A NEW railroad 202 miles long has been contracted for in Oklahoma. The great t rritory of the southwest is a marvel in-

It is estimated that Europe will need 270,000,000 bushels of wheat this year. By the way, if the United States could not fill this gap the people of the old world might be in a serious state of mind.

Faiction is growing rapidly between the Germans and Russians on account of the new German tariff. In aiming a blow at the United States the Europeans may hit each other, and a quarrel among close neighbors is apt to be an ugly one.

ONE of the prominent candidates for Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., which holds its national encampment at Cleveland next week, is General Thomas J. Stewart, adjutant general in Governor Stone's Cabinet. The General met with a serious accident in a runaway recently, but it is thought he will make a good "run" for one with a broken leg.

THE Clarion Republican of last week presents its readers with a very fine likeness of Harry R. Wilson, the candidate of the Republicans in that county for President Judge, and likewise prints Mr. Wilson's platform, which is nothing more nor less than the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution of Pennsylvania. A most excellent platform, indeed, for a judicial candidate.

REV. SAM JONES, a Georgia Democraallowed himself to be interviewed on polities at Indianapolis the other day. Here is what he said of his party; "I feel sorry for the Damocrats. The Republicans have let them down in a well and pulled up the ladder. As long as the Democratic party has leaders like Tillman and Altgeld they will have to take deck passage on the ship of state. There ain't a stateroom in any decent ship that would give them quarters. They have got to put the brains in front and couple the brains to the mouth of the party or the Republicans have a cinch on this government for a hundred years,"

RUNNING a newspaper is just like man goes into a hotel and finds something on the table which does not suit him, he does not get up and raise hades with the landlerd and tell him to stop sets that dish on one side and wades into some of the many dishes that do suit him. It is different with some newspaper readers. They find an article that doesn't suit think it may please hundreds of other readers, make a grand stand play of their supreme asininity and hasten over to slop their paper.-Ex,

The Sheffield and Tionesta Rallway.

Regular trains began running on the Sheffiold & Tionesia rallroad last week, and the passenger as well as local freight service is now quite complete. Train No. 4 carrying passengers and local freight leaves Nebraska in the morning at 5:30, Ross Run 5:50, Newtown 6:05, Kelletiville 6:20, Buck Mills 6:30, Mayburg 6:40, Minister 7:00, Wellers 7:05, Hastings 7:20, Blue Jay 7:55, Henrys Mills 7:45, Barnes 8:05, arriving at Sheffield 8:15. Returning, train leaves Sheffield at 9:00 a, m., and runs to Kelleitville arriving there at 12:00. From Kelletivillethe train returns to Sheffield leaving at 1:00 p. m., and arriving at Sheffield at 3:00.
In the evening the train leaves Sheffield at 3:15 and runs through, making stops at intermediate a silons and reaching Nebraska at 6:00 o'clock. The service seems to be appreciated by the people along the route, the patronage being already quite large. N. E. Holmes, formerly of Tiomesia, is conductor of the new train, B.

The various pieces of mosiac work were to me the most interesting things to be seen in the picture galleries. All the pictures in St. Peter are done in mosale, though many of them are copies of the original done in oil. The one most noted is the Transfiguration by Raphael. The original is seen in the Vatican gallery, and is among the most noted of all the paintings of the old masters. On one of the pillars in St. Peter is a reproduction of this painting, but about one half larger, done in mosaic, that to my eye surpassed the original in beauty. Another most remarkable example of mosaic work is seen in a small room in the Vatican Library. This is a life size picture of Piusix, placed before a window with the light shining through bringing out all the colors, and the tints of the flesh in a most marvelous manner. The material used is a kind of colored glass, and in the Papal manufactory of mosaics there are said to be about 28,000 different

The Vatican picture gallery is entered through a door just off the circular court In front of St. Peter. A long flight of steps, 91 in number, called-Sala Regia, forms a part of the long, tedious journey of nearly three hundred steps required to reach the top floor. In this part is the Sistine Chapel containing much of Michael Angelo's works. The celling and walls are paneled and progresive series of Bible pictures cover the entire surface At the farther end, over the alter, is Angelo's Last Judgment, sixty-four feet wide and tnirty-two feet high. It is a weird scene he portrays, but perhaps in keeping with the conception of such subjects in his day. For reasons of modesty many of the figures were retouched with drapery by later actists. The incongruity of this work makes it in parts look ludicrous. The author has evidently drawn on Dante and mythology for parts of his conception and has given a lurid picture of the nether world. Most of the paintings seen in the many different rooms and divisions of this famous galtery have religious themes. A few are political and some philosophical,

The Vatican museu n is of equal interest to most people, to some it may be more pleasing. This is said to be the finest collections of antiquities ever brought together. One is almost bewildered and the temptation to stand and look and think about each piece is so great that one's time is consumed before he has mads the rounds of the various departments. To try to see every different piece of statuary or every relic of antiqnity, however important and interesting they might be, would be to go away. without a clear conception of any. To see every thing as it should be seen would require time far beyond that which I had at command. There were some pieces I wanted to see. By my guide book I knew where to find them, and so I simply cast a glance here and there as I passed along till I came to the rooms where the famous Apolio Belvedere, Laocoon, the Two Pugilists and the Discus Thrower were. The two first of these, cut out of Pentelle marble, are marvels of art. The perfect pose and expression of Apollo, the clear cut outline of every part of the body, the end of his robe falling down in folds from his outstreached arm so thin and delicately traced that one can almost imagine be sees it swaying in the breeze is a work that none but an artist of the very highest rank could ever execute. It is a picture of real beauty. It attracts and charms one. The effect produced is so pleasing that one wants to sit and gaze upon it realizing every moment his love for the beautiful and true in art is being developed and fostered.

