Later in the day it developed that the tragedy proved to be one of these double terrors so common to this day and generation.
 - The story is not a long one. Leonard M. Johnson shot und killed his wife, and then sent a bullet crashing
- through his own brain. About three years ago Johnson met and married Emma Viola Cousins, while the young lady was visiting relatives in Mercer county. For a time, it seems, all went well and the couple lived happily together. A year or more ago an estrangement seemed to grow between them. From there he walked to the home of his wife's aunt, Mrs. Elmer Fitzgerald, a short distance beyond where his wife was staying. where he stayed all night. It appears he talked considerably about his domestic troubles while there, as d left sometime attending school at Beaver, Pa., is at in the forenoon. Shortly before eleven o'clock be appeared at the Longstreth home and was admitted by Mrs. Longs reth, shaking hands with her as he eptered the house. His wife was in the room engaged in sewing. He approached Newtown, visited their daughter, Mrs. and shook hands with her and passed some pleasant remarks, and, Mrs. Longstreth says, stepped back, drew a revolver and shot at his wife. The first shot missed her and she started to run for the bedroom. The second shot struck the woman in the shoulder, and the third crashed through her brain from the back
