J. Landers. The boys were called before the Court and contessed they had taken the boards to build a play house. Judge Lindsey, after telling the boys that it was wrong to take any property of another, even if so small as a pin, without the permission of the owner, said that it they desired to grow up good, honest men, they must be good, honest

And Mrs. Annie Stitzinger is required to pay the other half of the costs within twenty days from this date, and Floyd Stitzinger is paroled for the time being to his mother, the said Mrs. Annie Stitzinger .-BY THE COURT." The judge also told the boys that this parole would only last as long as they behaved themselves, and if they committed any further offense they might be brought before the Court for a further order. It is hoped all boys will take warning and stop all pilfering and taking property not belonging to them, or trespassing on others lots, or going into yacant buildings, playing cards and smoking in buildings or on board piles,
