-During the very severe storm of last Thursday a very heavy dam was formed by the brush and tree tops on Dawson run which held the water back for some time and when it finally broke away it was quite a heavy torrent and carried everything with it. At the mouth of the run the water raised to the depth of six feet within ten minutes time and caused much damage to Walter Dawson's place, drowning a pig and floating off a lot of bee hives.

-Mr. A. W. Albaugh of East Hickory was in town on Monday taking orders for a war book entitled, "United States in War With Spain." The book is written by Trumbull White, the well known historian and war correspondent, and contains a complete history of the late war with Spain, and is profusely illustrated with half-tone engravings of all the chief events of the war, and of the commanders who took part. The book is not to be delivered until after the signing of the treaty of peace and will give everything complete in one volume.

-A very nice game of ball was played on the island Monday afternoon between a team from Marienville and the home town. The game was an interesting one throughout, some very nice plays being made on both sides, and jangling and rag chewing was noticeable by its absence. The result of the game was a victory for the home team by a score of 15 to 5, which makes a game played between the two towns. The Marienville boys were a gentlemanly lot and will always be welcome here. Now, boys, get together and practice for the deciding game. A nine composed of the younger element of the place went over to Marienville yesterday and played the junior nine there, but our boys "got it in the neck," the score standing 22 to 12 in favor of Marienville. The boys are a little sore over their defeat, but say they had a good time and were well treated.

Death of Mrs. J. E. Wenk.

On last Friday, Aug. 19, 1898, Mrs. Lois Florence Wenk, wife of Jacob E. Wenk, of this paper, and daughter of Capt. D. S. Knox, was called by the messenger of death to her eternal home. While her death was not unexpected, yet its presence in the bright, happy home brought its crushing weight of pain and sorrow that no preparation could avert, and left a husband and two little boys to mourn what is indeed a heavy loss to them but of inestimable gain to her. For several years Mrs. Wenk has not been in good health but it was only within a few months that she was considered serious, when lung trouble developed, under which she sank rapidly.

Her death was without a struggle. She retained consciousness till the last and died rejoicing in hope of the glory of God, in whom she had placed her trust in life, and whose rod and staff was her comfort in the valley and shadow.

Mrs. Wenk was born in Clarion, April 17, 1854, and was married to Mr. J. E. Wenk April 20, 1882. One infant daughter precedes her to the grave.

She was devoted to her family and her home where her loss will be most deeply felt. It was here the many graces that were so characteristic of her life found abundant expression and helped to make a home that had in it all the world implies. As wife and mother she faithfully and lovingly cared for her own. She was much beloved by those who knew her here where her entire life was passed and who will grieve over the loss of a good friend and pleasant acquaintance.

Mrs. Wenk was a member of the Presbyterian church and took a deep interest in all its work, although ill health prevented her from taking an active part. She was regular in her attendance at church services, going many times when suffering intense pain.

A large concourse of people assembled at 3 P. M. on Sunday to pay their respects to the departed and to express their sympathy to those left behind. The services were conducted by the pastor of her church, at the home, after which interment took place in Riverside Cemetery.

Any member known to escort a lady to church and sit with her like a gentleman will be expelled from membership."

OBITUARY.

RON. J. G. DALE.

The death of Hon. Joseph Gates Dale, which was announced in last week's issue, was not unexpected. His useful life, of more than fourscore years, was one of greatest activity, and though he retained his physical and mental powers in a wonderful degree, the fact could not be concealed, for some months past, that his life was approaching its termination. The body that had faithfully served the energetic spirit seemed within it, was gradually wearing out and waited for the snapping of the thread of life to give freedom to the soul. His suffering in times was most severe, but he bore it all with a patience and fortitude characteristic of his life.

The subject of this sketch was born in Centre county, Pa., May 15, 1815. His father, Rev. Joseph Dale, was a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church, and came of good Quaker parentage. His mother was Mary Gates, a daughter of Thomas Gates, Esq., a gentleman of great enterprise, and one of the pioneer settlers of this section of Forest county. Mrs. Dale was a woman of highest Christian culture, whose "life was marked with some act of goodness every day," and whose loveliness of character was fondly cherished in the memory of her three children who attained the years of maturity. Of these, but one, Mrs. Susan McClathey of Erie county, is still living.

The eldest, a son, the late Hon. John A. Dale, having died, June 25, 1877. In 1816 Mrs. Dale, being left a widow, brought her little children over a rough mountainous road, through the wilderness, to her father's home on the Tionesta, at Oldtown flats. Some few years later, she moved "to a small improvement near the mouth of the creek, on what was afterwards known as the Kiser farm." And here, along the beautiful stream, shut in by forest covered hills, were spent the boyhood days of Joseph Dale, and like all the youths of eighty years ago, he was skilled in all the arts of the forest and knew the hardships and dangers of pioneer life.

