Monroe Walters, superintendent of Col. Carter at the Fogle Farm, Harmony township, met with a severe accident last Thursday. He was assisting in the work of pulling steel rods out of a well when a hook overhead gave way and in its descent struck him on the head, cutting a deep gash which required five stitches from the surgeon's needle to close. Dr. W. G. Morrow of West Hickory made the necessary repairs, and Mr. Walters was getting along all right at last accounts.

An Oil City man who visited the Franklin Street Fair, last evening, was so affected by the spectacle of a man swallowing snakes that to-day, when he happened to see a pair of garters hanging in a shop window, he turned pale and trembled visibly for a space of several minutes. Ordinarily he is a man of great nerve and the last one to shy at a little thing like a garter. Bizzard. We're quite confident it wasn't the Colonel nor the "Merely Incidental" man, so it must have been "Mac." He would shy.

The colored work in Biggie Berry Book is an immense aid to berry growers. It shows the leading berries true to size, shape and color. They were first carefully painted by an experienced artist, and then reproduced by lithography at a cost of over one thousand dollars. Aside from the color work there are scores of reproductions made directly from photographs of berries, so that the reader may have an accurate idea of them. See publisher's announcement in another column. The price is 50 cents, free by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

The Chicago Tribune gives the origin of the round robin. When citizens of ancient Athens, wished to protest against the tyranny of their ruler, they drew a circle at the bottom of their manifesto, divided it into equal compartments by drawing lines from the circumference to the center, and signed their names in the spaces so made, so that it was impossible to tell who was the first to sign, and consequently, the leader of the conspiracy. At the banquets of the Romans a list of the guests was made in the same way, so that no one of them could feel himself particularly honored above the others.

The largest sale of oil producing property occurring in this part of the State for some time, was consummated Saturday when Kahle Bros., of this city, transferred their interest in 1,400 acres of leases and about 200 wells to Captain John M. Clapp, of Washington, D. C. The parties all being conservative business men, are keeping the consideration private, but it must have been a large sum, for the property is a very fine one. The action of D. P. Kahle against the Clapp estate, in connection herewith, was withdrawn, the matter having been amicably adjusted, the Kahle Bros., selling to Mr. Chpp, as above stated. Derrick.

After the first of January next Marienville will take its proper name on the list of postoffices. Up to this time the Postoffice Department at Washington has spelled the name with an "o" instead of "e" as it should be. The town was named in honor of the daughter of the late Judge Blood, Marlen, but in some mysterious manner the department got the spelling mixed, and with all the effort put forth it has been impossible to have the spelling changed to conform to the records, the railroad station, express and telegraph, etc., until now, when Dr. Towler has been given assurance that the change will be made after the new year, and Marienville will be written as she ought to be.

Wm. Kiser, Near Elk City, Found Murdered in His Bed—Lived Alone and Was Supposed to Have Money.

The Derrick of Monday gives this account of a most atrocious crime that was first discovered on Sunday morning last: William Kiser, aged about 55 or 60 years, a bachelor, and one of the best known residents of Clarion county, was found dead in his bed about 10 o'clock Sunday morning, the victim of one of the most atrocious murders in the annals of that county. So far, not the least trace of the murderer or murderers has been found.

The scene of the murder is near Elk City, and about two miles from Edenburg. The house is located about 100 yards back from the Moughtown road, which, during the oil excitement in that vicinity, was much used, but of late years is not the scene of much travel. The house is a two-story frame, and the murdered man lived alone. The last he was seen alive was on Friday night when he attended church at Elk City. On Sunday morning Emanuel Kiser, a young man, relative of the deceased, passed the house and noticed that the door was partly opened. He was in a hurry and did not stop, but on his return went up to the house and found that the front door had been broken in by using a fence rail as a battering ram. In the bed he found the body of William Kiser. The hands of the dead man were tied behind his back, and he lay face down upon the bed. Turning the body over, he found that the features had been hacked and battered almost beyond recognition. The young man then called in the neighbors, and a search for a possible clue was taken up. The only thread of evidence was in the fact that a pair of horses owned by Jacob Youkers, had been stolen, and the supposition is that the murderers stole the team in order to make their escape.

