"Married people have the best of it in ocean traveling," said a sea captain, "for they have a stateroom to themselves. People traveling alone, unless they are willing to pay a good deal extra, have to sleep in the same room with strangers, an unpleasant thing. "Some of these lone travelers, to secure privacy, pay extra fare. Othersmany, many others-try to secure privacy by giving us lies instead of money.

"One man will tell the chief steward that he has an intolerable snore. Another will say he is subject to epileptic attacks, wherein in the small hours be becomes a shricking and dangerous manlac. Another will say that in the threes of acute seasickness from the beginning of the voyage to the end he fills the cabin day and night with dis-

Origin of Bouffres.

Bonfires are a survival of the rites of Baal and Moloch. When Christianity ruled old ways and customs could be abolished, and so the heathen, still hankering after the ancient delties, but half controlled by pope or bishop, made their bonfires on the eve of St. Peter or St. John. One use of bonfires in the not so fur distant past was as a means of disinfection. In his "History of the Plague" Defoe tells of bonfires in London streets. There is reason to suppose that lu kindling such fires there was still a remnant of superstition left. It Measure Your Friends. "Did you ever amuse yourself," asks the London Gentlewoman, "on a wet Sunday afternoon by giving marks of appreciation or the reverse to all your friends and acquaintances? This is the method we employ: There are five heads-(1) looks; (2) manners; (3) abilities; (4) merit and (5) 'use'-and this fifth item often balances all the rest, for a person may quite likely possess nearly full marks for looks, manners, abilities and merit and yet be of no possible 'use' to oneself, while, vice versa, some person may be of great use, one may fancy their company, or they may have a knack of sympathy, yet be very deficient in manners or merit. The marks range from 0 to 20, and if you are quite conscientious in awarding your marks you will be surprised to find how the law of averages comes in and how much the sum total of one individual's marks resembles another.

A California judge told the following story: "Montana Jack, a highwayman cuted and convicted while I was district atterney, was a great humorday he received his sentence judge asked him whether he had anything to say against sentence being passed upon him. Jack admitted that be had no protest to make, but that he would like to say a few words to the young men in the courtroom. Consent was given, and Jack spoke as follows:

"Boys, my advice to you is to stick to whatever you are doin'. Don't change your occupation or you'll never get along in the world. Look at me. I was a successful burglar for years, never got caught and collared lots of dough. Then I turned highwayman and got eaught in my first holdup. And here I am, all the result of changing my occupation. Whatever you are, boys, stick to it." - San Francisco
