

REEDER IS READY FOR THE CAMPAIGN

The Republican Chairman Prepares for an Aggressive Canvass in the State.

CHAT WITH THE CHAIRMAN.

The Keystone State Will Give an Unprecedented Majority for McKinley and the Whole Ticket, With Many Republican Gains in the Legislature.

(Special Correspondence.)

Philadelphia, May 15.—Gen. Frank Reeder, chairman of the Republican state committee, was in this city yesterday supervising the improvements being put upon the new headquarters of the state committee, 147 Locust street. The headquarters are now practically finished, the different offices have been assigned to General Reeder's staff of assistants and the task of getting the party organization in shape for the approaching campaign is already under way. While aside from this preliminary work little can be done until after the Republican national convention next month, General Reeder has the plan of campaign carefully mapped out, and he proposes that the policy of the party organization shall be aggressive from the very outset of the canvass. He is going to be in touch with the Republican national committee and the Republican congressional committee, and the county committees through the state will be constantly advised as to the policy that is to be pursued in meeting every move that may be made by the Bryanites and their Populist allies.

The districts now elect him by the Bryan men and the leaders of the most influential wing of the Populist organization have a perfect understanding as to the coming campaign and that they intend to make a determined and desperate effort to capture the presidency by fair means or foul. They are anxious to secure any advantage that might come through labor troubles in different sections of the country, and there is reason to believe that the Democratic and Populist managers are not neglecting any opportunity to encourage a feeling of unrest among workmen and prompt them to make demands for increases in wages. There has been little heard of reductions in wages since McKinley's election. The movement has been upward. Many have had large increases in their wages and others have had their hours of labor shortened. There is work for all who seek it, and the condition of general prosperity in which the country finds itself can fairly be attributed to the present Republican national administration.

REEDER LOOKS FOR GAINS.

General Reeder was not inclined to go into details as to his plans for the coming campaign, but he made no secret of his belief that Pennsylvania will show even an increase over her unprecedented large majority of the last presidential campaign. In the general Republican sweep he looks for success for Republican county tickets generally and for Republican gains in the legislature. He is firmly impressed with the idea that the scheme of the Democrats for fusion deals with disgruntled Republicans will be a failure. There were a number of Republican candidates for the legislature defeated by such methods last time. This will not happen in a presidential year, and with the people thoroughly advised as to the aims of the Democratic leaders who are carrying out the orders of Millionaire Guffey to elect him to the United States senate through a division of the Republican legislators.

GAME OF THE DEMOCRATS.

The stalwart Republicans of the state are not being fooled by the insurgents. They are fully aware of the fact that there is a secret organization of men identified with the Flinn-Martin leadership who are quietly at work in many counties opening negotiations with the Democratic managers. The Democrats know that if left to themselves they could accomplish nothing in the coming campaign, so that they gladly welcome the overtures from the insurgents. Following Guffey's directions they are planning to defeat Republican candidates with the aid of the insurgent cash and intrigues. A conspicuous instance of this is found in this city, where Colonel Guffey has been dealing with the Donnelly-Ryan Democratic organization. Guffey has gotten them to come out with public declarations in favor of fusion on the legislature and to pledge themselves to support insurgent nominees wherever fusion tickets can be nominated with any hope of success. Donnelly makes no bones about his purpose to form a coalition with the Martin Republicans on the legislative tickets, in the hope of dividing the Republican organization of this city, so as to make the election of Democrats to city offices possible. It has been a long time since the Democrats have elected a county officer in Philadelphia other than the minority commissioner to which they are entitled under the law. Donnelly says that the greater the dissensions among Republicans the easier it will be for the Democrats to secure patronage, and that as a stalwart Democrat he proposes to sow all the seeds of discord he possibly can in the ranks of the Republican voters. This is, of course, natural talk from a Democrat, but it must not be pleasing to the Republican voters of the commonwealth.

An Epidemic of Whooping Cough.

Last winter during an epidemic of whooping cough my children contracted the disease, having severe coughing spells. We had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy very successfully for a long time and naturally turned to it at this time and found it relieved the cough and effected a complete cure.—John E. Clifford, Proprietor, Norwood House, Norwood, N. Y. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

who believe in recognizing the will of the majority as a fundamental doctrine of their party. The Democrats have all to gain and nothing to lose in this game of practical politics. The Republican voters of Pennsylvania are beginning to appreciate this fact, and they will not be gotten to give encouragement and assistance to the political enemy merely to satisfy the ambition of a few disgruntled members of their party who are following a selfish and personal insurgent leadership.

MUST WIN CONGRESSMEN.

Word has been received from the chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee that there must be Republican gains from Pennsylvania at next November's election of members of congress. The Democrats are talking quite boastfully at Washington about their chances of carrying the next house of representatives and securing the power and patronage that goes with the organization of that body. Experience has taught that congressional elections are frequently involved in much uncertainty, even when there is no doubt of how the country is going to vote on the presidential issue. The national Republican leaders propose to bend every energy toward winning every doubtful congressional district, and they look for not less than four gains from Pennsylvania. There were ten Democratic candidates for congress elected in this state to the present house. Since the election Representative Joseph C. Sibley has repudiated the Democracy, and he was recently nominated for congress by the Republicans of his district. The others who were elected as Democrats to the present house from this state were Representatives McAleer, Barber, Green, Polk, Davenport, Ryan, Ziegler, Gaston and Hall. The Republicans of the Third district of this city declare that McAleer is not to have another term, and that he will be succeeded by a Republican. Select Congressman Henry Clay is the only Republican so far mentioned for this nomination, and should he be nominated a determined effort will be made to elect him.

