QUAY'S SUPPORTERS SWEEP PRIMARIES

A Complete Triumph at the Philadelphia Republican Elections.

ARE IN ABSOLUTE CONTROL.

Capture City Committee and Councils and Name Practically Solid Delegations to the Republican State and National Conventions.

(Special Correspondence.) Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—The friends of senator Quay scored a signal victory at the Republican primaries held here today. They practically swept the town, and are now in absolute control of the party organization and of city councils, and they will probably have every one of the delegates to the Republican national convention from this city and all the delegates to the Republican state convention except those from two, and possibly only one, of the 27 legislative districts

The Martin-Wanamaker insurgent combination cuts a sorry figure as the returns are read from the various wards and districts. This outfit has been repudiated by the Republican voters who went to the polls and cast their ballots in favor of the men who believe in standing by the Republican organization and abiding by the will of the majority, and who are opposed to alliances of any kind with the Democracy, either in the state legislature or at the polls on election day. This has been a great day for the straightout Republicans. It has been a Waterloo for the insur-

While a victory for the stalwarts was anticipated, it was hardly believed that their triumph would be overwhelming. The returns were received at the Republican city campaign committee rooms, their new headquarters, corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets, and as ward after ward sent in reports showing the sentiment of the people against the guerrilla political warfare that has been carried on by Martin and Wanamaker in this city and Flinn and their other allies in different sections of the state the joy of the stalwarts was beyond restraining. The insurgents got a severe setback a few days before the primaries in the announcement that former chairman of the Republican city committee, ex-State Senator Charles A. Porter, had come out squarely in favor of Colonel Quay, and had declared his purpose to co-operate with the friends of the regular Republican organization in both the city and the state. When it is recalled that Senator Porter was a full political partner of David Martin in what was known as the Martin-Porter combine, and shared with Martin an equal responsibility in the management of the organization which brought about the election of Warwick as mayor when Penrose was overthrown at the last hour, the significance of this desertion from the insurgent cause can be better appreciated. This has left Martin with little more than the Wanamaker bargain counter advertising controlled newspapers, the Wanamaker contributions to the insurgent campaign fund, and the patronage in the tax office, over which Martin's brother-in-law, Mr. Roney, still officiates, as he is serving out his last term Against this remnant of a once powerful combine were arrayed at the primaries all the personal friends and political supporters of Senator Quay, led by former Senator Israel W. Durham, the veteran David H. Lane, who has the backing of the friends of Mayor Ashbridge, and many ward leaders who formerly followed Martin, but who, recognizing the change of public sentiment and the revolution which has been wrought recently in local and state politics, are now lined up with the regular Republican organization in both state and city.

From the standpoint of practical polities, the capture of the Republican campaign committee by the friends of Colonel Quay is the most significant outcome of today's primaries. This has been Martin's stronghold for several years. Through control of this committee he has managed to overturn and reorganize wards and districts which, upon a poular vote, would be overwhelmingly against his lieutenants residing therein. Of course, this made no difference, for no matter what the returns of the primaries were, the Martin men would be seated in the city committee, and their delegates to city and state conventions would be recognized and the others would be put upon the "sliding board," as the Martin heelers designated the bouncing apparatus of the combine machine.

But things will be different benceforth. Heretofore a Martin man, as treasurer of the Republican city committee, received all the campaign contributions of the thousands of officeholders employed in the various city departments, and these monies were distributed through Martin men in the various election precincts of the city. This gave an immense leverage to the Martin machine at the primary elections, as well as at the general elec-

QUAY MAN FOR TREASURER.

The treasurer of the new city committee is to be Colonel Thomas J. Powers, who was appointed by Governor Stone to be banking commissioner of Pennsylvania. Colonel Powers has co-operaced politically with the friends of Colonel Quay for the last 15 years. He was appointed naval officer of this port through Colonel Quay's influence during the Harrison administration.

Friends of Colonel Quay will be elected to the Republican city committee from all but about half a dizen of the 41 wards in this city.

