

HANNA ALL RIGHT.

If there is no change in the situation when the Ohio legislature meets in joint session to-day at noon, Mark Hanna will be elected to succeed himself in the United States Senate for both the long and the short term.

The vote in separate session yesterday resulted in his favor, being 56 in the House, and 17 in the Senate, just the necessary 73 votes to elect.

ARNOLD FOR CONGRESS.

Under the above heading the Du Bois Courier, published at Mr. Arnold's home, and a staunch friend of our able Congressman, says:

Various newspapers of the State have been discussing for some months candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, and among them the name of our townsman, the Hon. W. C. Arnold; but it has lately been rumored that he would not be a candidate for Governor, but would seek the nomination for Congressman-at-Large.

"We do not assume to lead in expression in this matter, but we should like to see Mr. Arnold become a candidate again in this district. The party is with him and he can obtain the nomination by simply saying that he will accept. He is able, industrious, courageous, as an official and has shown that he is the strongest man who has yet been nominated in the district, having carried it twice against an adverse majority of 4,000.

"The Hon. Galusha A. Grow has had two terms as Congressman-at-Large and, at his advanced age, 75, could well give way to a man like Mr. Arnold, who is in the prime of physical and intellectual vigor."

A Department of Fiddlesticks.

Lafe Pence, who achieved some notoriety as a Congressman from Colorado, is heading for Washington to try to secure the establishment of an other Cabinet place to be known as the Department of Mines. The United States has about as much occasion for a Department of Mines as it has for a Department of Dogs' Hind Legs, but some geniuses can discover a need of almost anything at Washington if a little as needs grinding, or a private enterprise can be helped along by government exploiting. Mining is no part of the business of government, even if Colorado does produce from her mines a product equal to the buckwheat crop of the United States.

The slayer of Minnie Williams and Blanche Lambert paid the penalty of his crime at San Quentin, California, on Friday last, and as one paper puts it, it will now be in order for those thirsty sensationalists to hunt around for evidence to prove that Durrant was not guilty. He will not bother any further about it himself, neither will it do him any good now to be proven guilty, and it will furthermore be a pretty hard task to convince many people that he did not do the cold-blooded butchering of the two young girls.

The readiness of a renegade Republican state chairman for a deal with Democrats is distinctively illustrated in Ohio.

Care and Training of Children.

ESSAY BY MISS IDA LEBERGER, Read before the Farmers' Institute, Dec. 11, 1897.

I think I see you smile, because I have undertaken to write on the subject of children. Methinks I hear someone say "she is too young to write on the subject." But dear friends, by reading and studying we can gain a great deal of knowledge and valuable information, which has cost some one a great deal of time and labor; thus you see we can inform ourselves on subjects which interest us. True, I have not had the experience of the care and training of children that some of the older ladies present here this evening have had, but I love little children, therefore I gladly accept this opportunity to advance my ideas, which may be meagre, on the care and training of children. Of all the grave responsibilities laid upon us that of training little ones is the greatest. Sometimes I think we do not comprehend the greatness of the work nor how far reaching its results may be. We surround the little lives with influences that aid in moulding their characters and we install principles that shall grow with their growth and make of them virtuous, honorable and christian men and women.

Under the above heading the Du Bois Courier, published at Mr. Arnold's home, and a staunch friend of our able Congressman, says: "Various newspapers of the State have been discussing for some months candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, and among them the name of our townsman, the Hon. W. C. Arnold; but it has lately been rumored that he would not be a candidate for Governor, but would seek the nomination for Congressman-at-Large. Hence a few days ago we interviewed him and learned that he would not seek the gubernatorial nomination, while as to Congressman-at-Large, he informed us that he was considering the question and would probably make the fight for the nomination. He also stated that he had had two terms as Representative of the Twenty eighth district, and others might think they should have a chance.

"We do not assume to lead in expression in this matter, but we should like to see Mr. Arnold become a candidate again in this district. The party is with him and he can obtain the nomination by simply saying that he will accept. He is able, industrious, courageous, as an official and has shown that he is the strongest man who has yet been nominated in the district, having carried it twice against an adverse majority of 4,000. However, if he seeks the nomination for Congressman-at-Large he would not ask more than he deserves, and Clearfield county is certainly entitled to it, as the Republican within our knowledge, from this county, has never had a place on the State ticket."

