

Calendar for April 1901 showing days of the week and dates.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Rates-County Treasurer, $10. State Delegate, $5. County Surveyor, $3. Cash must accompany the order for announcement.

Primary-Saturday, May 4, 1901. COUNTY TREASURER.

We are authorized to announce CALVIN M. ALEXER, of Tionesta, as a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to Republican usage.

We are authorized to announce W. C. BROWN, of Jenks township, as a candidate for County Treasurer, subject to Republican usage.

STATE DELEGATE. We are authorized to announce ELMER L. SUTTON, of Jenks township, as a candidate for Delegate to the Republican State Convention.

Mr. Lanson Withdraws. I hereby withdraw my name as a candidate for the office of County Treasurer, and take this method of announcing the fact and thanking those who have given me assurances of support.

F. R. LANSON. GEN. JOHN A. LOGAN was a splendid example of the volunteer soldier. Gen. Funston is another.

His Majesty, King Edward, rules over 10,000 islands. Many of them are like Cuba he is not to be envied.

AGUINALDO ought to be forced to divulge the whereabouts of his moving capital before he is placed on full ratings.

COL. MOSBY, the ex-Confederate raider, says the South is having a substantial industrial boom. Getting solid again, eh?

It is positively announced that there is to be no coal strike this year. Of course, this is another feather in the headgear of Mr. Hanna.

It is reported in British army circles that Gen. DeWet is without guns. Those who undertake to verify it will hear a report of another kind.

OUT of respect to the memory of the late William J. Bryan, President McKinley will make no rear platform speeches on his trip to the Pacific coast.

BUFFALO will not issue a city directory this year. The Buffalo people intend to make it as hard as possible for a prospective visitor to find his relatives.

LAST week Thursday Governor Stone re-appointed Dr. Nathan C. Schaeffer superintendent of public instruction, to serve four years from April 1, 1901.

THE Czar of Russia, who sleeps in a burglar proof vault, will be in great distress some morning when he discovers that some juddy has been tampering with the combination.

WHILE President McKinley is absent from Washington the White House will undergo a thorough house cleaning. Perhaps it is this ordeal that the President is trying to escape.

THE House of Representatives at Harrisburg lost another member by death last Saturday. Hon. P. R. Cotter, one of the Democratic members of McKean county, and one of the best orators on that side of the House, died suddenly of uraemic poison.

An Oklahoma country postmaster recently sent the following notice to the Post Office Department: "Sir I wish to notify you that on next Wednesday this office will be shut as I am gone deer hunt. You kin fire me if you see fit, but I'll give you a splinter that I am the only man in the neighborhood that can ride and rite."

MR. BRYAN will notice that he will have at least two formidable rivals in the Democratic contest in 1904. One of these is Tom L. Johnson, who was elected Mayor of Cleveland, although all the rest of his ticket was defeated. The other is Carter Harrison, who was elected Mayor of Chicago Tuesday of last week for the third time.

THE New York Commercial Advertiser relates that General Funston was at the Occidental Hotel, in San Francisco, when the War Department's message requesting him to return to the Philippines was placed in his hands. "What'll you do?" asked a newspaper man who was present. "I'll telephone my wife," said the General. He did so, and ten minutes later said to the reporter: "You can say that I accept. I am turning down a good many fine offers, but if I am needed I'll go back. And then, you know, I may get a chance to catch Aguinaldo. It's been my ambition to lay my hands on that yellow boy."

MONARCHS who are compelled in self-defense to line their apartments with steel, and who put queer combinations on the locks of their rooms, lose considerable of the enjoyment of life. Nicholas II. is one of these crown wearers. The world has heard very little of the nihilists since the days, early in the reign of Alexander III., when they used to boot all night in the woods around the winter palace of the terrified monarch. The fear of assassination was present to that potentate from the day of his coronation to the time of his death. Perhaps we shall hear something about the nihilists soon again. Nicholas is a good monarch, as Czars go, but the good ones are sometimes assailed more fiercely than the bad. The emancipator of the 24,000 serfs, Alexander II., was assassinated. That was in March, 1881, just twenty years ago.

On the Way to Palestine.

NAPLES, Italy, March 22, 1901. Dear Editor-

In writing these letters I feel I am writing largely to personal friends and write accordingly. If I deal in personal reflections and go into detail, more than the general readers of your paper would care for they will have to skip over something else. As I write I see before me a long list of familiar faces - indeed I will say a whole congregation, or two of them, and then some, so I will just talk to them all at once.

