President's Message on Cuba.

President McKinley sent to Congress Thursday a brief but possibly momentous message. It is expressed in few words, dispassionate but direct, and refers to our duty as a nation to afflicted Americans residing in Cuba. These citizens have been compelled to leave their homes by a military order, and concentrate in camps where they are insufficiently fed and sheltered, and where disease and hunger are doing a deadly work. The President calmly states the fact, remarking that the local authorities in Cuba are unable to relieve the wants of our citizens if they would. Congress is therefore asked to appropriate not less than $50,000 for the relief of these citizens by furnishing them supplies, and also enabling them to return to the United States if they desire to do so, and lack the necessary means. "The agricultural classes," the President says, "have been forced from their farms into the nearest towns, where they are without work or money." It is a simple statement, but involves much of importance by implication. Simple as are the words, and confined to the mere mention of a fact, they bring Spain face to face with the truth that her military policy in Cuba is cruel and unusual. The condemuation of the policy is within itself, and not in providing for its results affecting the lives of our own citizens. Gen, Weyler's military system .- Philla.
