk, "as far as I have seen them, are in fair condition—road ditches, torrent channels and legacies excepted." Col. Shunk suggests that the purpose of establishing forest reserves the State purchase 5,000 square miles of land in Wayne, Pike, Monroe, Carbon, Luzerne, Lackawanna, Wyoming, Columbia, Sullivan, Freng, Potter, Clinton, Cameron, Elk, Clearfield, Centre, Forest, Union, Snyder, Huntingdon and Milbun counties.

The Late Hon. Lewis Arner.

When I published this week the following sermon, delivered by Rev. J. V. McAninch in the Tionesta Presbyterian church, Nov. 8, 1896. It is a timely discussion of an important but much neglected subject.—Ed.

TEXT: "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones."—Matt. xviii, 10.

When I was visited upon by a committee from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and invited to speak along the line of a sermon preached some time ago, on "Train up a child in the way he should go," under circumstances that would give it a more extended hearing, I consented for various reasons. First, because of the personal interest I have in children and in that which pertains to their welfare, and also because of the real pleasure I have found in working with them. I can conceive of nothing more ennobling, more elevating in its character, nothing more filled with positive delight and enjoyment than the watching over and directing the development of the child life in its progress from helpless infancy to the man of full grown stature and power; watching over it as the gardener does the bud of his choicest flower as it swells and bursts into the beautiful rose, keeping it free from the hurtful insect, watching it when the rain falls, turning it to the light that it may receive its richest color and fragrance. So the child life is like the tender bud of rarest flower over whose development we watch with a delight and fascination intensified by the thought of the immortality enshrouded which may burst into the lovely blossom to be transplanted into the Paradise of God.

I consented also because child life is so precious. Not only because it is so brief; not only because "we shall never pass this way again," but because "as the twig is bent the tree is inclined."

Usefulness and happiness in this world and the destiny in the world to come are not determined, I believe, at an age much younger than is generally believed. Each one knows from his own experience how potent are the influences of childhood for good or evil; how deeply imbedded in the human mind those first impressions of life are, how strong the force of those early acquired habits. It has been said that the effect of the first seven years' training of a child will never be overcome in after life, and some one has fixed eight years as the time when a child has learned half he will ever know. To what extent these data are accurate all may not agree, but they are at least approximate and serve to indicate the wonderful responsibility, opportunity, and real importance of this early period of life, and to impress upon the minds of those into whose care "God's little ones" have been placed, with a sense of the obligation resting upon them in aiding and directing this development, and in the formation of such characters that shall be honoring to God and a blessing to humanity.

Then again, I consented because I thought something of this kind might be needed and that I might be able to offer some suggestion that might be helpful, or at least awaken thought on a subject which is of such supreme importance. While I confess my lack of experience in one phase of the practical side of this subject, and so may not be able to speak so intelligently as others might do, yet personal experience is not always necessary in order to observe a defect and suggest a remedy. But there is a phase of the subject with which I am familiar and upon which I can speak from experience. Ten years of practical work of teaching in schools of all grades up to college proper has opened my eyes to the possibilities of child life, and the great lack of understanding, or else negligence, which is scarcely less, if not altogether, criminal, in the care and direction of those powers which in so short a time will form a character that is practically unchangeable. So from my own experience as an educator of children, from my own observation, which I believe to be at least equal in keenness to the average; from a heart in active sympathy with children, feeling deeply the weight of the responsibility of these early years, and realizing how much might be done that is not, I address you on this subject.

1. Let us notice first why this subject does demand, and should command a deep interest on the part of everyone whether he is in close contact with child life or not.

A child does not, and can not realize the full significance of the present in its relation to the future. He lives each hour for what the hour brings him and passes on into the next carrying with him his influence. There is but little opportunity for choice even if the power to choose wisely were given him. There is no recourse left but to take at the hands of others what they see fit to give him. His environment,—physical, moral, intellectual and spiritual—is all made for him. So without the knowledge of the value of the present, or the power to choose or change his surroundings his character is being unconsciously and unalterably fixed for him. His very weakness and helplessness appeals to us for aid.

