Death of Miss Clara E. Hunter,

Through the courtesy of Rev. Dr. Rumberger, we publish the following sketch of our late friend, Miss Clara E. Hunter, which was given by him at the funeral services, Sabbath afternoon, Clara E. Hunter, daughter of Dr. W. F.

and Elizabeth Holeman Hunter, was January 13, 1847, and "fell asleep" July except the time she spent in acquiring a collegiate education and a few years teaching, was lived within the bounds of what was originally Venango countyher parents, after a short stay in Rockland, returning to Tionsta, then a part of Venango county-now the county seat of Forest county. It is a good thing in every way to be born well, and sister Clara enjoyed the advantage of good birth from both the paternal and maternal side, the Hunters and Holemans being among the most highly respected of the pioneer families of this section of the State. But better still, she enjoyed the incomparable advantage of early birth into the Kingdom of God. In early life she sought and found favor with her Lord and having identified herself with the Methodist Episcopal church, she continued faithful to the profession she had made until the Master deeming her probationship suf-BOVARD'S ficient said, "Come up higher," And so, in the providence of God, on Friday, July ome to himself.

The life story of our departed sister, is the record of faithful preparation for work, faithful discharge of duties assumed and faithful submission to the will of the One whom she gladly owned as master. After a full collegiate course, she graduated in 1871 from the Beaver Female College, and for some time held the position of instructor in her Alma Mater. Prior to this, she had taught in the public schools of Forest county.

Some one has said that it is only when "bruised and crushed that the fragrance of the rose is fully brought out," and the royal poet, David, finds himself praising God for the afflictions which have developed the highest good in him. So it may have been that the years of suffering endured by our patient sister, Clars, developed the grand, lovable traits of character which gained for her the admiration and loving respect of all who knew her. For years she lived under the pall of suffering-no day exempt from discomfort-vet in all that time, no murmuring word escaped her lips, her cheerful smile ever testifying to the brightness of the "inner light"-the supporting presence of the "indwelling Holy Spirit," As friends of the deceased, and of the family, we gather to-day to pay the last charge, prefered by his three children, tribute of respect to one whose life exemplified every christian grace. We come not as mourners. The ending of her earthly pilgrimage was the ending of a

Her life's course for so many years had been so thickly bestrewn with thorns that surely the coming of the Messenger whom the Father sent to summon her home was the bearer of "Glad tidings" of bappy deliverance from a world's woes rest. So we come to pay our tribute of respect and we say in our hearts, "Sister, we extend our heartiest congratulations.

Thou hast entered into rest." During those long nights when sleep was driven away by pain, how she looked for the hour when God's good pleasure having been served in her, she would be "released from the body to be forever with the Master whom she loved" in that for the hour when God's good pleasure having been served in her, she would be with the Master whom she loved" in that land where the inhabitants never say, "I am sick," that land of "unclouded day" where there is neither sorrow nor sigh-Mfs. Roberts called on Mrs. G. L. Car- ing, where God himself shall wipe away all tears. We cannot sorrow for what must be 'everlasting joy" to her, for although surrounded by loving friends whose pleasure it was to anticipate and minister to her every want, yet were her days full of weariness and pain. In the church these many years a new entry will be team made-"Pied in the Lord," but the angels have been saying eyer since last Mr. Roberts took advantage of the ex- Friday evening, "Behold she lives forcursion on the B. & O. and paid a visit to evermore." Her days were clouded by suffering, but at "evening time" there was a "great light," It was my good fortune as pastor and with G. L. Carley. The one that got the friend of the family, to have an intimate knowledge of the Christian life of sister Clara. And it is not in the way of fulsome the Friend who makes good his promise, "Lo, I am with you even unto the end." that I have spoken of the assurance that "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, there ye may be also"-that promise which brought peace to the troubled bearts of the disciples was sufficient to cheer and comfort the heart of this patient sufferer, for she felt that these light afflictions which do indeed appear grievous, were working out in her and for her "an exceeding and eternal weight of glory," Sister Clara had tried, climbing and the darksome deserts where, her soul would have fainted with discouragement. But in the darkest hour will never leave thee nor forsake thee," and abundantly she realized the promise,

'Thy grace is sufficient for thee." Such a life speaks far more eloquently and emphatically than any sermon of the 'exceeding riches' of the grace which Headlight Overalls, (the best overall on earth) in plain blue or stripes, God gives His trusting child in Christ who have known and respected this one whom God has called home.

On Sabbath afternoon, a large number of friends met at the beautiful Hunter residence at 2 o'clock, when the funeral services were conducted by Miss Hunter's pastor, Rev. O. H. Nickle, assisted by a former pastor and friend, Rev. C. C. Rumberger. Her body was borne away floral offerings by Messrs, J. P. Grove, W. W. Grove, A. M. Doutt, L. J. Hopkins, Q. Jamieson and J. T. Dale, and was laid to rest beside her father and