The motive is supposed to have been robbery, and that the murderers were frightened away before securing anything of value, two guns, a Winchester and rifle, were found on the floor of the bed room, and both of these weapons were the property of the dead man. They evidently had not been touched by him on the night of the murder. The deceased was highly respected, had few if any enemies, and was especially noted for his charity and kindness, although rather eccentric. He was reputed to have been a man of wealth, and current rumor had it that he kept a great deal of money in a safe in his bed room. This safe had not been touched by his assailants, and in the pocket of his coat, in his bed room, was found $73 in bank notes.

From a view of the body and its surroundings, there were two or more concerned in this atrocious murder. The men evidently broke open the door with the fence rail, and rushed into the house, finding their victim asleep or only rousing from slumber. They overpowered him and bound his hands behind his back, and probably were infuriated at his refusal to give them the combination or key of the safe, and beat him about the head, or possibly they were recognized in this struggle by their victim, and killed him to escape prosecution for the crime of burglary. There were little signs of a struggle outside of the bed itself. Squire Haddock, of Shippenville, empaneled a jury on Sunday, which rendered a verdict that the deceased had come to his death by external violence at the hands of person or persons not known.

William Kiser was born and reared near the place where his life was taken in such an atrocious manner. Previous to 1876, he was engaged in farming, and he and other relatives of the same family name owned a large amount of farming land in that neighborhood when oil was found at Elk City. The deceased sold and leased most of his farm property, and has been credited with having a nice income from royalties; he also farmed that portion of his land which was under lease. He was a good citizen and held in esteem by his community. The deceased was a cousin of E. M. Kiser, of Elk City, formerly engaged in the banking business at Sanbourne, Dakota, and also a cousin of George B. Kiser, a prominent Clarion county merchant.

THE STOLEN TEAM.
Jacob Youkers, the gentleman above referred to as having had a team stolen on Friday night last, was through this section on Monday and Tuesday of this week trying to follow the trail of his lost team. At Jack Mills' place between Lickingville and Newmansville he found one of the horses in a field, the fence having been laid down and again put up. Two working bridles were also taken from the stable in which the horses stood.

The funeral of Mr. Kiser was held Monday at Shippenville.

Additional particulars of the horrible tragedy, and an autopsy of the body, reveals that he had been hit on the head with a blunt instrument, presumably an iron wedge found near by, his skull being shattered to fragments. Evidence indicates that he had a terrible fight for his life, his body being terribly bruised from head to foot, and that he had been first bound and tortured to make him reveal the hiding place of his money, his feet being badly burned, and that, breaking his bonds or recognizing his assailants, he was then murdered.

It is supposed the robbers got very little money, as $1,000 were found sewed in the mattress of the bed and $73 in his pocket. The safe has not yet been opened, an expert being required, as no one knows the combination. The second horse stolen from Marienville, near Emmenton, which would indicate that the parties separated going in almost directly opposite directions. It is thought the discovery of the horse may furnish a clue to the murderers. One thousand dollars reward has been offered by relatives of the murdered man for the arrest and conviction of the murderers and the county commissioners are also expected to offer a reward. Three ex-convicts are suspected of the crime.

At a meeting of the Board of Health of Tionesta borough held July 25, 1899, the following resolution was passed:

"That the Law and Rules of the Board of Health relating to Vaccination be strictly enforced; and that notice of this resolution be published in the REPUBLICAN and Postoffice and also posted in the Post Office."

The law, the Rules of the State Board of Health and also the Rules of this Board of Health require all children to be vaccinated successfully, within seven years, before they can be admitted to the public schools.

The school law requires all teachers to refuse the admission of any and all scholars who do not present a certificate of vaccination, signed by a regular physician.

Such certificates will be furnished physicians to properly fill and sign, on application to the Board of Health.

This notice is given now, that all may see to it and avoid papers being kept out of school when term begins.
