-The Oil City fair was considerable of a hummer, as the papers claimed it would be. The exhibits were especially fine, though perhaps not so numerous as they will be at the next and future occasions, as a natural sequence. The racing and other attractions were far above the average at county fairs, and the management kept the crowds interested by the very plentiful this year and it is hoped promptness with which each piece on the program was brought out. The big day was on Thursday, when it is estimated over 20,000 were on the ground. For the initial effort the fair may well be pronounced a complete success, and, having made a record, it is to be hoped the association will consider itself able to get through the next year nicely without the gambling devices so much in evidence on this occasion. This was about the only feature to mar the otherwise pleasant affair.