"A child crying in the night" With no language but a cry, it is not more helpless in need of maternal care than is this same child when he becomes able to express himself intelligently and to go where he will, in need of some one to direct the latent powers of his being along those lines that will issue in his highest and best development of strength and usefulness. He was a keen observer of human nature who first discovered that "the child is father to the man," for so it is readily seen by every one whose attention has been called to it. What the child is so will the man or woman in all probability be. This is a principle recognized everywhere. The tender shoot intended for the lawn or garden is cared for from the beginning of its life; for should it become crooked or gnarled then its beauty as well as usefulness is destroyed, and it lives a dwarfed, scraggy thing, a embarrassment of the ground. The man who has a valuable soil is most careful about its planting, that it has not spoiled in the breeding. If it is badly handled at the point and burst to be weeds, to kick and run away, it is never safe thereafter, and its value is very greatly diminished. And so it is with the child. A training that develops only the worst elements of his nature, or fails to bring out the higher and better, but developing a character that will be vicious in its influence, or at the best will be a poor, worthless thing. It has been shown by repeated investigations that the number of those who become profiting christians do so largely before reaching their twentieth year, and that the percentage of those who become so later rapidly decreases with the passing years. Since such is clearly seen to be the influence of childhood upon the whole of the subsequent life it seems strange that more attention is not given to the training of the plastic mind during its formative period. It does sometimes seem as if parents, guardians and teachers exercise a care and wisdom in the training of plants and animals that are not shown toward the children. While these are anxiously watched over and their needs supplied the children are left to grow up as best they can, pick up what comes to them, and oftentimes vastly more attention is given to the adornments of the body than the furnishings of the mind and soul. Assuming then that the life of every man and woman receives, in a very large measure at least, its shaping and influence in childhood, this subject of child life and its development ought to command the attention of all.

1. That of the Politician. I do not now for the ward-healer, or the man who will perjure his soul for the price of his vote. But of him who studies the needs and prosperity of his country; the statesman, to whose knowledge, wisdom and skill is committed the administration of the affairs of government; who seeks its best interests in the choice and use of all things that tends in this direction, and the abolition of all that is injurious.

As the peace, prosperity and permanency of a nation depend, under God, upon the character of its citizens, it must be evident that every vicious character within its domain is to that extent a menace, and just to the extent the lawless, the criminal and the vicious increase in population is the destruction of the nation threatened. Such a condition exists to almost an alarming degree today. True, it is a minority; the better element controls. But if such conditions continue and this undesirable class increases in number what the result will be is not difficult to foresee! What shall be done with such people is a serious question already demanding a solution. That they can not be expeted nor all shut up in prisons is evident. And even if this were done it would afford only temporary relief, for a new generation is constantly coming up to take the place of those who pass away. The only solution that is practical and permanent is to take the children and make useful citizens of them.

The sum element of the tenement districts of our cities is nothing more nor less than a training school for wicked and desperate characters; which places find a counterpart on a less extensive scale in many smaller towns and country districts. What could be expected of children growing up in the midst of all this misery, squalor and wickedness of such places? Their childhood ears hear nothing but the low, profane and vulgar speech of their associates; their eyes never behold anything but the filth and obscenity of their miserable homes; and their tongues and hands and feet never move but at the impulse of a depraved nature made worse by its environment. With the children of such parents, growing up under such conditions of early life, to hope for better things from the coming generation is a vain wish. This question for the politician of to-day is not so much what to do with the unscrupulous and vicious class of today, but what shall be done to protect his children from such influences and to train them up to be useful citizens.

2. Then this subject should interest the Philanthropist. His purpose is the alleviation of human suffering. But human misery and woe arise, in a large measure, from vice and crime. The helpless, homeless, suffering innocents that call out the sympathy and help of the heart, whose cry constantly goes up to heaven and whose condition must melt the eye to tears, is the result of the misdirected lives of those who might have been a blessing and comfort instead of a curse to humanity. Let the charitable hand of philanthropy be stretched out to the nurture and direction of child life and its objects of pity will become less numerous.

3. This commands the attention of the Reformer. This is an age of reform. The air is full of it. Society is filled with a fanaticism tending to its end. Reclaming reforms, are among the most familiar terms one hears and no one will deny the need of such work. The inebriate, the gambler, the criminal; the vicious reformer, the sinner reclaimed. To think for a moment of the vast outlay, of money, energy and labor; the founding of homes for their maintenance; the sum spent in various kinds of cures; the labor put forth in order to restore to a place among men those who have forfeited this privilege, is enormous. Look at the church, for instance! What ought it to be? An organization on whose rolls should be found the name of every adult at least, and where each should take his place and do his work for Christ, but what are the facts? The church is spending its energy almost solely in seeking to win those who were born within the pale of the church, and who should be in it. Let the church and every reformer and reclamer of every sort direct more energy toward the development of a noble, true and pure manhood and womanhood, and I have faith to believe that the need of the work of these reforms as now conducted, will in a large measure, pass away.

