GLIMPSES OF A BUSY WEEK.
 City of Brotherly Love, and Some of Its Colonial Scenes and Relics.
 BY NANCY C. MORROW.
 That "truth is stranger than fiction," or equally as strange, seemed fully demonstrated at the close of the Newark convention. Our Presbyterian president was especially honored by the ladies of the convention, but being unable to take her part at the time required, her secretary was asked to take the place in her place for the last session of the convention. At its close, the pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church, Newark, was also asked to the platform to pronounce the benediction. Twenty-five years and more had passed since these two had seen each other, except for a few minutes two hours before. What faint recollections were recalled by the city pastor of the (perhaps) barefooted, romping girl could not be discerned, but the vision of the young theological student giving his first lecture on "Life as it is," in the old home church in Armstrong county, had been printed too clearly on the childish mind to be forgotten, although it did take a struggle to bring one's self to realize that the man of years and experience and good deeds was indeed the one who had tried to solve life's great problem a quarter of a century past. But the church records of Newark said it was he; the alumni of old Westminster echoed an Amen, and the testimony of his excellent wife could not be doubted. And so it was that the last night in Newark was spent in the pleasant home of the Rev. and Mrs. David W. Lusk. The next morning found us up bright and early, ready for the Philadelphia "flyer," and by 10 o'clock, or a little after, the trio of delegates had landed safely at Broad Street station, each to go in different directions. It was our first visit to the City of Brotherly Love, and as we stepped from the station into the massive arched entrance of City Hall we fairly caught our breath, scarcely knowing where we were going, but we soon spied the Wanamaker establishment, so well known throughout our land, and we felt no longer alone in the world. We might have spent hours within this large department store, but time was precious and the hour for luncheon drawing near, when we were to meet one of our Tionesta friends, Miss Etta Clark, at the Manhattan building. Being told we had "plenty of time" and it was not far, we started to walk in the direction of the Delaware, to reach Fourth street. It seemed a little longer than we had imagined, but we were glad of the opportunity of walking down Chestnut street for this afforded us the privilege of locating with the eye places of business which were familiar. But a surprise awaited us. Strolling along in a country fashion, our eyes caught sight of a building almost sacred to the liberty loving people of America. Could it be possible, that in the heart of a busy populace, we should come so suddenly to an oasis of rest? But it was surely so; and as the clock on the old City Hall said we had some time to spare, we entered the old State House, whose foundations were laid the year George Washington was born, and which had seen over forty years of service before the famous Declaration of Independence was signed in its east assembly room. The walls were speechless. They did not even whisper to us of the historic scenes that were enacted there when "our ancestors" truly lived. Only the painted portraits of colonial fathers looked at us in mute surprise to find a descendant of some of their kindfolk and acquaintances wandering around alone, and wondering much of what they had seen and little of what they were now seeing. Twelve empty chairs sat face to face in dignified silence and only in imagination could we see those early patriots arise, in their courtly manner, and address the presiding officer on a little platform on the east side. On the south side, facing a beautiful park, is the staircase which was ordered built in 1790, to contain "a place therein for hanging a bell." On the entrance floor, in a large glass case, hangs the old Liberty Bell, for whose provision this addition had been made. A tablet on the wall explains the length of its clamorous song for liberty. It states that on the 8th of July, 1776, the citizens of Philadelphia were called together in the park by its ringing to hear the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence, and on each succeeding 8th of July, citizens were still assembled, in its name, to hear the reading of this document, till 1855, when, on the 6th anniversary of this memorable event it was cracked while being tolled in memory of Chief Justice Marshall, whose remains were being conveyed through the city on their way to Virginia. Up stairs, we were especially interested in the large banquet hall facing Chestnut street. Penn's table and cane seated chairs would do very well for twentieth century furnishings, while Washington's grim, upholstered sofa, used during his stay in Philadelphia, and his walnut pew from the old Christ church are too severely plain and somber to suit the fastidious tastes of the present day. In the east and west wings are found the revolutionary and colonial relics, respectively. In a large glass case in the center of the room hangs the old green rattlesnake flag. In another case are satin slippers, with their high heels, that were worn by society ladies of the revolutionary days. Here also are the baby clothes worn by John Quincy Adams and made by his mother, the first mistress of the White House. Abigail Adams is known in history as a literary woman of wide culture and a model mother; but these elegant pieces of fine needle-work are testimonies of her patience and industry, and are silent rebukes to the women of the present day, who fall short of the standard she set of ideal American womanhood. Washington's Masonic spon looks at the sight see through another glass case, but as its meaning is all Greek to us we look at its shape and little relics and pass on.

