Having arranged his work so that time in the near future, the fall of the but part of his time was taken in Washcurtain on the tragedy of life is considered | ington, he brought his tamily from that city to Tionesta in July, to the pleasant final in every sense and the thought of avoiding death is looked upon as an idle home they had occupied previous to their dream by even those in good health, yet ago. For many years Mr. Agnew was the attitude of the human family towards this one great enemy is such that when the Grim Reaper snatches a loved one from the household, or the community, no one is prepored for the shock. We are so unable to foretell the events of the future-even for a day, that we are seldom able to answer the question correctly, "who will be taken next?" When this question was propounded but little over a week ago, when death last visited our mfdst, our thoughts little centered on some one, at that itme, in the best of health, and this is why our community was so severely shocked yesterday morning when it was announced that Hon, J. B. Agnew was taken suddenly from among us, and that Tionesta was again deprived of one of its best citizens. Being but twenty-four hours under the care of a physician, to many his death was the first announcement of his From the history of Forest county, we learn that Joshua B. Agnew was born in

Clarion county, Pa., May 24, 1840. His father, John Agnew, came of that sturdy Scotch-Irish family of Agnews, well known in this State, and was born in Centre (now Blair) county, in 1800. His mother, Eilen Bailey, was born in Laneaster county, and was a decendent of the early settlers of that section of the state. and from Holland. John Agnew was well known to the early settlers of Northwestern Pennsylvania. When a young man he came to Clarion county, was married there, and engaged in various bustness enterprises of that day. He was one of the early pioneers in the first settlement and developement of the eastern part of Forest county, which was then almost an unbroken wilderness. His family consisted of nine sons and three daughters, J. B. Agnew being the fourth son, and no doubt inheriting the enterprising spirit of his father, at the early age of fourteen years commenced to make his own way in the world, and to provide for himself and render such assistance to his parents as he could. He his education at the old Agnew school house, erected through the effofts of his father about one mile from his home. There he improved such opportunities as several months of schooling afterward provided for by himself at public school. and his own perseverance and efforts o self-education, fitted him to commence the study of law in after years.

After first leaving home as a boy, h for a few months worked in a saw-mill after which, with a friend, he took contracts for taking out square timber, his Remedy was recommended, and I de-cided to try it. I soon noticed a change first contracts being on the waters of Spring creek, Forest county, four miles for the better; by its continued use a com-plete cure was brought about and it is from any habitation, where he spent his now perfectly healthy.—C. They were on the magnificent then shipped by water to points along steamer Northwest, and report a very the Allegheny, to Clarington, Shippen's Mill, Cooksburg, and to various towns and lumbering establishments along the Clarion. In 1860 he commenced to read law, studying, however, only in the evenings and such times as he could spare Rodgers, who died last week at his home from his work. Having engaged in putting in timber rafts, staves, etc., for the Pittsburg market, he hoped to be able, after his return from marketing, in the spring of 1861, to complete his education and law studies, and enter upon the practice of law. But on hearing the news that Fort Sumpter was fired on, and when President Lincoln issued his call for volunteers, he, with his father and three brothers-John, Samuel and Leonard-were ready to go in defence of the "stars and stripes." For three years he was a member of Co. E, Tenth Regt. Penn'a Reserve Corps, then having reenlisted he was transferred to Co. I, of the One Hundred and Ninety-first Penn. Vet, Vol., and in June, 1864, was, by special order of Gen. Meade, detailed and placed in charge of the ordinance train of the Third Division of the Fifth Army Corps, in which capacity he acted as captain and a staff officer until the close of the war. He declined a commission as captain for the reason that it would necessitate the resignation of a wounded captain and thus deprive his friend of a captain's pay. His record as a soldier is a brilliant one, he having participated in some twenty-seven battles and engagements, and having received special mention in general orders for bravery in action. He was mustered out of service in July, 1865, when he returned to his home in Ferest county. In the fall of '66 he was unanimously elected sheriff of his county. Before his time as sheriff expired he was elected prothonotory, register, recorder and clerk of the several courts of Forest county, and before his first term as such had expired he was reand supper, in the Marienville rink. He was a man of noble generosity that knew no bounds, and a man of strict integrity In June, 1866, he married Miss Jennie E McKay, a woman of beautiful character and a true help-meet.
