A Suggestion of Pennsylvania's Young Senator For National Chairman.

HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE.

Senator Sullivan, a Democrat, and Senator Wolcott, a Republican, Publicly Declare For the Seating of Colonel Quay by the United States Senate.

(Special Correspondence.) Harrisburg, Nov. 21.—The fact that United States Senator Boies Penrose yesterday left for Washington, where he will establish headquarters for the winter session of congress, has moved the seat of political activity, as far as the seating of Colonel Quay is concerned, to the national capital. Senator Penrose has been a conspicuous figure in the public eye during the last ten days owing to the mention of his name in connection with the chairmanship of the Republican national committee to succeed Senator Hanna. A number of leading newspapers throughout the country have had very complimentary mention of the young and popular senator from Pennsylvania in this connection. The New York Tribune, that stalwart Republican organ, has been one of the most persistent in presenting arguments in favor of the selection of an active and progressive young Republican to fill the responsible post of national chairman for the coming campaign and has boomed Penrose as its first choice. The fact has been referred to that Senator Penrose has made many friends among the influential Republicans of both the senate and the house at Washington, and that he could count upon the hearty co-operation of all elements of the party in lining up the Republican hosts for the presidential canvass.

MCKINLEY AND PENROSE. While appreciating these very flattering references to himself, Senator Penrose has announced that he is not an aspirant for the party leadership in the coming canvass and that he will be entirely satisfied to work for the renomination and the re-election of President McKinley in the ranks of the Republican organization. The close personal relations which exist between the president and Senator Penrose have been frequently commented upon by correspondents of newspapers outside of the borders of Pennsylvania. Senator Penrose, it will be recalled, was the first of the party leaders in the state to publicly declare in favor of Major McKinley's nomination for president, and throughout his administration there have been few more welcome visitors at the White House. It is pleasing to the friends of the brilliant young Pennsylvania senator that his strong personality and his many admirable qualities should be recognized by leading Republicans of the country, and especially by the president.

The suggestion of Senator Penrose, among others, for the national chairmanship was prompted by the report that Senator Hanna wished to be relieved of the executive work of the coming campaign, though he would be of course deeply interested in the success of the canvass. It is not improbable that Senator Hanna will again be induced to lead the fight for President McKinley, and if he does it is safe to predict that he will leave nothing undone to get out the Republican vote in every state in the union.

A DEMOCRAT FOR QUAY. The last week has brought a number of the national leaders of both parties to Washington to be ready for the opening of congress. Naturally Pennsylvanians are interested in the opinions of the members of the senate upon the question of what action will be taken upon Governor Stone's certificate of appointment of Colonel Quay to the vacancy in the senate from this state.

United States Senator W. V. Sullivan, of Mississippi, has arrived in Washington and will remain there until the opening of congress. Senator Sullivan is a member of the national Democratic executive committee and stands high in the councils of his party. It will be recalled that his affirmative vote in the senate last winter saved the peace treaty from defeat. In conversing upon the question of the appointment of Colonel Quay Senator Sullivan said:

"I heartily favor the seating of Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, on the strength of his credentials of appointment by Governor Stone."

"As a Democrat, I believe in abiding by party rules, and unless a caucus of Democratic senators decides against supporting Senator Quay, which action I think is decidedly improbable, I shall certainly record my vote in his favor."

"I have a great admiration for his wonderful abilities, and I do not believe that he has been justly treated by his political enemies in Pennsylvania. In fact, I am inclined to think that he has been the victim of bitter persecution, and I for one will be glad to aid in his vindication."

Senator Sullivan's views are shared by many other Democratic senators, and it can be asserted on excellent authority that no Democratic caucus that may be called will adopt any resolution inimical to Senator Quay.

THE ELOQUENT WOLCOTT SPEAKS. There is no stronger personality in the senate than Senator Wolcott, of Colorado. He is the finest orator in either branch of congress, and is a power on the Republican side. President McKinley has shown confidence in his abilities by appointing him one of the commissioners to go abroad and secure, if possible, an international agreement on the subject of bimetallism, and his report on the work of the commission was an able and statesmanlike document.

Senator Wolcott did not hesitate to give his views regarding the right of Colonel Quay to a seat in the senate on Governor Stone's credentials. He expressed himself in his usual positive and straightforward manner.

