C. Carbaugh, whose farm is near Newmansville, was having a swarm of bees last Thursday when they turned on him and stung him terribly. Mr. Carbaugh is aged 73 years, and the attack of the enraged bees came near ending fatally, rendering him unconscious for several hours. Dr. Bovard attended him, and at last accounts the patient was doing well. -The heavy and almost incessant rains of the past few weeks have kept the river and creek up far above a safe rafting stage, and much good water has gone to waste, which will probably be needed before fall. So much water has also been a menace to fishermen who have been unable to do anything in that line thus far during the season. But it will all come out right in the end.

-The third reunion of the old "Tionesta Rangers," organized here in 1861 for a three years' trip south in the interest of Uncle Sam, takes place here to-day. The "old boys" put in three of the toughest years of the war, and those left of them are entitled to the best time that can be had, and we trust their third coming together and talking over old times will be one of the greatest pleasures to all. -There is nomenclature talk about the congressional apportionment, passed by the last legislature being unconstitutional because Westmoreland and Butler counties, comprising the 22d district don't touch elbows. There is nothing in it. The two counties come together in the center of the Allegheny river, and every old pilot along the stream can easily point out the exact line between them there being a straggle of coal culm on the one side and one of soap on 'to her, both emanating from the mines of the respective counties. The apportionment is all right. -On the 5th of June last, W. P. Black of Uricksville, Ohio, and Miss Martha M. Waterman of Tionesta, were united in marriage, the ceremony having taken place in New York city. Mr. Black is well known to most of our citizens, having been largely engaged in oil operations in this vicinity about two years ago. The bride is a granddaughter of our esteemed townsman, S. J. Wolcott, and is one of Tionesta's handsomest young ladies. They will make their home in Uricksville, where they will be at home to their friends at the groom's fine residence. -Boy Drowned, Body Recovered. William, the fourteen-year-old son of William Anthony of Nebraska, this county was drowned in Tionesta creek at that place on the 21st inst. In company with some other boys he was catching logs a short distance below the dam. He was using a pike pole to the end of which he had fastened a rope. He threw the pike into a passing log and was about to pull it in when the rope became entangled about his foot and he was jerked off the flat boat on which he had been standing into the swift current, the creek being high from the heavy rains of the night previous. The little fellow was a good swimmer and made heroic efforts to gain the shore, but the heavy current was too much for him and he soon disappeared from view. There were several men on the bank of the creek, but for the instant there was no small boat handy, and the men were powerless in their anxiety to help him. -Searching parties were immediately organized, and a constant watch for the body was kept up for several days, some of the parties going as far as Oil City, where notice was published requesting parties below to notify the authorities at Tionesta if the body should be found. On Wednesday evening last, six days after the accident, the body was seen floating under the bridge at Oil City, the discovery and recovery of which is thus told by the Derick: "About 6:30 o'clock in the evening a number of persons crossing the Relief bridge saw a body floating in the river about 150 feet from the shore. Among these was J. E. Russel, a young man who knows what to do in an emergency. While others were looking at the body, excitedly commenting upon its presence in the river, he stopped a companion, W. C. Jolly, who was riding a wheel, and directed him to ride down to Moran's eddy and get a boat from Mr. Maple. He then called up Chief of Police Nugent on the telephone and notified him, and then directed John Osinder of the firm of Osinder & Fritz, to go to the lower end of the town prepared to take charge of the body. In the meantime, A. P. Jones of East Second street, had seen the body floating and started on a run down the railroad tracks. At the foot of Innis street he joined J. F. Russel a brother of the lad who had given the first alarm, and W. C. Jolly and the three rowed out into the river and interrupted the body, which they towed to the shore." Deputy Coroner Griffith of Franklin was notified and selected a jury and held an inquest the same evening, rendering a verdict that the boy had come to his death by accidental drowning. Friends here were notified, and two of the boy's brothers drove down in the night, bringing the body to the shore. The remains were brought to Tionesta Thursday morning and given burial in Riverside cemetery. The parents of the boy are prostrate with grief over the shocking affair, and have the sympathy of the entire community in their great bereavement. -Rev. Bazza's Daughter Nearly Perished in a Swamp. The people of Jamestown, Pa., were greatly excited last Friday over the narrow escape of a little daughter of Rev. Bazza, formerly of Tionesta. The situation was aggravated by rumors of an escaped panther that is said to be ranging in the woods near that place, says the Derick. The little girl was visiting her grandparents, a few miles from the village, near whose farm is a dense woods where the panther, said to have escaped from Buffalo Bill's show which recently visited that section, is thought to be. The child, only six or seven years old, went with her grandfather to the barn and darkness coming on was told to return to the house. The grandfather then went about his chores, and all unnoticed the little girl, instead of returning to the house, started off across a large corn field. When the old gentleman returned to the house her absence was discovered and no trace of her could be found. Almost distracted the grandparents began a search for her but without success. Several hours later a party of about 30 men who had been hunting in the woods for the escaped panther found the child in a swamp some distance from the house. She had sunk up to her arm pits in the mire and was rescued with great difficulty, half dead from exposure and almost delirious from fright, but recovered within a short time. She was finally, late at night, returned to her grandparents who, from stories told of the wild beast in the woods, had begun to fear the little girl was devoured. mechanics as Alex Swanson, designer and draughtsman and foreman of the cabinetmaking and machine departments, W. H. Morgan, foreman of the carving department, John Gold, foreman of the finishing department, and last but not least, our German friend, Joseph Schudalaugh, the boss turner, who, when asked if he would be willing to compete with anyone for the championship in artistic wood turning, with his characteristic shrug of the shoulders replied: "Wah! Yes. Coom ahead. Aint it?" Thus, through the officers and their efforts, through their many and able assistants, through their workmen, those sinews of strength, the Tionesta Mantel Manufacturing Company, Inc., is a permanent fixture. The factory is this week making a shipment of eighty high grade mantels to the National Capital for use in some of the elegant new mansions under course of erection in that handsomest of the world's cities.
