

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Rates—County Treasurer, $10. State Delegate, $5. County Surveyor, $5. Cash must accompany the order for announcement.

COUNTY TREASURER.

We are authorized to announce CALVIN M. ARNER, of Tionesta, as a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to Republican usages.

We are authorized to announce FREEMAN R. LANSON, of Tionesta, as a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to Republican usages.

STATE DELEGATE.

We are authorized to announce ELMER L. SUTTON, of Jenks township, as a candidate for Delegate to the Republican State Convention.

Notice.

Having announced as a candidate for the Republican nomination for County Treasurer at the coming Republican primary election desire to make the statement to the public that if nominated and elected to the said office, I will deposit the County money which comes into my hands as a public officer, in the three banks of this County in as nearly equal amounts as possible and that I will show no favoritism to any banking institution whatever.

PRICE at any price, that is, at any Boer price, is what Britons are courting.

By and by the inquiry will probably be changed to, "Who kidnaped Pat Crowe?"

QUEEN WILHELMINA has set a dangerous pace for Easter season by ordering a new $100,000 gown.

THE Czar of Russia has been given the people such a strong government that he has to sleep in a room lined with boiler-iron.

ANOTHER point of disability has been discovered between Bryan and Roosevelt. The latter would rather be Colonel than President.

COL. BRYAN refused to permit the fusion members of the Nebraska Legislature to go home last week. What about the consent of the governed?

KING EDWARD still retains his membership in the principal London clubs. Evidently he wants his dish of royalty spiced with a little fellowship.

A PARTNERSHIP between Mr. Carnegie and Count Boni de Castellane would enable the former to die much poorer and to anticipate the date a few years.

ORDINARY canned beef has been banished from the army bill of fare. The American soldier has won a place where he is entitled to roast beef, and of the best cut.

DAVID B. HILL has effectually spiced the rumor that he was politically dead. On the contrary, he intimates that he is very much alive, and expects to be in at the finish of the Democratic party.

THE capture of Aguinaldo by General Funston was a clever piece of work, and puts the famous Kansas swimmer in the list of notables along with Dewey, Hobson and Schley in the matter of great achievements incident to the little scrimmage with the Spaniards.

THE long drawn out Senatorial deadlock in the Nebraska legislature was broken last week on the day set for final adjournment, by the election of J. H. Millard of Omaha, and Governor Charles H. Dietrich, for the long and short terms respectively. Both are stalwart Republicans, and each received the full Republican vote.

At the regular meeting of the anti-Quay Republican Senators and Representatives in Harrisburg on Tuesday night, Representative McCandless, of Allegheny, offered a resolution that "The political establishment known as the 'insurgents' be and is hereby dissolved." No action was taken on the resolution and Mr. McCandless left the meeting, after explaining that the only object of the organization was the defeat of Quay, and as it had utterly failed in its purpose he knew of no reason why it should be any longer continued.

THE following appointments were made last week by the President for the middle U. S. Judicial district of Pennsylvania: W. R. Archibald of Scranton, Judge; S. J. M. McCarroll of Harrisburg Dist. Attorney and Fred C. Leonard of Coudersport, Marshall. Judge Archibald stands very high as a judge. Mr. McCarroll has been a leading lawyer at the Dauphin county bar for many years and Fred Leonard is now Marshall of the Western district. Potter county is one of the counties of the middle district, therefore he is transferred to that district and Frank M. Fuller of Fayette county is appointed to the vacancy in the western district.

Pardon Board Will Not Interfere.

The Board of Pardons at Harrisburg last week declined to commute Frank Major's sentence to life imprisonment and he must hang. The Meadville Tribune says:

"When Sheriff Scott informed Chief Major, the convicted murderer of Chief of Police McGrath, of Titusville, that the board of pardons had refused to interfere in his behalf and that this failure in securing a commutation of the death sentence meant that he must hang for his crime on April 16, the condemned man was stolidly indifferent and calmly held his peace. 'There is no difference in his actions and his remarkable nerve will do all appearances enable him to present a bold front to the terrible end. That this action is final and that Major will hang on April 16 is the consensus of opinion, although if appealed to, the governor may grant a respite. Since it has become reasonably certain that Major will hang applications by the hundreds have been made to Sheriff Scott for permission to see the execution. The applicants do not all reside in Crawford county. Several of the morbidly curious reside in Mercer, Yanagis, Erie and Warren counties. Sheriff Scott has set the exact time of the execution for 2.30 p. m.'