Next to the capture of the Republican city committee the most important result of the primaries, from a local point of view, is the election of members of both branches of councils, who will co-operate with the Ashbridge administration for the balance of the term of the present mayor. Heretofore councils were dominated by the Martin-Porter combine, but now Mar-Having a Great Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

of councils was Martin's stronghold with the corporations, and he had almost unlimited supplies of transportation for his friends and supporters. Republicans in the interior of the state will, however, be most interested in the complexion of the Philadelphia delegation to the Republican national and state conventions. THE NATIONAL DELEGATES.

Philadelphia, with five congressional districts, will have ten district delegates in the Republican national convention, and not one of these will be inimical to Colonel Quay's leadership. All but one are pronounced supporters of the Beaver statesman, and that one, who hails from David Martin's ward, is a leading manufacturer, who has not been identified with either faction, and it is quite probable that he will be found co-operating with the friends of the regular organization in the election of the member of the Republican national committee and in other matters which the delegation to the national convention will have to consider and dispose of when they meet here in June next.

All the conventions will meet tomorrow, and there will be no opposition to the election of the following as delegates to the Republican national

First congressional district, Israel W. Durham and General Henry H. Bingham; Second district, United States Senator Boies Penrose and David H. Lane; Third district, Joseph H. Klemmer, who holds the position of harbor master under the Stone administration, and Select Councilman James B. Anderson, who has for years been an intimate friend of Colonel Quay; Fourth district, A. S. L. Shields, who s Colonel Quay's counsel, and Charles F. Kindred, whose two members of the legislature voted for Quay until the end of the senatorial contest; Fifth district. Isaac Schlicter, who was named at the instance of Colonel Powers, and John H. Bromley, the big manufacturer, from Martin's ward.

It will thus be seen that the Beaver statesman has no ocasion to complain of the outcome of the election of district national delegates. Philadelphia expects to have the naming of two of the eight delegates-at-large to the national convention, and the leaders of the local organization have agreed upon James Elverson, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, and former Senator Charles A. Porter for delegatesat-large. As the supporters of the state organization will tomorrow elect the delegates from all but two, and possibly one, of the 27 legislative districts, to the Republican state convention, the change in local political conditions will thus be quite pronounced.

A Long Sentence.

The tribunal of Modica, in the Sicilian province of Syracuse, recently pronounced a sentence which is declared to have no parallel in the judicial annals of Italy, as it has probably none in those of any other country.

A man named Lupo Salvatore of Coniso had passed himself off as an advocate and had with consummate skill committed 63 different acts of serious fraud, in which he succeeded in using the machinery of the law. He had forged the signatures of the president and judges of the high court, of the king's procurator and of the chancellor of the court. From this last mentioned official he had even, with splendid audacity, stolen for a short time the seal of the chancery, which he needed to give effect to his fraudulent documents.

The sentence is even more remarkable than the crime. Salvatore was condemned to three years' imprisonment on each of the 63 cases, which brings the total of the sentence to 189 years, though the longest incarceration which the convict can be legally made to undergo is 30 penalty inflicted is in each case the minimum for the offense. Had the court decided upon the maximum, which is ten years, the aggregate term of imprisonment would have been 630 years.

INSURGENTS ARE PROPERLY REBUKED

Fair Minded Men Commend the Speech of Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts.

QUAY CASE ON ITS MERITS.

That Is the Only Honorable Way to Pass Upon the Question as to the Legality of the Governor's Action.

(Special Correspondence.) Harrisburg, Jan. 9.—Attorney Gen-eral John P. Elkin, who made the masterly argument in support of the appointment of Colonel Quay by Governor Stone to the United States senate, is naturally deeply interested in the outcome of the case of the Beaver statesman, which will be voted upon shortly in the senate. General Elkin read with much satisfaction the speech delivered by the venerable and highly respected representative of Massachusetts in the United States senate, Senator George F. Hoar, a few days ago, in which he severely arraigned the politicians of the insurgent Republican movement in Pennsylvania for the methods they have resorted to in their efforts to prevent the seating of Colonel Quay. This was undoubtedly one of the most pointed and timely rebukes that could have been administered to the members of the Flinn-Martin-Wanamaker combine, that have been following with venomous spirit the nominee of the Republican caucus of the legislature of Pennsylvania ever since he was declared to be the unanimous choice of that caucus at Harrisburg for United States senator from Pennsylvania last winter.