"I have very little to say on that subject," said Senator Wolcott, "but I want to state right here that I care nothing at all about senatorial precedents. I shall take the greatest possible pleasure in voting to seat Senator Quay. I am familiar with his distinguished services in the past, and I think the country needs him."

When asked for his views concerning the recent state elections throughout the country Senator Wolcott said: "The general result of the elections is to make certain the renomination and re-election of President McKinley. Whatever the vote may have been in the far western states it was not a victory for anti-imperialism, but a distinct personal triumph for Mr. Bryan. To my mind it is evident that Bryan will be renominated upon a platform which will stand for anti-imperialism in the east and 16 to 1 in the west."

SENATOR HOAR'S POSITION. There is nothing in the way of precedent in the Quay case that need bother any one. If these election cases had invariably been settled on their merits there would be something in precedent to follow, but every one knows that as a rule they have not been so settled. Seating a senator on merit means that the constitution of the United States shall decide. Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, is absolutely right in his analysis of the constitution. Mr. Hoar is a conservative man—altogether too conservative, perhaps, to be thoroughly in touch with the activities of modern progress—but he has always been a careful student of the constitution, and there is no greater stickler in all congress upon constitutional points. In his opinion the constitution does not contemplate leaving a seat vacant in the senate. For that reason a governor is given the power to appoint if for any reason whatever a vacancy occurs, the intention of the constitution being that the states shall always have their full representation. Mr. Hoar will vote for Colonel Quay as he has voted in similar cases heretofore, and if the Quay case were to be decided strictly according to his construction of the constitution there would be no vacancy in Pennsylvania.

The trouble has been that in deciding election cases partisanship has usually controlled. It is either a question of party politics or else some question like silver has divided the votes. The recent cases in the west, from Montana and Washington, were decided, not on their merits, but from party politics. There is nothing in precedent established only through partisan motives that need cause any trouble for Colonel Quay's friends.

The interviews with Senators Sullivan and Wolcott have been telegraphed to the principal newspapers of the country, and with these pronounced sentiments coming from representatives of both political parties, there have been many editorials from Republican and Democratic editors predicting the prompt seating by the senate of the former Republican national chairman upon the governor's commission.

I look to see him gradually recover. He has no valvular disease of the heart. His circulation is rapidly improving."

Elaborate plans have been perfected for making this the grandest meeting of dairymen ever held in this or any other state. The program, extending through six sessions, embraces the prominent dairy educators of the country, and the discussions will cover all the questions ever.

A large exhibition hall (40x200 feet) has been secured and a general invitation is extended for exhibits of butter and cheese. ## Philadelphia Insurgent Leader Gets a Bad Setback.

I. W. DURHAM WINS OUT.

Wanamakerism in Its Latest Form, Though Recent Defeats Have Been Very Disappointing and Demoralizing.

(Special Correspondence.) Philadelphia, Nov. 21.—Another evidence of the fact that the old Martin combine, which was for years in control of public affairs and the Republican organization in this city, is no longer potential was given this week when a large majority of the Republican members of common council united in signing a pledge to vote for the election of George McCurdy for president of that body. Mr. McCurdy is a progressive Philadelphia who follows the leadership of Israel W. Durham, and who has no time for the Martin outfit. He is a stalwart Republican, and has no sympathy with the insurgents, and was one of the most active of the young Republicans who brought about the election of Samuel H. Ashbridge as mayor. The position of president of common council is a very influential one, and it has long been an asset in the political combination of which Martin was the acknowledged leader. Since Martin has joined hands politically with the Wanamaker-Flinn-Hastings combine in state politics he has been steadily losing ground in this city. The signing of the pledge for McCurdy means his success in the Republican caucus, and nothing can prevent his election.

Having lost the mayor and now losing the president of councils, Martin is practically put out of business. Martin, who became immensely wealthy through his leadership of the Republican organization in this city, is now posing as a statesman. With Flinn, of Allegheny, and Hastings, of Centre, both of whom have also made big fortunes since they entered politics, Martin has tied his political future to the Wanamaker personal advancement movement, of which the people of Pennsylvania have had some experience during the last few years. Wanamakerism has not had a popular boom in the Keystone state. But with a determination characteristic of the rich man with political ambitions to satisfy, the warfare upon the Republican organization is to be kept up.

