REEDER SELECTS NEW QUARTERS.

More Desirable Building For the Republican State Committee.

STALWART YOUNG REPUBLICANS.

They Are Lining Up With the Party Organization in Preparation for the Republican National Conven-

(Special Correspondence.) Philadelphia, March 13.-General Frank Reeder, chairman of the Republican state committee, came to town a few days ago for the purpose of selecting new headquarters for the Republican state committee. The lease on the present quarters, on Walnut street below Thirteenth, will expire shortly, and as it is the intention of the owners of the property to tear the structure down and rebuild for an apartment house General Reeder determined to lose no time in securing other desirable quarters. After an inspection of several sites he finally made a satisfactory arrangement with the owner of the premises formerly occupied by the Utopian club, a well known social organization of this city. This property is a four story brick structure originally intended for a residence, and it was so used for a number of years. General Reeder is having the building refitted so that several branches of the state committee work may be properly accommodated. When the alterations in the building are completed it will be one of the best equipped and most desirable political headquarters in the country REEDER'S INNOVATION.

It is noteworthy that to General Reeder must be given credit for the idea of having permanent headquarters for the state committee, instead of following the practice of former years and locating in a hotel for a few weeks prior to each election. After each campaign the state chairman some years ago would bundle up the documents of the party and cart them off to a storage warehouse or to his own offices until they were needed in the following canvass. General Reeder declared when he first assumed the state chairmanship eight years ago that the great Republican organization of Pennsylvania should have a permanent home where its party councils could be held if desired and where its valuable list of active Republicans. state, county and vigilant committeemen, campaign documents and other data could be carefully arranged and safely stored and be available for immediate use at any time, General Reeder selected the present headquarters of the state committee, which have been occupied since 1892, and it is worthy of comment that since these headquarters were secured the Republican party in Pennsylvania has not had a single candidate on the state ticket defeated and the majorities for the Republican party in the state have been steadily increasing until they frequently represent more than the total Democratic vote. General Reeder's idea in taking a whole house for the state committee is that the active Republicans of the state, no matter from what county whether near to or far away from Philadelphia, can always, when there is a campaign under way, feel perfectly welcome at state headquarters and nces for consultations with the state chairman or any of his assistants, with assurances of perfect privacy such as could never be guaranteed at a hotel, where the public at large have access. The new quarters are located at 1417 Locust street, about half a block west of the Academy of Music, which is at the corner of Broad and Locust streets. It is convenient to the Pennsylvania, Reading and B. and O. rallroads, and during the Republican national convention gathering here in June next the Republican national committee will hold forth but half a block away, at the Hotel Walton, STALWART YOUNG REPUBLICANS.

The arrangements for the Republican national convention are progressing favorably. Mayor Ashbridge has secured nearly three-fourths of the guarantee fund of $100,000 which was prom ised to National Chairman Hanna, and the work of refitting the Export Exposition building will be begun in a few days. The plans of the Republican clubs of this city for the entertainment of the visitors are being perfected, and the indications are that Philadelphia will surpass the efforts of any convention city in this particular. J. Hampton Moore, president of the State League of Republican Clubs, is at the head of the local organization, and he is co-operating with Mayor Ashbridge in all the arrangements. There will be many clubs from the interior of Pennsylvania take part in the demonstrations during the national convention week, and a number of them will have uniformed delegations.

The occasion will be made one that will be memorable in the annals of stalwart Republican politics. With the presence of Chairman Hanna, Senator Platt, of New York, former National Chairman Carter, Senator Elkins, Senator Foraker and others of the stalwart Republican leaders there will be an inspiration to the party loving Republicans of the Keystone state. The insurgents, caucus bolters and party wreckers will be entirely out of place at this gathering. The young Republicans of Pennsylvania will avail themselves of this exceptional opportunity to attend a Republican national convention, and they are expected to flock here in great numbers. They are already getting in line throughout the state to be in touch with their party organization. The guerrillas of the Flinn-Martin combine, who have no respect for party organization and who recognize the rules of the party only when it is to their personal interest to do so, are finding out that the young Republicans of this state do not propose to follow their selfish leadership, but that they are going along with the regulars and will be found working with them at the primary elections, and when the national convention meets they will come here in the ranks

(Special Correspondence.)

Harrisburg, March 13,-There has been considerable discussion of the question of the propriety of the Republican organizations of the several counties of the state insisting upon candidates for nomination for congress, the state senate and the assembly pledging themselves if elected to abide by the action of Republican caucuses. It is manifest that those who oppose such action have an ulterior purpose in so doing. Throughout the entire state there has not been a single Republican county committee which has declined to adopt such a resolution whenever it has been offered. The latest county to act in this urday last, through the Republican county committee, decided to make every aspirant for congressional or state legislative nominations append his signature to a pledge to abide by the action of all Republican caucuses.