We of the present generation who are enjoying the many improvements of the inventions and discoveries of the last few decades have brought to us, can scarcely realize our indebtedness to the early settlers. It can hardly seem possible that one who was with us so recently, and whose youthful spirit kept in close touch with the times in which he lived, saw this section of the country when it was an unbroken wilderness, on the east side of the Allegheny, from his home on East Hickory. But he did, and lived in a time when all the traveling here was done in canoes in the summer and on the ice in the winter. There were no roads—nothing but foot-paths from one settlement to another, and for this reason, the pious mother often carried her son Joseph five miles to preaching service that was held at Dawson's, on the headwaters of Stewarts Run. From the history of Tionesta that he wrote, and that was published in the Vindicator in the winter of '97, we learn that the "Indians were very numerous here at that time along the creek and river in the summer time, fishing and killing deer. Game of all kinds was plenty, especially deer, and wolves could be heard howling almost every night. The land upon which Tionesta borough is located was covered with a heavy growth of hickory, walnut and butternut timber."

Judge Dale's boyhood days were spent in an age when men did not know how to make a match to light their fires with, before electricity was harnessed to the machinery of life, and was found to possess a power without measure. He lived to see the wilderness transformed into a well cultivated valley with fine broad acres, and a little hamlet within till it became a town of worth. Quite in contrast with the puncheon floors of the old log cabin, were the soft rich carpets of his late home. Natural gas was a source of great comfort compared with the open fireplace and the back log. When a bad, medical aid was brought by him, horse-back, on a path through the wilderness sixteen miles, but before his death, electricity became his messenger to summon a physician to his residence, and one of the very pleasing things to note is the fact that the venerable gentleman, as the present generation knew him, was one of the most important factors in the wonderful changes and improvements that have taken place.

Coming of an honorable and intelligent ancestry, he inherited a love of learning and great mental vigor that proved all the environment necessary for him to overcome every obstacle to obtain a liberal education, that fitted him to hold the many positions of honor and trust during his lifetime. This helped to make him a man of broad views, clear judgment, quick insight and a student all his days; and his library of hundreds of choice volumes, shows the high order of his literary tastes.

Judge Dale began the battle of life for himself at the age of fifteen at lumbering and rafting, and during his lifetime he was also engaged in merchandise, banking and oil producing. When engaged in the latter pursuit, he purchased the Ball farm, near Pitlohe, for $105,000, and at that time he was a director of the Pitlohe Valley Railroad company. When but twenty-one, he was appointed a lieutenant in the State militia, commanded by Gov. Ritner, and held the position for two years. During Lincoln's administration he was postmaster in his native village, and during Johnson's term of office held the position of internal revenue collector. The present boundaries of Forest county, with Tionesta as the county seat, are largely due to the influence and energy of Judge Dale and his brother, Hon. John A. Dale, who spared neither time nor expense in securing "the greatest good to the greatest number." For three years he was proprietor of and faithfully conducted the Forest Republican, then, as now, the only Republican newspaper in the county, and for five years held the office of associate judge with dignity and credit to himself and the community of its citizens. Judge Dale was a Free Mason of high order for many years, having become a member in Franklin in 1858. He was also a member of the I. O. O. F. since 1863, and having great affection for the fraternity, he was buried with the honors of that order.

He took an active interest in the social life about him, joining frankly in every enterprise for the betterment of the town and county. He was a friend of the friendless and never refused financial assistance to anyone in need. His force of character, big-heartedness and genial, companionable nature made him popular with the masses, as his funeral from his late residence indicated, and which was largely attended by people of all ages and conditions of life.

On Dec. 24, 1840, he was married to Miss Nancy Holeman, a daughter of the late Hon. Alexander Holeman. His union proved happy and delightful and remained unbroken for over fifty-seven years. On Dec. 24, 1896, a very large number of friends and relatives held this aged couple celebrate their golden wedding at their lovely residence. To these parents five children were born, four of whom are still living—Mrs. Belle M. Devoes of Cleveland, O.; Mrs. Jennie E. Partridge of Pittsburgh; J. T. Dale (commissioner's clerk of Forest county) and Alexander H. Dale.

The manner of conducting the funeral service was arranged by Mr. Dale before his death. Not wishing any unnecessary demonstrations, he requested that the twelfth chapter of I. C. be read and prayer offered, which was done by Rev. R. A. Buzza, at his home, and that the members of the I. O. O. F. take charge at the cemetery. His wishes were fulfilled. The floral offerings were many and beautiful, and the pleasant day, after the very rainy weather, seemed a benediction on the life of one of our oldest and most highly respected citizens.

About one month ago my child, which is fifteen months old, had an attack of diarrhoea accompanied by vomiting. I gave it such remedies as are usually given in such cases, but as nothing gave relief, we sent for a physician and it was under his care for a week. At this time the child had been sick for about ten days and was having about twenty-five operations of the bowels every twelve hours, and we were convinced that unless soon obtained relief it would not live. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommended, and I decided to try it. I soon noticed a change for the better; by its continued use a complete cure was brought about and it is now perfectly healthy.—C. L. Boggs, Staunton, Gilmer Co., W. Va. For sale by G. W. Howard.
