No fatality that has happened in this community in a long time has occasioned short distance on the woods road, George Brady was driving the front team, and Karl Kiser was on the top of the boiler driving the rear team, Mr. Kiser was walking at the side and when the wheels of the wagon on the side on which he was walking sank into a rut he stepped up beside the team and spatted one of the horses on the rump to urgs them on when the wagon lurched to one side, the dome of the heavy boiler catching the unfortunate man between it and a sapling close to the track. He was caught just above the hips, on the right side like, and so badly squeezed that the cases o his heavy silver watch, which he carried in his fob pocket, were completely flat tened. As little time as possible was lost in getting Mr. Kiser to his home, about two miles distant, in Green township, and to summon medical aid. Dr. Boyard attending him. He found the patient in practically a hopeless condition, although no bones were broken, and no reaction having taken place, Mr. Kiser did not complain much of pain. He lingered until about five o'clock on Thursday morning when the heart action became stilled entirely, and, conscious to the last, he sank to rest as one falling asleep.

This sad occurrence came as a great shock to every one of Mr. Kiser's large circle of acquaintances. The taking off of one so strong and robust, in the prime of life and the flush of perfect health and strength, seems to double the force of the blow to the triends and associates, and what must it be to those nearest and dearest to the unfortunate victim.
