Big Theatre Floats From Warren to New Orleans.

Perhaps the most interesting of new vessels plying the Ohio, Illinois, and Mississippi rivers is one built upon an extensive scale for use as "a floating theatre, which is thus described in the Scientific

"The seating capacity is for 500 people, and there are boxes for the elite and a pit for the orchestra. In addition the vessel is sufficiently large to admit of numerous sleeping rooms for the actors, the deck bands and all those connected with the show or the boat. The entire force numbers forty. On the steamer which tows the theatre besides the boilers and engines, there is a complete electric light plant, besides a kitchen and dining room.

In view of the fact that the long water route of the floating theater carries it into the warmer portions of the South, the season for the show does not close until late in the Southern winter. The entire route comprises 2,500 miles. The boat, named "The Governor of the Ohio River," is now under construction at Warren, the lumber being farnished by the Rogers Mill Co. for Norris, Blamphire & Co., and will start from Warren on or about April 3d, and will visit all towns along the Allegheny. Thence the boat slowly makes its way in the direction of New Orleans. The idea of a floating theater is not exactly new, but the extensive scale upon which it is being carried on and the fact that it is the demand for comedy and high-class vaudeville acts at a season when the weather is too warm for traveling companies to play opera houses.

On the upper deck of the steamer is a calliope. Long before the theater reaches the town in which it is to show, the sounds of this instrument may be heard. The idle population of the river towns at once begins to assemble on the wharf. As York Clothing sale that is going on the steamer comes within a few hundred feet of the dock the calliope is sitenced and a brass band strikes up a familiar air. The crowd on the wharf grows larger. Many are there awaiting the first opportunity to secure reserved seats. When the boat touches the wharf the sailors make the vessel fast and put the gangplank in place. The scenery is arranged and the orchestra rehearses. The people come aboard and select their seats instead of doing so from a diagram on shore. At night the theater is brilliantly lighted by electricity and a searchlight flashes over the surrounding territory. The entertainment lasts about three hours."

The above floating theater expects to arrive at West Hickory about April 5th, at Tionesta the following day, April 6th.

Mayburg on Monday night, I had just sat down to supper when that awful crash of thunder came. Just before the crash, a streak of forked lightning ran around the room, dazing everybody but hurting none. The clap of thunder seemed to drive one into the ground. Then shouts alter, D. P. A., 807, State street, Erie, of "fire, well on fire!" All the boys Pa. rushed to No. 95, on the Balltown road about a quarter of a mile from town. That awful crack had set two tanks on fire. No. 66 was put out by the neighbors. Not so No. 95. It blazed away as only an oil fire can. The tank was about 30 feet from the derrick, which it set on fire, but the rain and the boys put the fire out and saved the rig. After the fire we discovered that it was caused by the lightning striking a stub, tearing up the ground until it reached the gas and steam lines, ran along them, set No. 65 on fire at the casing-head, and fired the gas at a leak under a house, which was put out.

Also ran up to No. 95 as above. One feature of the fire was especially interesting. There was a blaze about three feet long about 50 feet up the derrick on one of the legs. The old superintendent said, "Boys, I'll give $5 to anybody who will put out that blaze." Carl Christianson ran for the ladder, and had just reached the blaze when an awful dash of rain put it out. Well, Carl got was on fire underneath, where the oil up plank, broke in other places and shoveled snow and ice till all was safe. It was a most interesting time for 15 or 20 minutes but the boys subdued it. The 65 oil tank and tank-house and about 25
