Supreme Court Judge - J. HAY BROWN, Lancaster. Superior Court Judge - JOSIAH R. ADAMS, Philadelphia. State Treasurer - JAMES E. BARNETT, Washington County. COUNTY. Associate Judge - R. ACCORDING to a sad-eyed contemporary Republican rule is no better than Democratic rule. Yet most people think they notice a difference between 1896 and 1899.

ELEVEN thousand troops are on the Pacific at this time bound for the Philippines. The Tagals ought to know that these brave men are not going there to give up the sovereignty.

In his speech of welcome to Admiral Dewey, President McKinley said, "There was no flaw in your victory; there will be no faltering in maintaining it." Who can find a flaw in that sentiment?

HAVING failed in their scheme to use the arrival of Dewey to advertise themselves, the yellow papers are trying to thrust the Admiral into a political program bearing their usual trade mark.

ALL the Dakota soldiers returned from Manila are in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war and keeping the islands. The interviewers who hunted for a different sentiment gave up in despair.

THERE is no record of any time within the last forty years when the Democratic party did not "view with alarm" some time or other. Just now they "view with alarm" half a dozen things. One old Pop in Nebraska is said to "view with alarm" the immense crops in the West, because, as he says, "it is a—d—d hard on the soil."

SENATOR WILLIAM E. MASON repeats fervently his declaration that he blushes with shame for his country's action in the Philippines. It might save a lot of money in red fire and illuminations if the fall festival committee could get Mr. Mason to stand upon a pillar and blush at regular intervals during the night parade, says the Chicago News.

THE papers which are saying that Gen. Taylor had an easy victory for President in 1848 are mistaken. New York's electoral vote decided the contest that year, as it did once or twice before, and as it has done often since, and it was Van Buren's bolt which took away New York from the Democracy. The combined popular vote of Cass and Van Buren in the State of New York was 16,000 more than Taylor's. The Van Buren faction in 1848 fought Cass, the regular Democratic candidate, because Cass was the chief influence which defeated Van Buren for nomination in 1844, when the caudillo went to the dark horse, Polk. Theoretically, the Barnburners, or Van Buren's New York followers, were anti-slavery men, but in 1848 they were more anxious to get revenge on Cass and their party than they were to hit slavery. The Taylor men were not sure of victory nor the Cass men of defeat until after the votes were counted.—Globe Democrat.

HON. W. C. ARNOLD, who so faithfully represented this district four years in Congress, informs his friends that he will be a candidate before the Republican State convention next spring for Congress-at-Large. The announcement is none too early, for it gives plenty of time for friends to consider the question and do something in his behalf. Mr. Arnold was among the leaders of the last Congress, and the 28th was among the districts envied by others for the ability of its representative, and his attitude on all the great questions which came before that body was entirely in harmony with his party and the greatest good to the country. Pennsylvania would honor itself by placing Mr. Arnold at the head of its delegation in Congress. Speaking on this line the Kane Republican truthfully remarks: "Mr. Arnold is a man of very decided abilities and his record in Congress as a defender of the great principle of protection to American industries is first class."

Their Guns are Spiked.

No much capital is being made by the free-trade journals out of the fact that the Phoenix Iron Company of Phoenixville recently secured the contract for the construction of the great Kagashina viaduct in Japan. They have sense enough to realize that any effort along that line would prove abortive.

When the Dingley bill was up those gentlemen argued in the most learned manner that its enactment would close every foreign port to American enterprise. The Phoenix Company and that at Peneoy would never be able to build any more foreign bridges if its provisions went into effect. The Baldwins would never again get a contract for locomotives, and so the lugubrious story ran. In a word, the industrial heavens were to be hung with eternal black—the sun would never shine again.

Well, those dire predictions were not sustained by facts. The bridge companies are building more foreign bridges than ever before. The Baldwin locomotives are going to every country in the world. American steel is going into slate-producing Wales, the European continent gathers its grain with American reapers and rakes on American bicycles. American cutlery sells easily in Sheffield. The tariff which was condemned as infamous has proved to be the reverse.

Hence the free-trade reticence on this subject. Hence the howl about trusts and the Philippines. The free-trade guns are all spiked. Their roar is ended. They no longer even smoke.—Phila. Inquirer.

One of the striking facts in connection with the prosperity that has followed the return of the Republicans to power and the passage of the Dingley tariff act, is that all the people share in the gain. The president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers testified before the Industrial Commission the other day that the 30 per cent. reduction in the wages of iron workers made during the Cleveland Administration has been practically restored under the present Administration. Other workmen have had similar advances. While the manufacturers are not getting as high prices as in 1892, yet they are satisfied with their prosperity. The farmers are thriving and a word of complaint is rarely heard.

Some Ohio wool growers were recently reported as expressing dissatisfaction with the result of the wool tariff, asserting that it is not high enough. But any complaint of that kind is based on misinformation. In 1892, when the McKinley tariff act was in force, the standard grade of XX Ohio wool averaged in price 294 cents a pound. When the Democrats repealed that law, the price fell to 171 cents in 1893. That was lower than the price of similar wool in London. In 1896 wool sold for a pound more in London than in the wool markets of the Eastern States. But after the election of that year, with the certainty of return of the Republicans to power, wool began to go up, although three years' supply of wool was imported free under the Democratic tariff act, so as to anticipate Republican legislation.

