Gov. PATTERSON warns the Ohio legislature against partisan action, which is a pretty safe thing to do with neither party in control. Talk like that was never heard when both branches were Democratic.

WHILE it is easier to suggest laws than to pass them or secure consent of the courts for their operation, it is to be hoped that the efforts of the Pennsylvania legislature will prove fruitful of real reform.—Titusville Herald. Yes, real reform.

ALL the really good men seem to be quitting Congress. First there was our own and only Joe Sibley; then Mr. Dresser, of Bradford, and now comes "the best and dearest among them all," Hon. William O. Smith, who says he'll not ask to be sent back. It doesn't seem to be a real "love of a job" after all.

FUNNY, isn't it, that most of the newspapers of the State are now violently in favor of trolleys carrying freight, and are saying so out loud? There was a dense silence on the subject a year ago.—Phila. Press.

AND none more dense than the Press. That paper was able to "keep still" in more than nine different and distinct languages.

JUDGE BOTTON, of McKean county, has declared unconstitutional the section of the road law of 1905 which provides a method of abolishing the right to work out taxes on the public roads in the townships of this state. The question came up on the petition of citizens of Foster township to hold an election on the proposition under the terms of the act. The court held the mode provided by the legislature for changing the method of collecting road tax to be in conflict with the clause of the constitution prohibiting special legislation regulating the affairs of townships. It is held that, while the legislature has the right to pass a law changing the system of collecting road tax in townships, it must be of general application. As the legislature can not change the system in one or more townships by direct enactment, it can not delegate authority to do so in the manner provided by the law of 1905.—Kane Republican.

THERE are bills in the House Committee at Washington, providing that animals may be shipped by rail, without food, water or rest, forty hours at a time. This would legalize a refined form of extreme cruelty and the man who introduced them ought to be exposed to the disgrace he deserves. Things are bad enough now, when stock may be kept twenty-eight hours without drink under a July sun in a hot car, but to enable heartless men to keep cattle, say, from Monday morning at six o'clock to Tuesday night at ten, is unworthy of a civilized people. Cattle and horses suffer as keenly as do men and women when they are deprived of water and there are now available thousands of improved stock cars which may be used, and thus the animals properly cared for. Another important consideration is that stock thus treated becomes feverish and unfit for human food. If the National Health Department does not prevent the enactment of any such legislation, or at least try to do so, it will have failed in its duty, and any Congressman voting for these bills ought to be at once retired to private life.—Franklin News.

In the House of Representatives at Harrisburg, Wednesday, Chaplain Moore offered this prayer: "O Lord, we commend Thy blessings to rest on these dear representatives. We verily believe there is not a bad man on this floor that money or political influence could constrain to puncture the dear old constitution of the state. May those representatives quickly consummate the legislation of this session and go to their homes and loved ones, and then they can afford to patiently wait their judgment day in November." It is noted that the reverend gentleman "does not believe there is a bad man" in the House who could be constrained to "puncture the dear old constitution of the state." We trust Chaplain Moore's belief is well grounded, but, as an example of man's faith in man, it must be admitted that the one he furnishes is striking to a degree. All, however, will echo his sentiments to the end that the members get a move on and get home as soon as possible.—Blizzard.

Is yanking himself bodily out of the contest for any future Congressional honors Hon. W. O. Smith, of Punxsutawney, makes a good hit in an editorial in his paper against the detestable rotation system of electing members of Congress, a system which debars many a good and honest man from ever forging to the front, or being of any practical use to his constituency. In conclusion Bro. Smith says, "In making my exit from the Congressional arena, at the end of the present term, I feel that I have played the part of an awkward amateur, in an engagement which has been unsatisfactory to myself and unprofitable to my constituents; that while I have attended to the distribution of seeds and documents, and made an honest effort to get everybody a pension or postoffice, there will be no reason why I should not slip so quietly and unostentatiously back into the harness as the editor of the Punxsutawney Spirit as not in the least to disturb the equilibrium of the country or cause any undue consternation in the next Congress because of my absence."

What Vaccination Did.

Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon has received the following letter from John T. Hyatt, of Jersey Shore, Pa., former Vice-Consul at Santiago, telling of Mr. Hyatt's personal experience in fighting small-pox with vaccine virus:

Jersey Shore, Pa., Jan. 4, 1906. Hon. Samuel G. Dixon, Commissioner of Health, Harrisburg, Pa.: Dear Sir—As at Lock Haven and other parts of the state there is so much opposition to vaccination, as required by the Act of June 18, 1895, I feel constrained to write you some of my own experiences and observations with reference to that subject.

I was American Vice-Consul at Santiago de Cuba from 1893 to 1897 inclusive. The influx to Santiago from the rural districts, where, on account of the revolution, it was very dangerous to live, was very heavy, and particularly after the inhuman reconcentration order of General Weyler. In 1895 industry was stifled and poverty and starvation were reigning supreme at Santiago, meat selling as high as 75c. and $1 a pound, eggs at 10c. apiece, and other things at proportionate prices. At this time yellow fever and small-pox broke out in the most virulent form. It was estimated at the time that during that year there were 10,000 cases of yellow fever and 20,000 cases of small-pox in the city of Santiago. As I recollect it now, the death rate from these two causes alone in that city ascended to a level of from 60 to 100 deaths per day.

The Spanish government, unmindful of the welfare of the people, took little or no steps to stamp out the scourges, and although private enterprise imported a considerable amount of vaccine virus, yet the indifference of the authorities and the opposition of the illiterates, being perhaps about 75 per cent. of the population, prevented any considerable amount of vaccination.

No efforts were made at quarantining. Those suffering in various stages of small-pox walked about the streets, mingling with the people unmolested, and many of them came into the consulate on business. Small-pox broke out in nearly all of the houses in the vicinity of the consulate. One man, I remember particularly, afflicted with the dreadful disease in its confluent form, lay in my plain sight in the open air under the eaves of a house standing back in the adjacent lot, not more than 40 feet from where I worked at my desk, with the breeze blowing from him to me, and I saw this man die and his corpse carried away.

My father and mother and wife were with me at this time, and as soon as the small-pox broke out we were all vaccinated, although we had each been successfully vaccinated in previous years. The vaccination took slightly with each member of our family, and we were all vaccinated regularly thereafter every month or two, in order to use every possible precaution, but the vaccination did not take in any case practically after the first application. Whenever fresh virus came to the consulate from the States we distributed the supply where it seemed to be most advisable. Although constantly exposed to confluent small-pox for nearly two years, none of my family took the disease. Neither did others at Santiago during that eventful period who were careful to be successfully vaccinated, as I recollect now from inquiries then made, although the dead wagons were carrying such a continuous freight to the cemetery that it was a common thing for the sexton and his help when night fell to find 20 or 30 more corpses on their hands for interment than they were able to bury, and which they had to leave out all night in the cemetery and bury in the morning.

If this letter can be of any help to you in your magnificent work of enlightening the people of this Commonwealth on the importance of vaccination, you have my permission to use it. Very respectfully yours, JOHN T. HYATT.

I had been afflicted over 30 years with Piles and had spent over $500 for Pile medicines. Two bottles of San-Cura Ointment completely cured me. It is now three years since I was cured and I have had no return of the Piles whatever. James Lynch, Enterprise, Pa. San-Cura Ointment, 25 and 50c. Made by Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa. AN American officer who has spent several years on the island of Guam says the United States authorities have established there a system of public schools, which are attended by 1500 pupils in the evening, after they study some trade in the daytime. Thirty boys are in an agricultural school, and many others are apprenticed as carpenters, blacksmiths, machinists, printers, plumbers, electricians, butchers, clerks, dentists, hospital nurses and musicians. This sample of Uncle Sam's methods resembles all the rest of his imperialism.

Protect Proprietary Medicines.

Did it ever occur to you that proprietary medicines are a blessing to mankind generally? The good ones have long continued sale; the poor ones have short life and soon leave the market. If we had to depend entirely upon physicians and druggists it would be expensive and very inconvenient at times, especially in the country and at night when neither could be conveniently reached. For nearly forty years Boecher's German Syrup has been used in many families, and thousands of lives of adults and children have been saved by its use, when it was impossible to reach a physician. German Syrup is the best household remedy for coughs, colds, throat and lung trouble. It quickly relieves the hacking cough, loosens the phlegm, and brings sound and refreshing sleep. Twenty-five and seventy-five cents. Get a copy of Green's Price Almanac. For sale by Dunn & Fulton.