CONTROL OF MANCHURIA.
Offer of Japan to Surrender to China Captured Territory.
 Washington, May 31.—The reported offer of Japan to China to surrender to her so much of Manchuria as already has been taken by the Japanese troops is viewed here with interest because of the possibility, if the offer is accepted by China, that Russia will hold (but the Celestial empire has thereby violated her pledge neutrality, thus affording ground for an attack upon certain parts of Mongolia that would be of great strategic value in the war. Although the state department has consistently insisted upon recognizing the sovereignty of China over Manchuria, as evidenced by the appointment of consuls under Pekin exequaturs to that province, it also has agreed to admit the existence of a field of war in that section, which field was under Russian control at the outbreak of hostilities. The alternative said to be presented by Japan, of an administration of the captured territory by an international commission, is not likely to meet with much favor in Washington, as the experience of the government, in the Boxer uprising and the subsequent difficulties in getting clear of the obligations incurred in conjunction with European nations have not encouraged further concurrent movements of that kind.

A MODERN battle ship is built in compartments, and yet goes down in a few minutes when her hull is pierced at any point. The theory in the case falls in practice.
THE Chicago Republican convention promises to be a regular love feast. Up to date out of 320 Republican delegates chosen, 813 have been instructed to vote for the President.

 The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WARREN, PA.

Senator Matthew Stanley Quay breathed his last at 2:18 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The announcement of his death, while shocking his friends, was no surprise to them. They had been hoping only against hope for his recovery for several days past. For weeks the great strategist had been fighting against odds that proved too great for even his indomitable will. To write the history of Senator Quay would be to write the political and much of the industrial history of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for nearly thirty years past. Few men in public life have had greater calumny heaped upon them by their enemies, and few men have been held in greater esteem for so vast a circle of friends than has this great leader of men. The secret of his hold upon the affections and confidence of the common people was unambiguous. His power for good to his native State was incomparably greater than that of any member of the United States Senate, and Pennsylvania was the envy of all the other States for possessing such a representative in the National legislature. Through his masterful strategy was the McKinley law passed to the country, and the odious Wilson bill born of much of its power to work evil to the great industries of his State.

Senator Quay's leadership of the Republican party in Pennsylvania has been one grand triumph, almost unbroken from the start. Many good things are being and will be said of him now that he is dead, but it is doubtful of anything better can be said than that he was faithful to his friends.

Senator Quay's funeral, held yesterday from his late home, was a simple and unostentatious one, in accordance with his wish. Thousands gathered in the quiet little city of Beaver to contribute their need of honor to the dead statesman, whom they loved so well, nearly every State in the Union being represented by its leading men of affairs.

If any Methodists wish to play cards for recreation or to go to the theatre for amusement, they will have to do so on the sly, since the conference at Los Angeles has refused to change the rule against these forms of amusement. Dancing is also forbidden.

There is a report that the Parker boom is "ragging." Stranger still it is asserted that Wall Street Democrats, and Tammany Hall, are both working for Grover Cleveland, and that he is regarded as more than a "receptive candidate." The Bryan-Hearst men shout: "Anyone but Parker!" All this is nuts for the Republicans. The more floundering the deeper the mud.

The raising of sugar beets in the West for the purpose of making beet sugar, a policy fostered and protected by Republican administrations, has proved a godsend to that section of the country, and opened up avenues of employment for thousands. Even school boys and girls by the hundred work in the fields pulling weeds, for which they receive one hand a day, quite as much as farm hands are paid in New England. This is vastly better in every respect than leaving boys and girls to run the streets, acquiring vicious habits of idleness.

As BOTH of the State Republican conventions being held in Wisconsin claim to be the regular thing, and both are for Roosevelt and the Republican platform, it will not matter much from a national point of view which one the courts decide to uphold. The quarrel is a bitter one, and Senator Spooner never says, Gov. La Follette claims that his convention has the majority of delegates and Senators Spooner and Charles, who have bolted, make the same claim. Both cannot be right, and both may not be wrong. Wisconsin is safely in the Republican column for at the last presidential election the Republican plurality was 106,567.