4. But most of all is this a subject of intense interest to Parents. To them God has committed the care of these little ones who are indeed a part of their own being; for whom no sacrifice is too great to make, no burden too heavy to bear. The whole soul of the parent naturally goes out to the child; for it is the love and mother; its misdoings and failures are its greatest sorrows, its success its greatest joy. Into their hands God has personally given the training of these little ones for his glory, for such is man's chief end. That these lives may fulfill their purpose in this life and reap a reward in the next, the great should be the devotion to those early years which, in the years to come, are to wish so great an influence.

MARRIED.

WEIBER-SMITH—At Hotel Agnew, Tionesta, No. 30, 1896, by Rev. R. A. Buzza, Mr. George Weiber, of Leeper, and Miss Laura Smith, of Scotch Hill, both in Clarion county, Pa.

—Mrs. Weiber's honeymoon was at 50 cents, at Miles & Armstrong's. II.

How is Word of an Attack of Croup. In speaking of this much dreaded disease, Mr. C. M. Dixon, of Pleasant Ridge, Pa., said "I have a little girl who is troubled from nearly during the winter months with croupy ailments. When ever the first symptoms occur, my wife gives her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and the result is always prompt and satisfactory. This remedy is used by thousands of mothers throughout the United States, also in many foreign countries, and always with perfect success. It is only necessary to give it freely when the child becomes hoarse or as soon as the croupy cough appears and all symptoms will promptly disappear. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by G. W. Boyard.

Soothing and not irritating, strengthening and not weakening, small but effective—such are the qualities of DeWitt's Little Early Riser, the famous little pills. Heath & Killmer.

The old lady was right when she said, the child might die if they waited for the doctor. She saved the little one's life with a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. She had used it for croup before, Heath & Killmer.

The length of life may be increased by lessening its dangers. The majority of people die of lung troubles. These may be averted by promptly using One Minute Cough Cure. Heath & Killmer.

To cure old sores, to heal an indolent ulcer, or to speedily cure piles, you need simply apply Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is a simple and safe remedy, its application is simple and its results are rapid. Heath & Killmer.

Save Throat Quickly Cured. Not long ago in speaking of sore throat and the difficulty frequently experienced in curing it, Mr. J. C. Thomas, of Uniondale, Pa., told how he had often cured it in his family. "We give it in our own words: I have frequently used Chamberlain's Little Early Riser, and it cured my sore throat and I have effected a speedy cure in every instance. I would not think of getting along in my home without it." DeWitt's Little Early Riser, which cures colds, sprains and bruises. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by G. W. Boyard.

The old way of delivering messages by post-boys compared with the modern telephone, illustrates the old tedious methods of "breaking" roads compared with the modern instantaneous cure with One Minute Cough Cure. Heath & Killmer.

Sorely eruptions on the head, chapped hands, on lips, on the breasts, on the face, on the neck, are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is all present the article most used for piles, and it always cures them. Heath & Killmer.

During several years residence in the far west, I had many opportunities for observing the worst kind of cases of Chamberlain's Cough, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Its efficacy was demonstrated in the alluvial regions, where the water problem is a serious one. I have seen the attack when all other remedies failed. I repeatedly saw the greatest distress from diarrhoea cured in a few minutes. I used the remedy on all such cases with the most satisfactory results, and can recommend it for the complaints for which it is indicated. H. V. Witham, editor of the Republican, Pottsville, Pa. This remedy is for sale by G. W. Boyard.

Absolutely pure, perfectly harmless, and invariably reliable are the qualities of One Minute Cough Cure. It cures coughs, colds, croup and lung troubles. Children like it because it is pleasant to take and it helps them. Heath & Killmer.

"Excuse me," observed the man in speaking of his own success, "and it is not where the liver is." "Never you mind where the liver is," retorted the other, "if it was in his big toe or his left ear the DeWitt's Little Early Riser would reach it and shake it for him. On that you can bet your gizzards." Heath & Killmer.

—Any person desiring first class dental work done will do well to bear in mind that I will be in Tionesta for the week commencing on the first Monday of each month. R. H. Stillman.

—New winter shoes for all at Miles & Armstrong's. II.

A NEW DEPARTURE!