Editor Republican:

In school we used to repeat that line of Byron's— "Roll on, thou dark and deep blue ocean, roll!"

With all the variations of pitch, force, rate, and quality of voice. And she did roll. And what is more she continues to roll to-day just as she did after we gave that command in very rapid rate, high pitch, and rounded voice. Byron certainly knew what he was talking about when he made that statement and knew it would never be disputed only by those who had no knowledge of the sea. Since leaving New York on the 9th inst, we have had a rough sea, but no storm. There has not been a day when the white caps were not cutting up capers. Some times the sea had the appearance of the whirlpool rapids below Niagara Falls, as if the mighty monsters of the deep were disporting themselves in friendly play, or engaged in mortal combat. Again it was the long, rolling swell that did not break, but suggested the awful power of its pent up fury, should it be goaded by old Neptune's trident beyond the limit of patient endurance. The sea is awful, fearful, but fascinating beyond description. You long to cast yourself upon it in the spirit of fullest enjoyment and freedom, yet stand in awful dread of its slightest frown.

While the sea has been rough we have been fortunate in not having to face it. At first the wind was from the South, then came from the southwest, then sped us on in our way. But with all this it gave the boat an ugly motion. For two days we were cutting the waves at an angle of about 45°, so that the boat would list to port on rising the wave and to starboard in descending into the trough again. This cork-screw or sinuous motion played havoc with the passengers. Many a bright eye grew dim and cheeks grew pale, and many bearing and courageous men were changed to meekness and almost despair as the hours of Saturday afternoon wore away. I was sitting well aft on a chair for which I had paid a dollar for the privilege of occupying during the voyage, feeling a little disappointed on account of the heavy mist that shut out points of interest down the bay when I heard an exclamation and on looking forward saw several people intently gazing over the rail into the depths beneath. Some did not even get to the rail so strong was their desire to show what was in them. Among those resting on the guard rail and looking intently into the sea was a young lady, like the ladies of Belgium's capitol on the eve of the battle of Waterloo "who but a few hours before were blushing at the praise of their own loveliness," who reminded me of a little verse I heard a few years ago. Here it is:

I am leaning o'er the rail, I am feeling very pale, Am I looking for a whale? No, I'm not. I'm my papa's only daughter, Casting bread upon the water In a way I hadn't ought to, That's what.

One of the sailors speaking to another about the rough sea that immediately overtook us, said: "It is hard on the passengers. No sooner did we cut loose from the dock than we poked our nose into the ocean." "Yes," said one of the passengers standing by, "and we poked our noses over the guard rail."

There really was an unusual amount of seasickness. For several days the dining room tables were nearly empty, and some of those who came to the table were not able to eat. Even yet, Thursday, on account of the continuous rolling of the ship, some of the passengers are not at themselves, but nearly all are in good spirits again.

For a wonder I was not sick, not even in the slightest degree. Of course, a correspondent is supposed not to get sick and I was warned very strictly in this matter before leaving home, but I can make this statement without mental reservation or qualms of conscience. I only know very few other cabin passengers who got along so well. I had to sustain the dignity of little Forest.

Since coming on board I learned the Hohenzollern (formerly Kaiser Wilhelm II) has long been known as "Rolling Billy" and I think she has fairly earned her name. She just rolled from one side to the other as though she had learned, as one man remarked, the art of perpetual motion. For two or three days this was regular, dipping from one side to the other and back again would take the time occupied in counting twenty at a medium rate. It made me a little nervous at first but I got used to it and don't notice it now. Some of the passengers say, "Oh, if she would only stop." But she's a good boat, stanchly built and as long as we have no storm I do not care. Her record has been good. The captain is a splendid specimen of mental and physical manhood and the crew is sober and courteous, so that there is everything to assure one. Besides,

"He plants his footsteps on the sea, And rides upon the storm."

The first thing we saw after leaving New York was on Thursday, when we passed the S. S. Aller, which left Genoa on Saturday. She gave us a left berth, passing perhaps five miles on the south, and was throwing spray at a great rate bumping along in the teeth of a strong wind. Our captain sent up signal flags but I saw no response from the Aller. This meeting caused great excitement on our ship.

"Ships that pass And speak each other in passing."