That advance supply has been a serious drawback to American wool growers, but, nevertheless, the price of XX Ohio wool, according to Justice, Bateman & Co.'s October circular, was 33 cents a pound on the 23d of September, or 41 cents a pound more than the average price in 1892. There is certainly no ground for complaint on the part of wool growers in that fact, but very great reason for rejoicing. The advance importation of three years' supply under the Democratic free wool bill was something that the Republicans could not possibly avert, as the new tariff bill was put on the statute books after the inauguration of Mr. McKinley in an unprecedentedly short time.

When Ohio XX wool was selling here for 33 cents on September 23 a similar grade of wool was selling in London for 28 1/2 cents, or 41 cents less a pound than the price in this country. As wool was higher in London than in Philadelphia under the Democratic tariff bill it is fair to assume that at the very least, had not the law been changed, the farmers would be getting 5 cents a pound less for their wool than they are now receiving. But without the prosperity that has followed under the return of the Republicans to power and the passage of the Dingley act there might not have been any advance whatever in the price of wool. As it is now the farmers of the United States will at the very lowest receive this year over $40,000,000 more for the same quantity of wool than they received under the Democratic law in 1896. Then there is a still greater advance in the value of their sheep, so that in these two items the farmers of the United States are about $100,000,000 better off than they were under the Democratic tariff, before the election of 1896.

But that is not all. Owing to the enormous advance importation of wool its increase in price has been retarded. Justice, Bateman & Co., giving good reasons, say that XX Ohio wool "will ultimately command somewhat nearer 40 cents a pound than present prices." That will mean millions more for the farmers. At the same time, owing to the great increase in consumption, the total now reaching 50,000,000 pounds a month, or nearly double what it was last year, the outlook for 1900 is very bright for the farmers. Nothing excepting a Democratic victory at the polls this year can blight this prosperous future for the wool producers.—Phila. Press.

The Late W. W. Paup.

Wilbert Paup, deceased, was born August 23, 1856, at Tylersburg, Clarion Co., Pa., and died September 12, 1899, at Cooksburg, Pa. He was the eldest son of George W. and Mary Jane Paup. In the year of 1878 he was united in marriage with Clarissa Cook, daughter of Matilda and Daniel Cook. This marriage was blessed with nine children, eight of whom are living, viz: Molly, George, Fred, Tillie, John, Hazel, Frank, and Wilbur.

Mr. Paup came to Cooksburg when quite a young boy, and although deprived of the educational advantages given to the boys of the present day, he managed to work his way, gaining the education that comes with experience, hard work and application, so that at the time of the accident which caused his death, he occupied quite a responsible position, having many men in his employ and under his direction, all of whom can testify as to his thoughtfulness and consideration.

He was an ambitious, hard-working and industrious man; not ambitious for the sake of gain alone, but more for his family, encouraging them in well doing and working to give his children an education, thereby helping them to help themselves.

He spent the greater part of his life at Cooksburg, about thirty years in all, and in that length of time endeared himself to the surrounding community, not only as a law abiding and helpful citizen, but as a good, moral and upright man.

Mr. Paup united with the Methodist Episcopal church in 1879, and while not an active member, his every-day life spoke much for his profession. He was a most devoted husband and father; too much can not be said of his kindness and devotion to his wife and family, who in their sorrow have the greatest sympathy of mourning friends and neighbors.

The funeral, which took place on Friday, was one of the largest seen in this part of the country for years. The beautiful ritual of the Patriotic Sons of America was used in laying him away. Let us not think of him as being no more, but that he is only beginning to live the life our Heavenly Father has provided, and that the separation on this earth is but a short time compared with eternal happiness.

Friday night, a little before midnight, Mr. J. Allen, who resides in Bear Lake, was awakened by some one trying to force an entrance through the front door of his home. He got up, secured a revolver from the dresser in his bedroom, and, going to the door, fired three shots through the panels. His shots caused no commotion or noise outside, and he opened the door but could see no one. He then retired, thinking he had scared the intruders away.

Later in the night he was again awakened by a peculiar noise emanating from the woodshed in the rear of the house, and on repairing thereto, discovered a man in a dying condition, with three holes in his chest. The man was conscious, and stated that he and two companions were trying to force an entrance into Mr. Allen's house, he supposing it to be the evaporating building.

When Mr. Allen fired through the door, every bullet had struck the wounded man, who stated that his companions had then picked him up and carried him to the woodshed. The man had been lying there in a dying condition for some time, and when discovered was past all help, although at last reports no was not dead.

The wounded burglar proved to be Ben Cooper, a resident of Bear Lake, who is not at all times right in mind, and it is supposed he was induced to make the burglarious attempt by the two men with him, after they had gotten him into an almost helpless state of intoxication. The two men have not yet been found, and Cooper refuses to divulge their names.

Cooper will be brought to Corry today and taken to the hospital.—Corry Leader.

Three Doctors in Consultation.

From Benjamin Franklin. "When you are sick, what you like best is to be chosen for a medicine in the first place; what experience tells you is best to be chosen in the second place; what reason (i. e. theory) says is best is to be chosen in the last place. But if you can get Dr. Inclination, Dr. Experience and Dr. Reason to hold a consultation together, they will give you the best advice that can be taken."

When you have a bad cold Dr. Inclination would recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is pleasant and safe to take. Dr. Experience would recommend it because it never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. Dr. Reason would recommend it because it is prepared on scientific principles, and acts on nature's plan in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions and restoring the system to a natural and healthy condition.
