

Calendar for June 1901 with days of the week and dates.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

COUNTY. County Treasurer, CALVIN M. ARNER, Tionesta.

That Extra Five Hundred.

We are scarcely justified in again taking up this subject, since the Marienville Express falls utterly to refute a single one of the many facts which this paper plainly set forth, backed by indisputable evidence, two weeks ago, notwithstanding the Express editor consumed an entire week rattling around hunting for something—anything, that might in some way appear to bolster up his contention in the precarious transaction under discussion. These facts still remain uncontroverted and fastened—

That Supt. Stitzinger is drawing five hundred dollars per annum on a certificate which falsifies the action of the convention that elected him.

That the five hundred dollars thus drawn is "deducted from the appropriation due for Forest county" to use Dr. Schaeffer's own words, hence comes directly out of the pockets of the taxpayers.

That, had the officers of that convention certified his election to the State Supt. in accordance with the action of that convention, his salary would be $1000 and not $1500.

The editor of the Express reiterates his senseless fabrication that Supt. Schaeffer changed the mode of paying the extra $500 from the State to the county fund. If he has a scintilla of evidence to prove that statement why does he not publish it? There can be no harm in publishing the truth. The editor ought by this time to understand, if he knows anything, that his mere asserting it proves nothing, handicapped as he is by the miserable position he has taken in this contention. The people will know, when the records are laid bare, that the excess $500 has been deducted from the Forest county appropriation from the very first.

The REPUBLICAN is not responsible for the public airing which this transaction has received. The Express must take that responsibility upon itself and if the editor's ill-advised attempt to bully honest men or to deter them from the plain course of their sworn duty to the taxpayers has come to naught he has only himself to kick. Nobody fears the Express, not even the editor of the REPUBLICAN. Don't let that foolish notion ever find lodgment in your cranium. The Express, in denying a truth which this paper uttered, uses these words: "That statement is a lie without any varnish." Elegant language, that. And since the editor of the Express has thus proven himself the only blackguard in the newspaper business in Forest county, we must decline no notice him further in this connection. Suffice it to say, this whole matter is now in the hands of competent, honest and fearless officials, who will perform their duties courageously and see that justice is done the taxpayers and that the public schools of Forest county shall remain uncontaminated to the end.

AS SEVEN States hold elections this year seven Democratic platforms must be written, but nobody is anxious to tackle the job.

THERE are signs that South Carolina is getting tired of keeping a vituperative mountebank like Tillman in the United States Senate.

FIGHTING against civilization is a losing business. China would be $37,000,000 better off but for its experiment in that line last year.

By identifying himself with a trick election law Mr. Gorman of Maryland has evidently managed to get himself into a deeper hole than before.

THE constitution follows the same ideas as in the days of Thomas Jefferson, the father of the country's greatest example of territorial expansion.

THE London Post says the British steel manufacturers are "from five to ten years behind America." In that case the prospect of catching up is far from promising.

THE European grows about the progress of American goods are loudest under the operations of the Dingley law. Nothing of the kind was ever heard under a Democratic tariff.

CONGRESSMEN are glad to hear that they will not have to sweater through an extra session in midsummer. They know that the President is a safe pilot and will not exceed his authority.

DURING eleven months of the fiscal year the income of the government has exceeded the expenditures by $58,580,000. The country is in good shape for the reduction of war taxes on July 1.

SENATOR VEST says if the prosperity we now enjoy is continued up to the next election there will be little need of having any Democratic policy in 1904. He is right. Democracy lives off of calamity. When it can't emit a calamity wall now and then it dies.

MR. BRYAN declares that the Supreme Court decision has made the President an emperor and placed Congress above the constitution. The imperial purple will not be courted by Mr. Bryan unless "an absolute party necessity" summons him to the third battle.

On the Sea of Galilee.

Dear Editor:

The Sea of Galilee! What sacred memories connected with the life of our Lord on earth are clustered around its waters. It was here He made His home after His own people at Nazareth had rejected Him. From a small boat He spoke to the people on the shore those wonderful words of life. From mending their nets on the beach He called His early disciples. On its storm tossed waves He rests in sleep till His disciples in terror awake Him and hear His "Peace, be still," or while they struggle against a contrary wind He comes walking on the water. How much of His life could be written within sight of this beautiful sea! Its name is so closely connected with His person, His words and His work that apart from Him Galilee would be as nothing.