SENATOR HOAR SPEAKS. In this speech, delivered on the floor of the senate, Senator Hoar, among other things, said: "Mr. President, I ask leave of the senate to make a brief statement, not exactly a personal explanation, but in the nature of one. It will take but two or three minutes, and I think it will be a matter which will probably relieve all senators."

Senator Hoar was given unanimous consent to proceed. He said:

"I receive in my mail daily a good many letters, and I dare say the same is true of all the members of the senate, appealing to me with great earnestness to vote to deny a seat in the senate to a gentleman from Pennsylvania who claims a seat by reason of an appointment made in the recess of the legislature by the governor of that state. Some of the writers are Quakers-members of the Society of Friends. Others are evidently philanthropic persons, and I am to assume are good judges of character, because their letters are full of personal compliments to myself.

INSURGENTS THROW MUD. At this exhibition of dry humor on the part of the venerable Massachusetts senator there was a general laugh, in which even the presiding officer, Senator Frye, joined. Continuing Senator Hoar said:

"The proposition, however, is that I must vote-and they are surprised at my having any doubt about it-to deny a seat in this body to the gentleman who claims it under an appointment on the grounds of certain charges that they make against him in regard to his personal character and fitness for "A good many yearsago I investigated the question of the right of a governor to appoint, and during the past 15 years I suppose I have made eight or ten elaborate speeches in favor of the proposition that whenever in a vacation of the legislature there was a vacant seat the governor had the right to fill it, and I have made three or four committee reports in favor of that proposition. Now, what these gentlemen ask me to do is, in substance, this: "The senate is the court or judge of the elections of senators. I am one of the sworu judges, and these worthy gentlemen are asking me to stuff the ballot box and make a false return in my capacity as a sworn judge of elections, because they think the governor of the state ought to have appointed somebody else. "That is the attitude which these worthy gentlemen are taking, and I see that some newspapers of wide circulation in my own state and a good many in the state affected take the same view of the case. Of course, the same principle would require senators, if the legislature should elect this gentleman or some other against whom has elected him.

"If the governor has no right to appoint or the legislature no right to elect, then, of course, we do not admit the claimant. But if the governor has the right to appoint or the legislature the right to elect and we declare that the governor has not appointed him or the legislature has not elected him, when they have, we are doing exactly what is done by ballot box stuffers and election judges who propose to make

"I hope this little statement of mine, in which I am sure every member of this body without exception will concur, will answer as a reply to the great batch of letters which I am getting."

Senator Hoar's remarks were received with evident approval by his colleagues. The idea of persons who have never even seen Senator Quay and know nothing about him, writing to senators who have served with him for years and have frequently commented upon his great ability, and telling his old colleagues that he is unfit for senatorial duties seemed to strike the senate as the height of absurdity.

THAT COMMITTEE REPORT As was expected, a majority of the committee on privileges and elections voted against the seating of Colonel Quay, the vote being three to four against a resolution in his favor. The three who voted to recognize the appointment of the governor were Senators Chandler, chairman of the committee, Hoar and McComas, all Republicans, and those in the negative were Senator Harris, Pettus, Coffey and Barrows, all Democrats, except Barrows, although Harris is looked

It digests what you eat and cures all forms of stomach trouble. It never all forms of stomach trouble. It never fails to give immediate relief in the worst

Much ado has been made by Colonel Quay's opponents over this vote, but as it is exactly as was counted by Colonel Quay's friends, the action of the committee did not affect the situation in the slightest degree. At a dinner given by Colonel Quay on Saturday last, at which a number of senators were present, among them Senator Hanna, there was entire confidence expressed in the outcome being entirely satisfactory to Colonel

GUFFEY AND WANAMAKER.

