Two Witnesses From France Swear

Mrs. Fair Ontlived Her Husband. New York, April 14.-The hearing was resumed in the Fair will case and Lucien Mas concluded his testimony in cross examination.

Counsel for Mrs. Nelson then called Alfred J. Moranne of France, who Mas says was with him when he witnessed the accident to Mr. and Mrs. Fair.

Moranne said he was with Mas on the day of the accident. He was off his wheel when the automobile with the Fairs and their chauffeur passed him. It was going very fast,

"I had dismounted from my machine," he said, when the auto pass ed to my left. Then I saw it come to a stop with a great noise. My friend preceded me to where the auto stood I saw three bodies. The first one I approached was the chauffeur. He was screaming and trying to rise. Next I saw the gentleman. His skull was crushed out of all semblance to a human skull. As I was examining the gentleman, Mas said to me: "The lady is not dead.' I looked around and saw Mas lift the lady and place her with her head against the tree." "How near to the lady did you ap proach?" he was asked. "I was within a yard of her, I re marked that her nose and eye were wounded, and that a stream of blood trickled across her forehead."

'Did you see the lady move?" "I saw her lips move, the hands tighten and the chest move slightly. The lips moved as though she was breathing."

"Do you recollect what you saw after your friend put her down?" "For about a minute I saw her breathing gently, her lips were still moving when I turned away from her.'

"Did the gentleman move at all?" "He did not. He was in the same position when I turned away as when I saw him first." At this point an adjournment was

STANTON'S IRISH STEW. A Story of the Great War Secretary

as Told by His Bodyguard. An attempt by Secretary of War Stanton to cook an Irish stew widle bolding the war department office against the removal order of President Andrew Johnson is one of many angedotes related by Louis Koerth, at the to vacate the office of secretary. He camped in the office, determined to hold it until the result of the impeachment proceedings against the president, which were then pending in the senate, should be determined. For sixty days Mr. Stanton held "the fort," and during that period his faithful bodyguard, ex-Sergeant Louis Koerth, then in the United States general servce, assigned to the war department, kept him company. On the day in which Mr. Stanton received the official notification of his removal by the president be made immediate preparations for a siege. He dispatched Sergeant Koerth to Mrs. Stanton for blankets and pillows, but that lady refused to send them, insisting that the secretary should come home and give up the office.

Mr. Stanton smiled on receiving her nessage and simply said:

"Koerth, go to your own house and bring blankets, pillows and such cooking utensils as we may need." The Irish stew was the first effort of the secretary and his bodyguard. Koerth, being a German, needed instructions in the mysteries of preparing the savery stew, and the secretary named the various lugredients, which he ordered the servant to purchase.

Both men had spent a busy and laborlously exciting day, and both were tired out when the pot was put on the fire to cook the stew.

The consequence was that the great war secretary and his bodyguard fell asleep. The secretary was the first to be awakened by the smell of the burning stew.

"Koerth, Koerth! Wake up, man!" shouted Mr. Stanton. "The stew is

ANATOMY OF AN OYSTER.

The Bivalve's Organs Are Numeros

and Its Heart Quite Humanlike. Every oyster has a mouth, a heart, a liver, a stomach, besides many curious ly devised little intestines and other organs - necessary organs, such at would be handy to a living, moving intelligent creature. The mouth is a the end of the shell, near the hinge and adjoining the toothed portion of the oyster's pearly covering. This tiny little apology of a mouth is oval in shape, and, although hardly visible to one unused to making such anatomical examinations, it can be easily discovered by gently pushing a bodkin or a piece of blunt, smooth wire along the surface of the locality mentioned. When the mouth is at last located, you can thrust your instrument through between the delicate lips and a considerable distance toward the stomach without causing the oyster the least pain whatever. From this mouth there is of course a miniature canal leading to the stomach. Food passes from this canal to the stomach and from the latter organ into the intestines just as readily as though the little bivalve were as large as an elephant or a rhi-

Remove the shell (this operation is rather rough on the oyster, but can be done in a comparatively painless manner by an expert), and you will see the crescent, which lies just over the so called heart. This half moon space is the oyster's pericardium. Within is the true heart, the pulsations of which can be readily seen without the aid of a glass. The heart is very humanlike, made of two parts, one of which receives the blood from the gills through a network of real blood vessels; the other portion contracts and drives the blood out through the body. The other organs of an oyster's anatomy are all in their proper places and perform their several functions.