This was the third familiar scene in Palestine. The others were Jerusalem and the dead sea. No one could mistake Galilee with its rough, precipitous hills mirrored in its deep bosom. It is only the "swelling of the Jordan," but the Jordan is so lost in the heavy marshes above that it seems to have no inlet. The east side hills seemed more steep than on the west and suggested to our minds the swine affair of the Gadarenes.

Our first point of view was the hill top just back of Tiberias. The atmosphere was somewhat hazy and the day hot, so that the waters looked inviting as they seemed to lay at our feet. The hill was so long, the road so winding, and we so tired and anxious to reach the sea that it seemed a long road indeed. Rat oh, how hot it was down there. All day we had been fanned by a cool breeze as we entered over the way from Nazareth thro' Cana, past pleasant pastures and green fields. But now we are descending below sea level, as at the Dead Sea, and also as at that place get the full benefit of a tropical sun. After lunch we walked through the narrow, crooked streets of walled-in Tiberias, now as fanatic in its Mohammedanism as it was in Christ's time in Judaism. A few Jews were seen with their cork-screw curls, but the mosque with its minaret indicated the real power there. The most weird unearthly sound I ever heard is the Muezzin call to prayer. Time after time I have heard it from these minarets and it always started at first. It is unlike any other sound. While at lunch the call went forth but we could not see much response. While many Mohammedans are devout and spread their mats and go through their devotions regardless of surroundings, others are indifferent and the call to prayer falls on unheeding ears.

Three boats were ready to take us up the Lake. We had hoped for a sail on these waters. The sails are so strangely arranged—like those on the Nile. The sail is fastened to a long pole which in turn is fastened to an upright post about fifteen feet high after the manner of the "old oaken bucket that hung in the well." Once a breeze sprang up and the sail was swung out while some of us thought of the fierce storms that suddenly swept down the deep water, but said nothing. It was a false alarm and the men had to row the whole distance.

We landed at the site of Capernaum, or at least what passes for that. Capernaum, Bethsaida, Chorazin, Magdala, where are they? Not even the slight of one of them is known, not one thing left to indicate where they stood. What an awful curse they brought on themselves! I also thought of another thing as I sat in the boat and looked out over the landscape which to the northwest has a gentle slope and is green to the water's edge. Here were once thriving commercial cities, with their thousands of people on the great line of commerce between the east and the west. Now it is all a waste, howling wilderness. On the supposed sites a few monks have built houses, surrounding them with a stone wall, and entertain visitors who look in vain for evidences of the existence of those once highly favored cities blessed by the presence and teaching of our Lord. An old aqueduct, 1 feet square cut out of the solid rock, but now used for a road gives evidence of past enterprise and life. We spent the afternoon on the water, and visiting these monks' dwellings. As the evening began to draw on we rowed to where our camp had been pitched on the northwest end. After a refreshing bath in the cool water and picking up some shells and pebbles we went to our tents to prepare for dinner and a night's rest.

This location for the camp was chosen rather than go back to Tiberias and ride along the lake seven miles the next morning. It was not considered very safe as the wild Bedouins infest these parts, each one with a gun strapped on his back and a big club in his hand. The night was warm and after dinner we sat inside the circle of tents and sang what hymns we knew touching on the place. The favorite one was:

"Oh Galilee, sweet Galilee, Where Jesus loved so much to be."

The next morning we took up our march again over some rough roads and arid country. In the midst of this wilderness we came to the Rothschild's Jewish settlement. Which was like an oasis in the desert. It is quite a village of 200 or 300 houses with all that indicated comfort and plenty. They had wagons, the first we had seen in Palestine, and of course must have roads, also the first we had seen that would bear the name, except one. Beautiful groves of olive, fig and other fruit bearing trees abounded. On either side of the road were planted a beautiful shade trees and also a row of hedge. To complete the homelike appearance of things a barbed wire fence was built all along the road. It looked like American wire and we all saluted it with a shout. What curious creatures we are, going abroad to see foreign things and then going wild over the sight of a barbed wire fence! It may indicate a mental weakness but the fence looked good just the same.