In the preparations for the coming state convention Republicans who have the interest of their party at heart are looking with expressions of disgust upon certain of the insurgent leaders who make no concealment of their affiliations with the Guffey Democrats, and who are already admitting their defeat in the Republican organization. They are scheming to make fusion nominations with the Democrats and the Prohibitionists to elect members of the legislature who will be in sympathy with the Wanamaker-Guffey alllance, the object of which is the election of either John Wanamaker or Colonel James M. Guffey to the United States senate from Pennsylvania. Guffey believes in spending his time and his cash disrupting the Republican organization, so that the election of a Democrat as United States senator will be made possible. Wanamaker looking a long way ahead, can figure out that even if a Democrat should be elected to succeed Quay in the United States senate, the present organization of the Republican party would be severed to such an extent that he would have a chance to win a seat in the senate when Senator Penrose's term expires. That place would naturally go to an eastern man, and with the long headed business instincts of a Wanamaker it is easy to imagine how an ambitious citizen of the Wanamaker type would consider it a good investment to help the Guffey Democrats now, so that the path might be made smooth for himself later on. Business is business, whether it be in running a bargain counter or seeking to control a political organization for personal advancement.

An effort has been made to create the impression that the resignation of Resident Clerk Fetterolf, of the house of representatives is of great political significance. Fetterolf left his job on "the hill" to act as an assistant to David Martin who is chairman of the executive committee of the Republican insurgents' state organization. Fetterolf thinks he is going to fill the role of organizer, which Charles E. Voorhees had when he was identified with that combination. But Mr. Fetterolf is entitled to guess again. He is no more fitted to fill Voorhees' shoes politically than he is to take McKinley's place in the White House. When Fetterolf was one of the secretaries of the state committee he was little more than a clerk, and his personality was not recognized in the organization. Fetterolf's brother was a member of the house of representatives in the recent session of the legislature, and it was assumed upon the former's election to the resident clerkship that the brother would co-operate with the leaders of the regular Republican organization. This he did not do, but affiliated with the insurgents from the outset. The result was that Clerk Fetterolf continued to be nothing but a clerk, and he was not taken into the confidence of the stalwart leaders. He has now gravitated to where he properly belongswith the insurgents-and it is not expected that he is going to startle the commonwealth with his leadership. He has been either for and against Quay so many times that his influence has

"I've slept under a shed with the ther-'way below zero," said the mometer tramp, "and I've gone two long days with nothing to eat, but I'm telling you straight that when I once had $1,000 in my pocket I was worse off than at any other time I can remember. I had just been let out of the Bridewell, in Chicago, and was begging on the streets and being turned down on every hand, when I picked up a $1,000 bill on the sidewalk. I thought it was a dollar, and you bet I made a hustle to get down a side street. When I dodged into a doorway, and made out that I was $1,000 ahead of the game, the sweat started from every pore and my knees knocked together. I was regularly seasick for ten minutes, and my heart thumped away until I thought it would break out. "That $1,000 meant a heap for me, you understand, but I was so excited that it was two hours before I could do any planning. The first thing was to buy a new suit of clothes, and I entered a store such charges can be maintained, to and picked them out. When I exhibited that $1,000 bill, the clothier ran to the door to call a policeman. I got away by a close squeeze, and then I realized the situation. Tramp that I was, I couldn't get it changed at a bank nor use it to make me more comfortable. If it had been a ten, I could have had lodgings and a bed, but I'm telling you that I walked the streets as hungry as a shark and slept at police stations and in lumber yards. "Under the circumstances the bill might as well have been a piece of brown paper. I tried all sorts of dodges to get it busted, but it was no go. Every time I showed it I ran the risk of arrest. I offered a butcher $100 to get it changed, but he refused to have anything to do with it. I'd have sold it for half price and been glad to, but there was no such thing as making a deal. Finally, in despair, I went to one of the newspaper offices and looked up the advertisements for the week past. The loser had advertised, and I went to his office in a big building and gave up the bill. The re-ward was $50, but he counted out $10 on top of that and said: "'I wouldn't have believed there was such honesty in the world. You could have kept the bill as well as not."

"He took down my name and all that and gave the affair away to the reporters. They wrote me up as the 'Honest Tramp' and had my picture in the papers, but you may guess I didn't enjoy much. I had $60 in place of $1,000, and as for my honesty, it was all bosh. I returned the bill because I had to, and though I'm hungry and dead broke and don't know where to turn in for the night I'm not looking for any more big finds Something with a figure "2" on the corner will just about fit my vest pocket."-Boston Herald.

