STYLE

First, last and all the time, the average man wants style in his clothes. He can't get it unless he gets quality, too. Style means hand-worked collars and lapels, as much as it means correct outlines, and it always means fit. Two suits of clothes may look almost precisely alike the first day they are worn, and very unlike in a week's time. The beauty of good made to measure is that it keeps right on looking well. The trouble is, it costs too