THE AMERICAN SAILOR. He Works and Plays Hard and Spins

The sailor's life is not altogether one of hard work, and on the whole he has a very good time. Dancing, gymnasties, fencing, boxing and boat racing fill his leisure hours. His natural fondness for pets is proverbial, and there are few ships without a mascot, be it a goat, dog or Dennis the pig, which serves to lighten the hours of the dull watches at sea. Many stories are told of the prowess of ships' pets at night on the forecastle, when the hammocks are down and the pipes lighted. One man spins a yarn of a cat that was born in an old boiler, cruised 50,000 miles in one ship, established a great reputation as a fighter in all parts of the world and finally ended his adventurous career on the coral reefs of Samoa, says a writer in the World's Work. Another tells of a monkey without ears or tall, with which he sailed in the China seas, whose fondness for liquid paint produced periodical attacks of blindness. There is a story of a dissipated dog who never lost an opportunity to get drunk and who always recognized the bugle call for the gig and invariably ran to the gangway when it sounded to go ashore with the captain. But the best of all ally hollow, and the knots of nodes is the one of the pet bear who chased a which occur at Intervals and which young officer up the mizzen rigging Fortunate indeed is the animal that

The Prickly Pear of Africa.

Mischievous though the prickly pear is, it is not without its good qualities. Its juicy fruit, though rather deficient in flavor, is delightfully cool and refreshing in the dry heat of the summer, and a kind of treacle is made of it. Great caution is needed in peeling the prickly pear, the proper way being to impale the fruit on a fork or stick while you cut it open and remove the skin, and woe betide the fingers of the unwary "new chum" who plucks the treacherous fruit,

In dry weather at the cape these spiteful little stings do not even wait for the newly arrived victim, but fly about, light as thistledown, ready to settle on any one who has not learned by experience to give the prickly pear bushes a wide berth,-"Home Life on an Ostrich Farm."

The Gallant Leonidas.

"Henrietta," said Mr. Meekton, "did you hear that lecture in which it was stated that the fact that Adam arrived on earth before Eve indicated that men should assume a certain precedence over women?"

"I did," was the somewhat icy reply. "Isn't it absurd? It simply shows that Adam was expected to get the garden in shape for Eve's comfort, just as the modern man gets up in the morning and lights the fire."-Wash-Ington Star.

The greatest danger from colds and grip is their resulting in pneum nia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken, all danger will be avoided. Historie Conflagrations.

A list of great cities burned would be a list of nearly all the great capitals of the world. Persepolls, the splendid residence of a long series of rulers whose tributary provinces extended from the Indus to the Hellespont, was burned, with all its palaces and temples; Babylon and Carthage were so utterly destroyed that their very location has become a matter of doubt. Rome was burned eight times, Jerusalem four times, and, though they rose from their

the world is perhaps that of Moscow, "They talk as if the fate of Europe had been decided at Waterloo," says De Bourienne in his memoirs of the first empire. "If Napoleon had beaten Wellington and Blucher a dozen times, it could not have retrieved the reverses of the three preceding years. The truth is that the French Cæsar and his fortune were ruined by the burning of Moscow. That city was the funeral pile of the great nation.'

Man More Liquid Than Solid.

Every fiber and every cell that enters into the formation of a living body is bathed in moisture, by which means alone these ultimate elements are kept alive and are enabled to carry out their duties. Even the bones, which appear to be the most solid of all, owe more than half their weight to the presence of fluid.

That our bodies contain a large amount of fluid is proved in a striking manner by the blisters which rise after the infliction of a burn.

Water, in fact, plays a very important part in the human anatomy, for it is through its agency that the vital processes of digestion, absorption and the exerction of waste products are carried out.

To reduce the whole matter to figures and taking 154 pounds to be the total weight of an average full grown man, it is said that water alone accounts for 109 pounds of the whole.

A newly appointed crier in a county court was ordered by the judge in a case in which a Chinese was witness to call for Ah Song. The son of Erin looked puzzled and darted a look at the bench to try to discover if this was a colonial joke; but, seeing the judge as grave as an undertaker, he turned to the audience and blandly inquired, "Gintlemen, will any of you favor his honor with a song?"