Our next excitement was the passing of the Azores on Friday. Lunch was served at 11:30 to give us the benefit of this scene which I think I shall never forget. When first sighted I could only see what looked like a dark cloud outlined against a hazy sky, and could scarcely believe it when told this was one of the islands. I was looking for a low lying land, like Staten Island, and was not prepared for a revelation the next few hours had in store. These islands belong to Portugal and stretch through about 400 miles in mid Atlantic, 1080 miles from Newfoundland, 700 miles from Portugal and 1147 from the Lizard. There are nine of these islands with an aggregate area of 700 square miles and a population of 239,790. These are of volcanic origin and rise to the height in places of 5000 to 7000 feet.

On account of the rough sea our boat stood well off yet near enough to see the hillsides with hedge fences and well cultivated fields which were as green as though it were May or June. The houses are all white—probably stone and white-washed, and are grouped together in villages and cities of several thousand people. Two of these cities were close enough to see the buildings very distinctly. Churches, known by their spires, were very frequent along every island.

The climate is delightful ranging from 50° to 75° the year round and all kinds of fruits and grains are produced. A heavy mist hung over the islands concealing the tops of some of them entirely from view, and frequent summer showers fell all the afternoon. Just as darkness settled down we had passed all but one which was passed late at night.

Now just a word about the personnel of our party. "The Interior's Pilgrimage to the Orient." It is made up of people from Cal., Texas, Mo., Tenn., Iowa, Ill., Ind., Ohio, Pa. and N. Y., a cosmopolitan but homogeneous lot. There are eight preachers—one Baptist, two Methodist and five Presbyterian, four laymen, and fourteen women. Only one preacher has his wife with him. Of the rest of the party, male and female, many of us are, for obvious reasons, traveling unaccompanied. It would be only natural to expect that a party of this kind would be intellectual and somewhat literary. I am sure of this last for already I have seen several of their contributing articles to the "Atlantic." They were doubtless honest but poor, for they looked relieved when the article was accepted and a check came.

Our ship has been in service for about fifteen years and is a stanch vessel. We seldom feel the action of the machinery except when near the engines or when passing over a wave the propeller is lifted out of the water. She is 520 ft. long and 35 feet at her widest point. She is manned by a crew of 230 men and has room for 450 cabin and 1500 stowage passengers. At present there are about 160 cabin and 25 or 30 stowage passengers. She is kept in perfect condition and the ventilation is ideal. The cuisine is all in variety and service any one could desire. A fine band discourses sweet music every day on the deck, and an orchestra in the music room just over our dining room entertains the dinner hour with the most beautiful music I ever heard which comes down to us through open sky light. We are awakened every morning by two members of the orchestra who go thro' the long halls playing a duet on the clarinet. It is a beautiful little tune they play and fills the newly awakened minds with sweet, pleasant thoughts. On Sabbath morning they play Luther's battle hymn—'Ein feste burg.' Words could not describe my feelings on that first Sabbath morning when the sweet liquid notes of that familiar strain fell on my ears. It was a fitting preparation for a Sabbath day's thoughts and meditations when not permitted to engage in the active service usual on that day.

We are now within a very short distance of Gibraltar, sailing under fair winds and a somewhat murky sky, which is rapidly clearing up. So I think we will have a good view of that world renowned fortress. After a few hours there we sail for Naples which we will reach on Thursday. The latter part of our voyage has been a dream. As Dr. Leeper remarked, "has one time to enjoy himself after his seasickness on a voyage of this length." He was speaking out of the fullness of his heart, for it had its own bitterness. Very sincerely,

F. J. McANICHIN, Gibraltar, Monday, March 18, 1901.

1100 REWARD, $1000. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Letter to A. B. Kelly. Tionesta, Pa.

Dear Sir: Mr. H. H. Stephenson, Cashier of Oil City (Pa.) Savings Bank writes "Nine years ago I painted my house with your paint. It wore so well, I want to use it again."

That's nothing wonderful; all we see in it is that Devore is good for nine years sometimes. There are thousands of people that know it and millions that don't.

There's the rub! We print for the mill us; we want to make paint for the millions.

Mr. Cashier, do you know that Devore lead and zinc is worth twice as much as old-fashion painter's paint, lead and oil, and costs no more? Is 100 per cent a fair profit in your business?

Three-quarters of the people paint lead and oil mixed by hand; while the U. S. Government uses lead, zinc and oil ground by machinery—same proportions as Devore lead and zinc. The majority never is right about anything.

Yours truly, F. W. DEVORE & CO., P. S.—James D. Davis sells our paint in your section.