Some pictures and statuary bear all the marks of the mind and hand of a genins. They are masterpieces of art but they leave an unpleasant impression upon the mind. Such, for instance, is the Laccoon. There stands the father and his two sons, one on either side. Around their bodies and limbs a huge serpeat is entwining itself with deadly coils, They are trying to free themslves but in vain. Tighter and tighter it closes about them. The expression of fear and auguish on the father's face is altogether running a hotel, only different. When a indescribable, while with looks of terror the boys lift imploring hands to the TABER CURE." father for aid he cannot give. As a piece of art it is sublime, so true to nature is every part, so striking is the expression his darned old hotel. Well, hardly. He brought out. But after all it is not a statue one would care to linger long with. It makes one creep. It excites the mind but does not inspire it.

A great deal of space is here Across the way from the museum is testimonials, free. given to noted presents that have been given to the various Popes, some of ful. These of course we admired but were more anxious to see some of the old manuscripts. There are about 26,600 precious are they. The most noted of the Bois, and principal intermediate stations manuscripts are those of the New Testament, in Greek, of Virgil and Terrence, a small book of love letters written by not permited to handle any of these. They were opened and kept in a glass case through which we might read only a little, if we could. the old rascal could betray. The Pantheon is the best preserved ancient structure in the city. It is a circular building with the dome 142 feet from the floor and a diameter of equal length There is no opening in the walls, but at the top of the dome is an open space thirty feet across through which the light is obtained. It was a heathen building in which altars were erected for the worship of their different divinities but is now a kind of Westminster Abbey where the Illustrious dead are burried. H. Wilson engineer, and James Hender-also passed through the Arch of Titus at son, Jr., fireman. The Temple of the Vestal Virgins is seen on the one side [while opposite stood the platform where Rome's great orators used to harangue the people. Here C.cero spoke, Caesar commanded and Antony delivered his eulogy over the remains of his departed friend. Triumphal arches and pillars in good condition are still standing bearing Latin inscriptions of very ancient times. The post from which all distances within and without the city of Rome were measured, is pointed out. This reminded me of a post set up in the church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem which is said to be the center of the world.

A short distance from the Forum stands the Colesseum, the largest theater and most imposing structure in the world. Even when standing within its walls one can scarcely get any good conceptions of its magnitude. There is nothing near with which it can be compared or its size measured. It is elliptical in form and the walls measure about one third of a soile around, the hight is one hundred and fifty seven teet. It is estimated to seat 50,000 people. On the outside it seems to have four stories, the lower adorned with half columns of the Dorie order, the second with Ionie, and the third with Corinthian. It was completed by Titus, 80 A D. Earthquakes and vandalism have done much to destroy it, yet more than one half still stands to show how great it once was. It is said that the majority of the churches of Rome have been built of material taken from the Colosseum. Of late years this has been stoped and care is used in its preservation. Workmen have filled in the broken places in the wall and bound them together with iron bands and pins. The arches and walls that supported the seats are being rebuilt. The work in the arena has been finished and the places where wild beasts were kept are seen beneath the stage. The Colosseum has ever been a symbol of the greatness of Rome and gave rise, in the 5th century, to the saying .-

"While stands the Colosseum, Rome shall-tand, When falls the Colosseum, Rome shall fall, And when Rome falls, with it shall fall

Since then great changes have taken place among the nations of the world and we Americans at least might doubt this

What shall I say more? Time would fail me to speak of the many interesting sights of things ancient and things modorn, of things of state and things of church, of the abodes of the living and the abodes of the dead, of villas, monaseries, museums, galleries, of the beautiful gardens and flowers, of the customs and hopes of the people. Rome is an inexhaustable mine of things beautiful, interesting and instructive. But I have already exceeded beyond all bounds what I had intended when I began these letters. Still I have reason to hope that many have enjoyed these letters, especially so as coming from one they know and the expression of this enjoyment has led me to extend them this great length. My tour terminated in Rome, Coming to Naples I boarded a sister ship of the ne on which I went out and after eleven days of an ideal voyage in the soft balmy air of the southern Atlantic, without wind or rain I caught sight of the shores of America outside the New York Harbor and rejoiced as I never did before that I was a citizen of this great, grand and glorious Republic. A land whose out scarceness, a land whose stones are 'ron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass," "The land of the free and the home of the brave," and thanked the Giver of all good that it was so.