The districts now elect him by the Bryan men and the leaders of the most influential wing of the Populist organization have a perfect understanding as to the coming campaign and that they intend to make a determined and desperate effort to capture the presidency by fair means or foul. They are anxious to secure any advantage that might come through labor troubles in different sections of the country, and there is reason to believe that the Democratic and Populist managers are not neglecting any opportunity to encourage a feeling of unrest among workmen and prompt them to make demands for increases in wages. There has been little heard of reductions in wages since McKinley's election. The movement has been upward. Many have had large increases in their wages and others have had their hours of labor shortened. There is work for all who seek it, and the condition of general prosperity in which the country finds itself can fairly be attributed to the present Republican national administration.

PENNSYLVANIA WIN THE CONVENTION.

Many Prominent Men Among the National Delegates From This State.

ALL ENTHUSIASTICALLY FOR MCKINLEY

Many Thousands from the Interior Counties Will Be Present as Spectators and a Large Number of Clubs Will Take Part in the Big Parade.

(Special Correspondence.)

Harrisburg, May 15.—Pennsylvania will be well represented at the coming Republican national convention. She will have next to the largest delegation on the floor of the convention, and although there is not apt to be any contest in which her 64 votes will figure as an important factor, the character and influence of the men in the delegations will be felt in the committee rooms and in the discussions of party policies at the hotels and in the private conferences of the party leaders. There will be found among the delegates from the Keystone state men of affairs in their respective districts and men who have gained prominence in the professions and in the commercial world and others who are identified with the immense manufacturing interests of the commonwealth. Colonel M. S. Quay, who is one of the delegates-at-large, will head the delegation, and he will be re-elected to represent Pennsylvania in the Republican national committee. He is at present a member of the executive committee of that body.

In a number of cases the political leaders of districts have stepped aside this year in order to allow business men, manufacturers and other admirers of President McKinley who do not ordinarily figure in politics to go to the national convention. It is a true blue McKinley delegation, and there is no need of instructions from the state or district conventions to bind the members of the delegations to McKinley. Several districts have yet to elect their representatives. In the Cumberland-Adams-York district there is a contest over the national delegates. A dispute arose as to the representation to which York county was entitled in the conference. Both sides named Charles H. Mullin, of Cumberland, as one of the national delegates. For the other place Dr. Charles A. Dale, of York, is contesting the claim of John L. Hill, Jr., of Adams. United States Senator Boies Penrose, Secretary of the Commonwealth Grist, Congressman Bingham, former Congressman Williams, Israel W. Durham and David H. Lane, the Philadelphia leaders, are among the district delegates. Governor Stone and Attorney General Elkin, who were proposed for delegates-at-large, declined to allow the use of their names, as they wished the honors to go to others.

Here is the list of the Pennsylvania national delegates as far as reported to the state committee to date:

Delegates-at-Large—M. S. Quay, Beaver, Pa.; John E. Steel, Greensburg; Frank Reeder, Easton; William Connell, Scranton; B. W. Green, Emporium; Charles A. Porter, Philadelphia; James Elverson, Philadelphia; John Leisinger, Upper Merion.

Alternates-at-Large—J. Preston Thom-

Reporters' numbers.

With the charitable purpose of presenting a psychological explanation for the inaccuracy which all too often marks the work of perfectly honest reporters the Christian Register says: "When one is listening to a discourse, two things occupy his mind at the same time—the one, the discourse to which he is listening; the other, the train of thought suggested to him by the discourse. The second runs along in his mind parallel with the first and frequently is remembered and is reported in place of the discourse, which is forgotten."

There is something, perhaps a good deal, in this theory, but however well it may serve as an explanation its utility as an excuse is of the smallest. The simplest way out of the difficulty is to lay the blame on Dame Nature, whose hostility to exact duplications of any kind is illustrated in every inch of her broad domain. No two men ever heard or saw a thing alike, and probably no two ever will. Reporters are no more fallible than other people; indeed, their accuracy is far above the average. They, however, have a thousand critics where other folks have one, and not one of the thousand ever passes over their errors of apprehension or expression in kindly silence.—New York Times.

Her Niece, Gentle Way.

She was a pretty girl, pretty enough to attract the attention of two young men who were walking up West End avenue. And she was expostulating with a small fox terrier which was tugging at his strap.

"It's nice to see a girl talking in that confidential way to a pet, don't you think?" said one of the young men.

"Decidedly I do," was the rejoinder.

By this time the pretty girl was almost abreast of the two, and her sweet and earnest tones were distinctly audible.

"Now, Teddy," she was saying, "if you'll behave, I'll break your head for you."

The young men passed on in silence.—New York Mail and Express.

No Longing.

"Don't you often long for the freedom of your former life?" asked the visitor at the prison.

"Not much," replied the convict. "I was not here for having four wives."—Philadelphia South American.