I closed my last letter a few hours before reaching Gibraltar, leaving the last few moments for brief cards to friends. Although the Atlantic was rough all the way, and we really had but one day of sunshine and comparatively smooth water, it was not till we reached Gibraltar that we met with our first real disappointment. We had been promised about five hours here en shore to visit this world-renowned fortress.

As the afternoon began to wear away and all were on deck eagerly scanning the horizon for the first glimpse of land the atmosphere began to get murky, the wind to howl and the rain to fall. You can imagine our feelings. Still, hope, that blessed element that "Springs eternal in the human breast," kept us out expecting the rain to cease, and the wind to blow the mist away and then subside. Our eyes were strained to catch the first sight of the Pillars of Hercules that stand as frowning giants to guard the entrance into the eastern world. At last we saw the spray dashing on the northeast and we instinctively knew that we were on the shores of our late enemy, Spain.

As we approached nearer we could catch a faint outline through the misty air of the shores of the two continents, Europe and Africa. As we entered the bay or harbor just back of the rock, Gibraltar, a storm was raging and the sea getting very rough. We were piloted on past at least a dozen warships lying at anchor, till at last the anchors were heaved overboard.

Scarcely had the boat stopped till a whole crowd gathered on the dock waiting for the tender to carry them to land. Great was the disappointment expressed by many when the boat did not come. The captain, Hergemann, whose good judgment I most heartily approved, said it was too rough for anyone to go ashore, and that he would "lay to" all night and in the morning we would have a chance to go ashore. But in the morning the weather was no better. Twice the tender came out, once to bring on a few passengers and later to land a few who had reached their destination. Some fairly well, so little sense do some people have, and absolute lack of judgment. But he was my captain for sure after that. Finally the captain said he would not take on coal and would unload his cargo on his return. It was the first time this ever occurred. The wind had by this time somewhat subsided so that it was safe to pull out. They began to weigh anchor when the hoisting engine broke and dropped on anchor quite a distance. The other could be reached and was brought on deck by block and pulley. The other was beyond reach. We began to drift toward the other vessels and to save a collision steam was put on and we dragged the other anchor out farther into the bay where they cut the massive chain and let the anchor go to the bottom. At 12:30 we left the harbor after a delay of eighteen hours.

Now for Gibraltar itself: I can't give you my first impression for it was not very clear to myself. I was too much distracted or attracted, by the turbulence of the elements and desire to know where we were going and what they would do. Still, I saw Gibraltar all right, but it was not till morning that I had a clear and distinct view of it. Passing in from the Atlantic the bay extends north of the rock and entirely past on the east. A low-lying neck of land joins it to the main land thus making it appear to rise sheer out of the water 1400 feet. On the north and east, at the foot of the rock near the harbor is quite a town of several thousand people, all English and belonging to the garrison. On the east the rock is perpendicular as it also is on the south, as we saw when passing from the harbor into the strait. Looking at it from the strait it presents two lofty peaks at either end joined by jagged outline of rock not so high. The distance between these is half a mile. I have been a little careful about judging distances since hearing the number of guesses made on the height of the rock. It ran all the way from 100 feet to 5,000 feet. I confess the height deceived me a little.

We could see nothing of the fortification at all except a few old cannon placed on the top which I suppose were old, worn out things. We could see no evidence of the tunnels, but had we been a hostile ship I have no doubt we would have heard the evidence very quickly.

On Thursday evening being our last on shipboard and the captain's last run on this boat, as he is to be transferred to Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, the captain gave a dinner. It was a swell affair, the particulars of which I cannot give in detail, reserving it for private recital later. At the close of dinner we went on the promenade deck to find it transferred into a bower of beauty. The canvas sides had been put on and the whole was tastefully decorated with the flags of all nations, the stars and stripes having a prominent place. An extra row of electric lights had been strung up and gave the deck a decidedly brilliant air. The orchestra was stationed at the one end where the passengers strolled leisurely around.

The sea was calm and the boat moved smoothly through the deep blue waters of the Mediterranean. The temperature has been about 70° above for several days, but the strong wind makes it seem lower. The trip from Gibraltar has been delightful in every way. We arrived in Naples this morning and spent about 3 hours in getting through the custom house. We leave for Cairo at 12 Sunday night.

Yours, J. V. McANINCH.

STIO REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