"The Hon. Galusha A. Grow has had two terms as Congressman-at-Large and, at his advanced age, 75, could well give way to a man like Mr. Arnold, who is in the prime of physical and intellectual vigor."

Lafe Pence, who achieved some notoriety as a Congressman from Colorado, is heading for Washington to try to secure the establishment of an other Cabinet place to be known as the Department of Mines. The United States has about as much occasion for a Department of Mines as it has for a Department of Dogs' Hind Legs, but some geniuses can discover a need of almost anything at Washington if a little as needs grinding, or a private enterprise can be helped along by government exploiting. Mining is no part of the business of government, even if Colorado does produce from her mines a product equal to the buckwheat crop of the United States. But she does not produce as much in value as the hens of Pennsylvania or the sausage grinders of Ohio. Mines are all right in the ground, or on the side of a hill, but there is no more occasion for a Department of Mines under the Federal government than for a Department of Sauerkraut and Weinstock or a Department of One-Eyed Bull Pups. The gentlemen who want the government to be godfather and promoter of every orphan idea and project that turns up need to be flagged.

be very pleasant and at the same time very instructive. Home is the true soil where virtue grows; if this is miserable, worthless and unprincipled; a place rather to be avoided than entered, and this is where the child's character is being moulded, alas! what can be expected? The events of the household are nearer and more effecting to us than any other. This being the case, make home worthy of the little ones, who are of another world—travelers from a land of beauty. Another great mistake we find many parents make in their children, they do not let them think for themselves. Stand back a little and let them think and act out their own nature; it will help them to develop a firmer manhood and womanhood by teaching them the fundamental law of success and self-reliance; do not be continually doing the thinking for them, and teach them to think and act as you do; ask their opinion on subjects discussed in your homes, and you may be surprised at the depth of thought and consistent reasoning they often display. Children are naturally retentive and with proper care they need never lose this faculty; not a day should pass without something being mastered by the mind. It has been said that a poor memory is the greatest trouble some children have; now this should be cultivated; parents should never fail to feed the intellect and hunger of the child. Some little ones are not allowed to speak in company, and we are told "children should be seen, not heard." My ideas are not such. Children are often well worth hearing; their thoughts are fresh and original. It is pleasant for the child to know that it can help entertain and in so doing it will develop these faculties and become a useful member of society. I fancy I hear some mother say, "I should never have a chance to visit myself if I gave the children that opportunity." Now if you will teach your children true politeness as every mother should, I think you will have no trouble in having them interrupt others who are in conversation. Sometimes I think we are not sufficiently respectful to children. If we wish them to be respectful we shall have to practice it ourselves; no sight is so rare and yet so beautiful as to see a parent polite to a child. It is sometimes annoying to answer their thousand and one questions, yet we should do so if possible. This is the only way they have of gaining knowledge while they are so young. Above all else in the world, teach your child Christianity; never let them grow tired of God or aught that belongs to Him. Never let them forget that He is a prayer-hearing God, and that they can bring their troubles and joys before their dear Jesus, whom they quickly learn to love. Do not fail to read them stories of the Bible and particularly that sweetest tale of the wondrous Christ story. Never allow the little child to pass off into the dream land without first offering its little prayer. The effects of these will be wonderful; more than we can imagine. It will go with them in after life. And now just a few words to mothers, who, in the fullness of generous love, run hither and thither to do for the various members of the family those things which they should do for themselves. Children should not make a slave of their mother any more than she should make a slave of them, and she will not be regarded with one whit more love or reverence by sacrificing herself wholly to them. Children like to be useful and to feel that there is pleasure in helping, and not to regard it as something they must do and often receive no credit for, where if a little praise is given them they will learn to enjoy helping mama, and in after years will feel that half the pleasure of living comes of being able to be of service to others. To bring a smile to a little child's face, a laugh into its heart, ought to be the height of happiness, even to the least of these. It has been well said that "he who carries in his heart the love for a little child has gone far on the road to a better life."
