THE persistency with which the political insurgents and their newspaper allies are urging the calling of an extra session of the legislature has a tendency to convince decent people that this horde is after the $500 or $600 there would be in it for each of them, subtracting of course the "divvy" which the reporters of those newspapers would expect to get out of extra session and no sensible person believes anything but a heavy expense to

We bave learned more of our own power and resources than we ever knew before, and Europe has learned that we are a people to be feared and respected. One consequence will be that we shall hereafter be treated with more deference by the other powers, because those powers have now witnessed a demonstration of the capacity of the American as a fighting man in foreign lands and on foreign waters, and they now know that he fights anywhere with about as much dash and daring and interpid enurage as he does on his own soil. The great civil war gave the world an illustration of American valor and endurance that will never be forgotten; but in that conflict the contestants were on home ground, and it was only natural to suppose that Americans would fight more desperately at home than abroad. It may be that there are some persons foolish enough to believe that the State of Pennsylvania is hungry to spend a quarter of a million dollars for the luxury of a special session. Appropriations have been cut in every direction to save money, the State's income is not equal to the expenses, and of course anyone would be delighted with the idea of throwing away a quarter of a million so that a few kickers of the Flinn order might try their hand again at electing a Senator. But they won't be able to defeat Quay in that way. Suppose for

The insurgents have pledged themselves to keep up their fight, and there certainly is not a regular Republican who would join them in the election of a mugwamp, Quay has fought his foes and has triumphed over them. They have called him every name that they could find in the unabridged dictionaries. They have even bauled him into court and the case against him was kicked out by the jury.
