Mr MacVeagh weighed heavily on what he said was a reign of terror in the anthracite region during the period of the strike and with the assistance of many documents maintained that it would be utterly impracticable for the coal companies he represents to enter into agreements with an organization quantity of rope and hurried to the bridge which connects Green island that could not control its own men.

Mr. Mitchell stoutly maintained that the discipline in the organization is as good as it possibly could be where 147,000 men were involved. He submerged log at a point a few feet below the bridge. A noose was fitted claimed that the strikers were not enabout the body of John Marshall, a tirely responsible for the acts of lawlessness that were committed. He regretted that members of the union had in some instances violated the law, even after they had been warned to refrain from doing so, but made the excuse that in times of great excitement there was always more or less disorder.

In answer to questions he said that was the case during the late strike, conditions arise that are 'intolerable" or "unfortunate."

During the cross-examination the commissioners often interrupted with questions in order to stop a long colloquy over some disputed point.

While the discussion of the effect a yearly agreement would have on the coal industry in the anthracite region was in progress frequent reference was made to the workings of agreements in soft coal regions. This led to the announcement by

Mr. Darrow, counsel for the miners. New Orleans, suggested several names and it is likely all the gentlemen will be invited to come here. The investigation is dragging too slowly to suit the com missioners and it is likely the com mission will probably ask both sides to agree upon some arrangement for expediting the investigation. The lawyers for the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western or the Philadelphia and Reading company will next take Mr. Mitchell in hand unless the programme is changed. It is expected the attorneys for the non-union men will present their case to the commission today. If it is decided to hear them, it will inject an entirely new feature into the investi gation, and one which was not expected at the time President Roosevelt created the commission.

MITCHELL ON THE STAND. Leader of Mine Workers Matches Wit

With Wayne MacVeagh.

MacVeagh, former attorney general of

of the anthracite coal strike commission was full of amusing incidents, due to the play of wit and the reparted indulged in by President Mitchell, who continued on the stand, and Wayne

> the United States, who was conducting the cross-examination. Mr. MacVeagh stood near the witness box and directly in front of Judge Gray, a slim figure, but graceful as a dancing master and with a fund of good humor that was at no time disfurbed. His good nature and his verdict of not guilty. pleasant way of saying sharp things communicated itself to Mitchell, and and threatening to resume their march,

A great mass of testimony was given and the pencils of the stenographers fairly flew. The chief subject under discussion was the amount of wages that would permit a man to live in conformity with the American idea. Mr. Mitchell declared the minimum was $600 per annum. Mr. MacVeagh said that was more than was paid any other avocation.

Other subjects were the responsibility for causing more suffering to the poor because of the increase in the price of coal for which Mitchell asserted the operators were entirely responsible, while Mr. MacVeagh declared it was due to the exactions and the agitations of the miners; the num ber of hours worked by the contract miners, which MacVeagh attempted to show was seldom over three in a good chamber, Mitchell denying that, but refusing to give the number of hours; the conditions in the bituminous fields where, according to reports read by MacVeagh, conditions have become worse since the organization of the miners was recognized; and the employment of coal and iron police by the companies, which Mitchell condemned, saying that he thought that ample protection could be given by the authorities. He admitted that in case the authorities could not furnish protection, that the employment of guar's might become necessary. Mr. MacVeagh asked Mitchell If he did not know that previous to the entry of the United Mine Workers into this field that the men had only complained in one instance during the 30 years. Mitchell answered that this statement did not surprise him, the reason probably was that the miners dare not make known their grievances for fear of discharge. It looks as if Mitchell will be on the stand the greater part of this week, where there was a reign of terror, He wit probably be cross-examined by and he had no information that such the attorneys of all the great corporations represented at the hearing, and by the attorneys for the independent operators, and when they are through it is understood that the members of ed out to him by Mr. MacVeagh where the commission will ask a number of

According to his story he is a guide at Camp Henderson, in the Fulton Chain, and his brother was a guide at Camp Wilson, a dozen miles from Old Forge. Both were guiding parties on Tuesday afternoon. Ed's party had just brought down a deer when he heard a shrick on the trail. He found his brother lying dead, face downward, in a thicket. He carried him back to Camp Wilson and found the men in camp and the Syracuse man among them.

"They said they didn't know anything about the shooting of my brothor," said Coleman. "I said, 'You lie; who's got a shotgun?" They pointed to one and I found it empty. There was a big charge of buckshot in my brother's breast."

Coleman says his people are poor farmers and live in Erieville, la. He wants a settlement for the man's widow and also money to send the body back home.
