SMART BOY AS A CRIMINAL Youth With Advanced Idens as to Steal ing Made Good His Escape.

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—The po-lice here think that Samuel Robley, a youth of 18, who, they say, robbed Dr Samuel B, McDowell of diamonds valued at nearly $8,000 and $410 in money, is in New York. The boy is bright, and as the police have no photograph, and he is a student of crime with original ideas.

there is more reason to believe that he will get out of the country than be cap Mrs. Robley, the boy's mother, is Dr McDowell's housekeeper, and Roblet fived at the house and had access to every room. Dr. McDowell, in conversation with Captain of Detectives Miller recalled that several times Robley had talked in his office about the lack of in-telligence shown by thieves. On one ocusion be said: "They are a stupid lot of fellows. The first thing they do is to rush to a pawn shop with their booty. That's where they give themselves away. Now, I think a pawn shop is a penny trap useful to the police for catching thieves. The police are slow and ignorant. They can only catch a lot of stapid ones who give themselves away. I'll bet I could fool them. It is said that Robley went to New York several weeks ago and that while there he made arrangements to dispose of the diamonds of which he had for time known the hiding place and that he was at the time accompaned by a woman. This woman is known to the police of both this city and New York, and it is through her that it is hoped to capture the boy. He has been quite a traveler, having-sailed as cabin boy to Cape Town and other South African places. A year ago he rounded Cape Horn, sailing in a similar capacity. He has also made several shorter voyages. He is a well-formed chap, small for his age, with fair blue over a recombant cover with hair, blue eyes, a prominent nose, rather poor teeth. Though small in stature he is a very muscular, is a fine gymnast and an expert juggler.