BOLTERS' LATEST MOVE. The Wanamaker-Martin-Flinn insurgents have drawn up a memorial to the United States senate, protesting against the seating of Colonel Quay upon Governor Stone's certificate of appointment. They were unable to carry out their project in the legislature to elect an insurgent or even a Democrat to the United States senate—that is, anybody but Colonel Quay. They were overwhelmingly beaten afterward in the canvass for delegates to the Republican state convention, the vote being nearly five to one against them. When the friends of Colonel Quay in the convention nominated Colonel Barnett, and they opened the insurgent and Democratic batteries of personal abuse upon this gallant soldier, they were ignominiously routed by the people at the polls.

BARNETT'S BIG MAJORITY. General Reader, who as chairman of the Republican committee managed the late contest, was in town this week when the official returns were received from Harrisburg. He was naturally pleased with the figures. Barnett's official plurality was 110,488.

For the first time in three campaigns was the Republican target of the insurgent and Democratic guns given a clear majority of all the votes cast at the election. Mr. Beacom, the candidate for state treasurer in 1897; Colonel Stone, the nominee for governor last year, and Colonel Barnett, the Republican candidate this fall, were each subjected to scandalous assaults from this insurgent cabal. Although they were all elected, in 1897 Beacom, of all the votes cast at that election, was in the minority by 10,169. Though Colonel Stone won in his fight for the governorship, he lacked 19,303 of having a majority of the votes polled at that election. But then, after the insurgent exhibition of party treachery in bolting the Republican caucus on the United States senatorship in the legislature, and their continued disloyalty in opposing the Republican candidate for state treasurer, and espousing the cause of Creasy, a Bryanite, the Republicans of Pennsylvania elected Colonel Barnett state treasurer and gave him a majority of $9,922 over the combined votes of the Democratic, Prohibitionist and Populist and Union Reform party candidates, with the insurgent vote for Creasy, Democrat, thrown in.

After this emphatic rebuke from the Republican voters the insurgents, or at least their small adherents, these only personal politics, set out again to have an organized fight against the Republican organization and with a purpose to unite with any party or faction to elect their candidates for the legislature where they are defeated in Republican conventions.

THE FOX AND THE EDITOR. These insurgents make a great ado in Wanamaker newspapers, but when it comes to getting the votes of the people they cut a small figure. Apropos of these fall page advertisements in certain Philadelphia newspapers and the similarity of the political reports in their news columns this story of the "Fox and the Editor" made interesting reading in the Evening Call: An editor sat at his desk with compressed lips, flashing eyes, all the while dipping his pen in gall. A fox peering himself on the window sill thus segued the crowd: "You are working yourself into a frenzy these days over politics. What is up?" "What is up?" exclaimed the editor. "A Sure Sign of Creep."

MRS. ADAMS' DEMISE. Once Pampered Child of Fortune Dies From Hunger and Neglect. NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Mrs. Evelyn Adams, author of the novel, "Is Marriage a Failure," who died last week in abject poverty at 400 West Fifty-seventh street, this city, was, before her marriage to Brown Adams, Evelyn Susan Lapanah, child of the Huguenot descent. The Lapanahs were well-to-do and lived in style. The daughters were carefully educated and early developed unusual talents. It was designed that they should be reared in the old-fashioned manner to be good housewives. Evelyn and another sister, Rebecca, but received no sympathy. They ran away from home and never returned.

The two girls gave lectures and dramatic readings. In California the second sister fell ill of smallpox. Evelyn nursed her. The girl died. Then Evelyn returned to New York city, in which place she had started on her professional career. She met Brown Adams, who was just from college, rich, handsome and ambitious. They fell in love and were clandestinely married Dec. 8, 1884.

Soon afterward Adams informed his mother, Mrs. Susan Adams of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, of his marriage. The mother declined to recognize her bride and young Adams became practically an outcast from his rich relatives. He lived only a few months. Another work by Mrs. Adams had been recently accepted by a publisher and was about to be issued. She had also dramatized her first work, and in the plans for staging the work, she was assisted by Herbert Carrier, an artist through whom the address of Mrs. Adams' mother was secured, and, at her request, the body of the young woman was shipped to Utica, where it was buried.

Mrs. Adams left a diary in which she wrote her sensations while slowly dying from hunger, among which were interspersed lines filled with hope of future greatness as an author.

He was run over by a horse when a child and his right foot injured. He has since been confined to his home with no improvement in his condition, the necessity of the later operation becoming apparent on Saturday last.
