Colonel Quay Tells Why He Is Proud of His Native State and Makes Some Comment About Men Who Smirch the Fair Fame of the Commonwealth.

(Special Correspondence.)

Harrisburg, Oct. 30 .- The reappearance of John Wanamaker on the stump in support of the insurgent-Democratic cause has evoked severe criticism of his political intrigues and his methods in attempting to disrupt the Republican organization.

The fact is recalled that he has antagonized every Republican candidate for a state office for some years and that his actions have been purely gaided by his personal ambitions. His defeats for United States senator and for the Republican nomination for governor were not accomplished until after he had spent many thousands of dollars, enough to make many a man independently rich for life.

There are few counties in the state in which Wanamaker money has not been spent at some time or another. His appearance at this time as an advocate of fusion is not apt to bring about any more serious consequences to the Republican party than did his support of Creasy, the Democratic candidate against Col. Barnett for statetreasurer, or of Jenks, the Democratic candidate against Governor Stone.

COLONEL QUAY ON FUSION.

Apropos of the latest moves of the fusionists Col. Quay made a speech at Phoenixville, in which, among other things, he said:

"The fusion alliance being without common principle is hard put to for a platform. In one community where there have been minor election frauds it shouts for ballot reform. In another: where dairymen are interested in the price of butter, it complains that the state authorities have but five or six hundred prosecutions instituted for violation of the aleomargarine act where they might have more. At other points they guarrel with the veto of one million dollars of the school appropriations, and everywhere they join in the cry of the Democratic Bowery parrot of 1888; 'Quay is a bad man. In Pottstown the other night the slogan was 'Good government.' Penn sylvania was declared a misgoverned state and a debanched and plundered state. "Good government is to take taxes from the shoulders of the ill-paid agricultural interests and place it upon corporations and owners of stocks and moneys at Interest. Good government is to increase the annual school appropriations within ten years from one million to five millions, and to stud our commonwealth with institutions of learning. Good government is to pay a delat of forty millions of dollars in thirty years without oppressing our people and at the same time to spend millions in the care of our criminal and insane populations and universities and general public charities. Good government is to erect a citizen soldiery which can be thrown to any point in the commonwealth to sustain outraged law at twenty-four hours' not a drop of blood in my veins that | would be wholly controlled by the Deis not Pennsylvania blood two centurles old.

Pennsylvania is not debauched and cannot be debauched. Weak men may be bought in isolated instances, but recent experience has shown that a United States senatorship cannot be bought. The state has never been plandered nor are its public officers plunderers.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

"Pennsylvania in a whole century has not lost a single dollar by a defalcation of one of her public officials. The united fortunes of all of the heads of departments at Harrisburg, from the governor down, added to the fortune of our United States senator and my own will not in total equal one year's income of the merchant prince or the traction magnate who are the mainsprings of the fusion movement, the great teachers and treasurers of reform. The treasury of Pennsylvania is not the great fiscal institution reformers would have you believe. Under our financial system the annual rechipts of our treasury are not onefourth of the annual receipts of the city of Philadelphia. They do not more than equal the annual receipts of the city of Pittsburg or the county of Allegheny. The money is not held in the vaults at Harrisburg, but deposited according to law in the banks throughout the state, where the people have the use of H, unless the needs of the commonwealth require its withdrawal.

"Pennsylvania is honest. Her people are honest. Her officials are honest, and of all this Union of states Pennsylvania is the fairest and the happiest and the most intelligent and the bust governed. No state of all the Union has so thriven and grown in population and wealth as has she under the government of the last t ventyfive years. Railronds, mines, furnaces, iron works, meel works and factories in countless numbers have been added to our producers of wealth. Within four years, since 1896, four hundred and fifty thousand igen have been added to the roll of paid inhor in Pennsylvania.

"If this Union of states were dissolved Pennsylvania could stand alone and be a nation unto herself. Out of her own bowels she could spin the web of her prosperity. She could place in the field and clothe, equip and subsist an army of one quarter of a million of men. She could hulld at her own shipyards her own navy, plate her ships from her own armor plants, arm. them with guns from her own gun fac-tories, and send them out on the Atlantic and the great lakes.
