

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 13.

This week we are showing some very pretty but useful specimens of Indian handiwork in the way of baskets, beginning in size with the toy basket at 5c, holding a handful and running up from that in increasing size and price to the large hampers intended for receiving soiled clothing, which sells for $2.00. There are also articles for use and ornament constructed from birch bark and sweet grasses, decorated with porcupine quills dyed in various colors. The Indians are the only people who have ever found any use for that curious animal—the hedge-hog, although in one State in the Union they are protected by a law that is more stringently enforced than any other game law—but that is another story and interesting enough to be worth looking up. This lot of Indian ware was intended for the holiday trade, but coming in early we decided to display it now.

D. S. Knox, P. M.

—Gen. John B. Gordon will be the next attraction here in the way of entertainment furnished by the lecture course committee. Gen. Gordon's lecture on "The Last Days of the Confederacy," is national in its fame, and no one should miss this rare opportunity to hear it. Dec. 4th is the date.

—The Slaton Jubilee Singers played to a good audience at the court house last Saturday evening, and the entertainment gave very general satisfaction. The next attraction will be the lecture—"Last Days of the Confederacy"—by Gen. John B. Gordon, who generally commands $200 a night for his services. People who have heard Gen. Gordon's lecture pronounce it among the best they have ever listened to. English Spelling.

Stein Keltonik, an educated Hungarian of Puxnatowney, in conversation with the editor of the Spirit recently, said that the one thing that caused most trouble, and seemed to be the most absurd in the English language, was the use of so many superfluous letters in the spelling of words. "To retain the use of letters that are meaningless, and only serve to make orthography and pronunciation of your language more difficult," he said, "seems like the Chinese method of keeping in the old ruts, just because they are old, and refusing to adopt things which they know are improvements, out of blind reverence for the ways of their ancestors. What is the use of putting 'ugh' to such words as 'though' and 'enough,' when 'tho' and 'enuf' would be easier? Then what sense is there in spelling 'Worcester' and pronouncing it 'Wooester?' There are hundreds of words in the English language that could be very much shortened and simplified by dropping out letters that are of no use and only serve to confuse a student of the language."

We all recognize this to be true and yet we do not have the courage to spell words in the natural and proper way, giving each letter its true sound, and omitting those that are not sounded at all. The lexicographers will never do this for us. They are the mere recorders of things as they are. Usage is the only authority, and if we desire to bring about spelling reform we must simply let it matter in hand and spell words as they are pronounced, without reference to the dictionary.

HIS RECALL TELEGRAM.

It Didn't Work as Smoothly as He Had Anticipated.

"I have had only one experience in addressing a communication to myself," said a professional man, "and that was so disastrous I never tried it again. It happened in this way: Shortly after I burnt out my shingle and while I was having a desperate struggle to make both ends meet a rich, eccentric old aunt of mine invited me to spend the summer at her country home in Vermont. I knew the old lady had a very peevish temper, but she had always promised to do something for me, and under the circumstances, I concluded to go. Her home was several miles from the nearest village and was really a beautiful place; but, just as I had feared, my aunt herself proved to be terribly trying company. She was irascible and domineering to the last degree, and, having lived alone with a lot of cunning servants, she was in the habit of saying things that made my blood boil in my veins. I managed to hold my tongue, however, and when I finally saw that I wasn't going to be able to stand it much longer I thought up a neat little scheme for beating a graceful retreat.

"I had a special chum here in New Orleans who knew all about my trip, and one evening I slipped over to the village and sent him a telegram, running about like this: 'Impossible to remain longer than the old shrew. Wire me tomorrow that important business demands my immediate presence. Make it strong. Must skip.' The wire burst, I admit, but I was badly worried up.

"Early next morning I announced to my aunt that I was going out fishing for the day. 'I had a lament coming up this week,' I remarked casually, 'and it's barely possible I may get some message about it. If my telegram arrives, please open it, and if it needs an answer one of the men can come over after me at the bridge.' I wanted her to see the recall telegram with her own eyes so as to avert any suspicion and went off chuckling over my cleverness. Somewhat to my surprise, however, the day wore away without a messenger, and I began to soften. 'The poor old lady don't want me to go,' I said to myself, 'and I'm holding back the news.' But when I walked up to the house that evening I was thunderstruck to see my trunk standing on the porch, and before I could ask any questions my aunt appeared at the threshold, flung me a telegram with a tragic gesture and slammed the door in my face. I opened the paper mechanically and nearly fell dead. It was my own message. My chum was out of town when it arrived, and it had been returned to the sender."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