The offering of a motion of this character was quite a surprise to the local insurgent Republicans. They did not expect anything of the kind in Lebanon, where they thought they were in control of affairs political. Their success in a previous contest in the county made them imagine that they

He accordcustom and sowing discord in the Re-long will always advocate the holding of the caucus to preserve the integrity and advance the interests of such or-publican ranks. When men are to be placed in office in the various counties of the commonwealth primary elections are held. A primary election is really a caucus. Voters choose either delegates to a convention, or, in some counties, directly between candidates. When these candidates once have been nominated they become the candidates of the entire party. There is no other way of selecting them, and when party voters refuse to be governed by the will of the majority they become bolters. It is just as necessary for party caucuses to be held at Harrisburg when a United States senator is to be elected as it is for counties to hold primaries or for congressmen to caucus over the selection of a speaker. In the last legislative session a regular caucus of Republican members was called, and Senator Quay was made the nominee. In no other way could the wishes of the majority have been discovered. Certain enemies of Quay refused to consent to majority rule, and formed a bolting party of their own. The result was chaos. It is now proposed by the insurgents to set up candidates in various districts who, while pretending | 3818 te be Republicans, will refuse to unite with the Republican majority unless that majority should happen to go their

Such methods do not commend themselves to honest men. If a candidate takes a party nomination it is his duty to sink his individual preference and abide by the majority decision. If it were not for the caucus 20 different Republican candidates might be named for senator, and in such a state of affairs it might well be that the Democrats would elect their candidate to office. As a matter of fact, it is very well known that the Democrats will have a candidate for senator in the next legislature, Colonel James M. Guffey, and they will act together, and it is also very well known that the insurgents, when they cannot elect men of their own way of thinking to the legislature will undertake to elect Democratic members. The insurgent movement today is a Democratic movement. Republicans of Pennsylvania must know that if they lend their aid to the nomination of candidates who will not agree to act with the majority of the Republican party that they will be giving their support directly to a Demoocrat already picked out. All Republicans have a right, as have all Democrats, to their own individual opinion and preferences, but when their party has taken a stand through a conference known as a caucus their duty is to obey the voice of the majority. A member who sets his own opinion above the opinion of the majority of his party associates after a fair and square vote has made the majority will manifest omes a mere party wrecker.

WHERE M'KINLEY LEADS The Republican caucus in Washington fixed upon the terms of the Puerto Rican bill and President McKinley, good Republican that he is, refrained from pressing his own personal views, and gave all his influence to the adoption of the caucus measure. Where President McKinley leads no genuine Republican in Pennsylvania need fear to follow. President McKinley believes in the caucus, for it is the only way by which a great political party can act unitedly and successfully. Men in Pennsylvania claiming to be Repubwould have everything their own way. Heans who refuse to follow McKinley They have discovered that there has are not Republicans at all. In advocating candidates for the legislature who will not abide by Republican caucuses they are advocating party wrecking and, could they have their way, the legislature would be handed over to the Democrats, and all important legislation would be made impossible.

No candidate for the legislature in Pennsylvania should be nominated unless he will agree to abide by the deciprinciple ignored all would be discord sions of the Republican majority. SUSQUEHANNA-BRADFORD-

WAYNE. With counties like Lebanon following the lead of Indiana, Chester and other counties where the stalwarts have recently won great popular victories, there can not be much consolation in current events for men of the Flinn-Martin school of rule or ruin politics in Pennsylvania. Following the great stalwart sweep at the Republican primaries of Mercer, Lawrence. Armstrong, Bradford and Lancaster, other counties have been lining up with the regular organization. Susquebanna held a Republican coun ty convention last week at Montrose, and unanimously renominated George E. Tiffany for state representative who throughout the late session of the legislature voted for the Republican caucus nominee for United States sen ator. They placed on the ticket with him another stalwart Republican George H. Hill. They named three delegates to the state convention, R. B. Little, George Palmer and G. S. Tin gle, all of whom are closely identified with the regular Republican organization The convention went on record in favor of the renomination of Congressman Wright. There was not even show of insurgent opposition. On the same day the Bradford county Republican convention met at Towanda to carry out the instructions of the Republican voters who participated at the primaries. It was a great gathering of loyal Republicans. They adopted ringing resolutions indorsing the administrations of President McKinley and Governor Stone, and especially commended the fidelity with which the officials of the state have discharged their duties. C. S. Means, M. C. Holcomb. O. B. Ballard, L. H. March and G. Lancaster were chosen delegates to the Republican state convention, and were instructed to advocate the nomination of E. B. Hardenbergh for auditor general. Instructions were given 2835 the conferrers to support John H. Brown for presidential elector and F. L. Kinner for delegate to the Republi- 5142