We came to a flour mill run by a fountain that flows in the waters of Merom. Within fifty feet of its source this stream had fifty enough to run a half dozen mills. This was the first of these wonderful fountains bursting out from the mountain side we had seen and its size was a marvel.

The mill was crude but had four set of old fashioned bars and were making pretty good looking flour and meal. They were dressing one set and did it just as millers dress them in our country.

The stone were not so large as we use nor so fine grained.

We camped at a large Bedouin village that night and were entertained by the natives in a bonfire dance. It was picturesque in the extreme and suggested the wild Indian dances. The village was surrounded on all sides by very high hills, giving a fine setting to the camp. A large crowd of men gathered round and at last the fire was kindled. Then began a series of movements around the fire that reminded me of some of the drills seen at home. The marching, jumping and yelling was in good time. This circling around soon ceased and then began a series of posings and singing by individuals within the circle, the whole ring keeping time by clapping and occasionally joining in the chorus. They were very good natured, laughing and smiling at each other. Two of our mutuleers joined in the posing part of the dance to whom they paid special attention and our applause seemed to delight them very much. There was not enough variety in this to hold an audience long and we soon picked up our camp chairs and left the enchanted circle. I was anxious to see how they would break up the affair so hung behind the party. But there was no excitement. The fire had already burned itself out and these wild Bedouins dispersed in groups, talking and laughing as any civilized gathering would do. It was an insight into the better phase of Bedouin life. The other side is black enough.

Yours, J. V. McANINCH.

April 28, 1901.

There are men who still advocate a change in the tariff laws, but the majority of the people look upon them as poor fellows, who have never learned to profit by experience, or learn to leave well enough alone.

In case of a senatorial vacancy in South Carolina Gov. McSweeney, by his sensible remarks on a needless political brawl, will probably be awarded the place. A Senator without a pitchfork would be a boon to the state.

The waves of prosperity have not only washed away all the arguments of Bryanism, but they have caught a whole lot of former radical Bryanites in the undertow and I carried them back to their Republican affiliations.

A SYMPATHETIC nation hails with delight the bulletins announcing an improvement in the condition of Mrs. McKinley. Not only this, the estimate of her husband is heightened as they read of his devotion to his invalid wife in her illness. In this respect, as well as in all things pertaining to his high office, William McKinley measures up to the full stature of a man.

The Hon John Wanamaker is probably convinced that personal revenge as a political issue is a gigantic failure, says the Derrick. As for Mister Finin, insurgent-in-chief, he is in about the same fix as General Emilio Aguinaldo. While not a prisoner of war he has been beaten and humiliated and his traitorous policy in the Republican ranks thoroughly repudiated. Harmony has been restored in the Republican party of Pennsylvania by the triumph of the majority principle, and henceforth, we be to every leader who aspires to become a party wrecker by defeating the majority will.

The tariff duties per capita last year amounted to but $3.01. Even if the tariff were a tax on the consumer, which it has been conclusively proved not to be, in the vast majority of cases, this would be a small amount to pay for the inestimable benefits, for the unparalleled prosperity which the people of this country have enjoyed under the Dingley law. We have a surplus instead of a deficit, and that, too, in time of war. American factories have been crowded with orders, labor has been everywhere employed at high wages, and the supply of men at work has fallen short of the demand for workmen. An immense balance of trade has been rolled up in our favor, the United States has been changed from a debtor nation into a creditor nation, and New York has been made the financial centre of the world. The old time and well known free trade cry about the "burden" which a protective tariff lays upon the people of this country has never been more thoroughly discredited than it is to-day.—American Economist.

A Tale of Hypnotism.

The following special has been sent out from Franklin and is appearing in the papers throughout the country:

Three strange cases of insanity are reported from Scrubgrass township, in the lower end of this county. A few weeks ago a stranger called at the house of Geo. Parker and stated that he desired to purchase his farm. He remained there for two nights talking business with Mr. and Mrs. Parker, and, it is alleged, on the second night of his visit he hypnotized Mr. and Mrs. Parker and one of the sons. That night he went through the house in search of papers and whatever other valuables he might find, and left without being the Parkers out of the hypnotic state.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Parker have become violently insane and had to be taken to the asylum at Warren, Pa. The boy is also said to be suffering from mental aberration. Whether the stranger secured any plunder or not has not been learned.
