morning of the day on which the summons came, Mr. Mealy awoke with a pain in his arms, causing him considerable annovance, but which rapidly passed off going out that day. Not long after, he revived, and while seated, conversing pleasantly with one of the party, was seized with severe pains in his chest, which also passed off quickly and it was supposed he would have no further trouble. Suddenly a change came over him and he apparently fell asleep. This was the end, and he passed away without
