REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES MARCH 19 Meeting of County Chairmen of This District Results in Naming Early

Primary Elections. Pursuant to call the County Chairmen this 28th Congressional District, met in Warren on the 23d inst., and were called to order by Chairman Wilber, of Warren, who stated the object of the meeting to be the selection of a uniform date for holding the Republican primaries in the several counties composing the district, in accordance with the rules governing the party as adopted in conference February 13, 1902. The meeting was organized by electing W. W. Wilbur as Chairman and J. J. Crawford as Secretary.

Upon the call of the roll it was found that all the counties were represented by their chairmen, as follows: Elk, J. C. Millin; Forest, Geo, W. Osgood; Mercer, J. L. Greer; Venango, C. J. Crawford; Warren, W. W. Wilber,

A motion by J. L. Greer was enter-1904, as the date for holding the primaries in the several counties. After a full discussion of the question, the motion was carried by a unanimous vote,

This action disposing of the business for which the meeting was called, a mo tion to adjourn prevailed.

It will thus be seen that we are to have an early primary election, this being made necessary by the fact that the State convention will be held on the 6th of April. Chairman Osgood will give due notice of the places where the elections will be held in the several precincts.

A ROYAL BOOK BUYER.

The Purchase of Diderot's Library

by Catherine II. of Russia, Empress Catherine II. of Russia was great reader and a lover of books. One of her services to letters in Russia was the purchase of the libraries of Voltaire and Diderot. She was a warm friend and admirer of these French philosophers, and their work interested her because she was eager to learn new theories of politics and government. Voltaire's library of about 7,000 volumes is now a part of the Russian imperial library in the Hermitage palace. and in the hall devoted to it is Hou don's statue of Voltaire.

The story of Catherine's purchase of Diderot's library is interesting. It is creditable to her tact and her generosity. Diderot named £15,000 as the price of his library. Catherine II. offered him £16,000 and named as a condition of the bargain that her purchase should remain with Diderot until his tained favoring Saturday, March 19th, death. Thus Diderot, without leaving Paris, became Catherine's librarian in his own library. As her librarian he was given a yearly salary of £1,000. One year this salary was not paid. Then Catherine wrote to her librarian that she could not have him or her li brary suffer through the negligence of a treasurer's clerk and that she should send him the sum that she had set aside for the care and increase of her library for fifty years. At the end of that period she would make new arrangements. A check for £25,000 accompanied this letter.

The Literary Chap In Finance. "I know a literary chap, good writer and all that, but with absolutely no business sense, who suddenly decided the thing for him to do was to start a bank account," said the secretary of a financial institution. "He came in to see me about it. I asked him how much he had, and he said he had saved $59. I told him we rarely started accounts on such small deposits, but would make an exception in his case to encourage thrift and school him in business,

"He went through the preliminaries nervously, signed the signature card, put his money in and got a nice new bank book. By that time he was all flustered. They gave him a check book. and he decided he would have to have some money for present use. The receiving teller introduced him to the paying teller, and he inquired the procedure of checking out money. The paying teller explained at length. Then my literary friend went over to the Dog and Cat. The effect of a dog on a cat's tail is well worth study. When a cat encounters a strange dog the tail immediately assumes an upright position, the back becomes highly arched, and the fur stands out straight all over the body. This sudden change dismays the dog, who brings himself to a halt, and the two regard each other steadfastly.

But if the dog should turn his gaze away for a fraction of a second there is swish and a bound, and the cat has disappeared over a fence or up a tree. Stimulated by the presence of a dog, cats have been known to climb to such heights that they were unable to descend the way they went up.

Transparent Salt.

Some remarkable salt formations are found extending for thirty miles along the Virginia river in Nevada. and is so pure and clear that fine print can be read through a foot of it. WIGS OF BARRISTERS

Man Who Makes Them an Important Pillar of the Law.

In the procession of judges and barristers with which the law courts has reopened the wig-maker plays a conspicuous part. Tolstoi has said that in some plays the make-up is as great an artist as the actor; it may be that the wig-maker is as important a pillar of the law as the lord chancellor himself, says the London News,

Wigs, like many other human institutions, are not what they were. The old wig had to be made of human hair of a dark color, and was pomatumed and powdered every morning. An army of dressers went down to Westminster, and there attended each to his circle of clients, with whom he had an annual contract. It was not a par- is our price now ticularly enjoyable occupation, but it meant a steady income, which was completely cut off by the introduction of the horse-hair wig. We have wondered how the human hair was pro cured, and from all we have learned are still at liberty to imagine that it came from the heads of felons the advocacy of other barristers had brought to the scaffold.

To-day Dr. Tristram, chancellor of the bishop of London's Consistory Court, is the only considerable luminary who wears the old style of wig. though until very lately he was kept in countenance by Mr. Inderwick, K. C The wigs that are worn now are made of white horse hair, with a faint admixture of black. They do not require to be powdered, and only once in half a dozen years or so need they be recurled. Some half-dozen wig-makers in and around the Temple and Lincoln's Inn-many of them related by marriage, and all of long standinggown and wig lawyers between them. It seems that there is an opening for a competitor. The price of a plain barrister's wig is £5 5s., but it sometimes takes two or three weeks to make. The head of Mr. Briefless is very carefully measured, and the lines of his cranium marked upon the most suitable of a hundred blocks or more that the shop contains. The proper surface is then covered with a trellis of thin silk ribbon, carefully sewn together at every point of intersection. On this trellis work the wig is carefully built, so that at last it fits almost as closely as the owner's scalp itself. Other industrious fingers have prepared long strings of hair woven upon slik cord-for the crown of the head little loops, and for the back something more like cropped bair, and technically called "snap." Hundreds of yards of the two kinds are sewn on to the foundation, till all is closely covered, and then the various curls, each very nicely made, are added. Those together, and so deftly knotted that not a bair is buckled from its place It is a long time before the average barrister comes back for a new wig. Even the man who does not care to wear a silk hat that has lost its pristine gloss appears cheerfully in a wig twenty years old. In fact, an old wig is often a desideratum, as it invests the head of its wearer with an appearance of having a large practice-an appearance that is sometimes contrary to the fact. One of the largest of heads belonging to the legal profession is that of Lord Alverstne.