Secret of the Cowboy's Coolness In the Face of Apparent Peril.

"One of the slickest things I ever saw in my life," said a veteran army officer the other day, "was a cowboy stopping a cattle stampede. A herd of about 600 or 800 had got frightened at something and broke away pell mell with their tails in the air and the bulls at the head of the procession. But Mr. Cowboy didn't get excited at all when he saw the herd was going straight for a high bluff, where they would certainly tumble down into the canyon and be killed. You know that when a herd like that gets to going it can't stop, no matter whether the enttle rush to death or not. Those in the rear crowd those ahead, and away they go. I wouldn't have given a dollar a head for that herd, but the cowboy spurred up his mustang, made a little detour, came in right in front of the herd, cut across their path at a right angle and then galloped leisurely on the edge of that bluff, halted and looked around at that wild mass of beef coming right toward him. He was as cool as a cucumber, though I expected to see him killed and was so excited I could not "Well, sir, when the leaders had got within about a quarter of a mile of him I saw them try to slack up, though they could not do it very quickly. But the whole herd seemed to want to stop, and when the cows and steers in the rear got about where the cowboy had cut across their path I was surprised to see them stop and commence to nibble at the Then the whole herd stopped, wheeled, straggled back and went to fighting for a chance to eat where the rear guard was. "You see, that cowboy had opened a big bag of salt he had brought out from the ranch to give the cattle, galloped across the herd's course and emptied the bag. Every critter sniffed that line of salt, and, of course, that broke up the stampede. But I tell you it was a queer sight to see that man out there on the edge of that bluff quietly rolling a cigarette, when it seemed as if he'd be lying under 200 tons of beef in about a minute and a half."-Chicago Record.

CONCEITS OF SOME MEN. The Actor Speaks His Little Piece

on That Subject. "The newspapers are very fond of harping on the vanity of actors," said a popular comedian, who happened to be in the city the other day, "but it is nothing, I honestly believe, to the supreme self satisfaction of the average writer. A literary man can always understand literary vanity and sympathize with it, but he is apt to regard any other brand as preposterous and absurd. Why, I was talking to a dramatic critic the other day, and he showed me a letter from a pretty well known member of my own rofession. 'Here's a fellow with a frightful case of big head,' he exclaimed ironically, 'and yet, by Jove! he can't write three lines of decent English to save his soul!"

"Now, I claim that that is a fair example of the journalistic point of view. The average professional writer is prone to gauge folk in other lines by their literary facility and is really amused that a chap can find anything to be vain about as long as he can't sling ink. If that isn't monstrous conceit, I'll eat my derby. It is ten times worse than the poor play er, who struts around like a peacock, but never dreams of sneering at his critic because the critic can't act.

"This reminds me, by the way, of a newspaper friend of mine in Chicago who was sent to interview a wealthy pork packer and came away mad as blazes because the magnate had tried to patronize him. "The ignorant chump!" he said bitterly. T'd like to see him tackle my job!' That evening I met the pork packer at the Calumet club, and it seemed that he, too, was displeased over the encounter. 'He's a very impudent whippersnapper, he remarked in describing the reporter. 'I'll bet he min't got sense enough to trim a side of meat!"

What Makes Him Very Weary.

I cannot think that I am by nature or by training ungaliant. A fashionable birthday book, in copies of which I cannot inscribe my autograph too frequently or too gladly, assures me that I am "full of reverence for a true woman," and as we invariably become what we are described as being I feel that nothing now would persuade me to be unhandsome to the sex, and yet I know not by what diabolical remnant of a barbarous atavism I have to confess that the exaggerated thesis of feminism exasperates me beyond words. What is so luciously termed, in adoring publishers' advertisements, "a masterpiece of sex-ual female fiction," makes me positively unwell, not with indignation at its immorality (its morals, poor thing, are of the least possible importance), but at its preposterous vulgar futility. Yet the cliches of the old gallantry oppress us still, and a man cuts as poor a figure in onvosing the extreme feminism as he does in refusing his seat in a crowded omnibus to a hard featured woman in bloomers. Accordingly the feminists have it almost their own way except when duty calls a man to the Spartan protest of the ballot box .- Edmund Gosse in North American Review.
