

THE Smart & Silberberg STORES.

A Remarkable Clearing Out of High-Grade Eton Dresses.

Models that are exclusive with us alone. Made of fancy mixtures, Panamas, voiles and broadcloths. Classified in three lots:

- No. 1—All $10.00, 15.00 and 18.00 Suits at 5.00.
- No. 2—All $22.50, 25.00 and 30.00 Suits at 10.00.
- No. 3—All $35.00, 40.00 and $50.00 Suits at 15.00.

A really great opportunity. If you want to take advantage of it—if you want to see the best of it, come early.

15 Cravenette Rain Coats, $5.

The first comers have choice, of $10.00, 12.00, 15.00 and 18.00 Rain Coats for 5.00. A wonderfully low price for these worthy garments.

White and Colored Linen Eton Suits

Just a small lot left—about 25 suits. These we have divided into two lots and put a price on them that cannot fail to move them quickly.

- One lot at $2.50, Suits that were 5.00, 6.00 and 8.00.
- One lot at $4.00, Suits that were 10.00 and 12.00.

There must be no hesitancy here; if you are at all interested, come quickly; at these prices they're not going to linger long.

Fine White Summer Dresses, $1.95

Just think of that! If we gave you the materials you'd hardly make them up for this price, and they're nicely made too. Materials are fine white lawn, waist handsomely finished with embroidery and lace.

THE USUAL WAY

"Dearie," said young Mrs. Winston tenderly, as her husband smoked silently on the veranda, "tell me—do you think you would ever have married anybody but me, ever?" "Never," said Winston. "Oh, but you would," said young Mrs. Winston positively. "Now think, dearie. Not Margery Catlin?" "Never," said Winston. "But you used to go about with her a lot and you know you did. Not Halie Marston?" "Not on your life." "But I heard a great deal of gossip about you and Halie to-day and I have my doubts. Not—Laura Greenleaf, dearie?" "Who's been stuffing you with ghost stories?" "Never mind that. Would you?" "Not while I could run?" "But this person was very positive and ought to know." "That's where I'm strong, too. I ought to know." "I do know that you used to play golf with her." "Not quite; she played with me." "And she took you driving times without number, and drove, too. What were you doing all that time?" "She had a horse, my dear, and preferred to drive it. I made myself agreeable in various ways. You don't think I whistled or went to sleep, do you?" "Dearie!" "Well?" "I want to ask you something." "Fire away." "Did you ever kiss Laura Greenleaf?" "I forget." "You don't. A woman would never forget a thing like that." "Then run over to the north side and ask Laura." "But she wouldn't tell me." "Well, then, I suppose it is one of the riddles of life." "Dearie!" "Well?" "Please tell me. I'm perfectly sure you did. Now, didn't you?" "I forget." "I know that's false. You must remember. You can go up north on that hunting trip if you tell me. Now, didn't you kiss her?" "Do you mean that? That you won't cry over my coat and think I've shot myself? Well, then, I never kissed her. Where's my hunting suit and leggings?" "I don't believe you. I know you did. I know that's not true." "Well, why in the nation would you rather have me say I did kiss her?" "Because I want the truth, and you've told me two—"

"Well, how in creation do you know that? I say that—"

"You don't remember and then that you didn't—"

"Well, then, now I say I did. Now, let's hunt up those togs."

"Well, I'm glad you got up courage enough to tell me the truth at last, only I could have believed you easier if you had said 'yes' at the very first instead of—"

"Well, my dear?"

"But as it is you've—why, you've told me three different stories—three different, total different, stories about a simple little matter. Now, haven't you?"

"Your enumeration is practically correct, my dear."

"Well, then— Oh, I've caught you red-handed. You've told fibs. But you told the truth at last."

"So you have said before."

"But did you?"

"You have said it."

"But which thing am I to believe?"

"My dear, your choice is unbiassed. I have at least told you the truth. And the important outcome to me is that the day after to-morrow I start on that forbidden trip. I'm ever so much obliged, my dear."—Chicago News.

"The Licorice Plant. Our entire licorice supply—about two millions dollars' worth yearly—comes from the countries bordering on the Mediterranean. Licorice people think that licorice comes from the wooden twigs and branches of a tree. But in reality the licorice root is the root part of a very pretty, dainty plant, which has beautifully shaped leaves that are covered bright green on one side and pale silvery green on the other. The licorice plant is a perennial, and in England, where they are trying to make an industry of raising it, the experimenters plant it in rows between cabbages and potatoes."

"The Candie Nut. This nut is a native of the Pacific Islands, and the name is derived from the fact that the kernels are so full of oil that when dried they can be used on lamps and used as candles. The people of Hawaii, after having roasted these nuts and removed the shells, reduce the kernels to a paste, which, when flavored with pepper and salt, is said to be a most appetizing dish. The husk of the nut and the gum which exudes from the tree have medicinal values, while the burned husk is used to make an indelible ink with which tattooing is done."

"Cats on Ocean Liners. Every large ocean liner carrying passengers always has on board from six to ten cats, these being apportioned to various parts of the ship, as well as appearing in the vessel's books as regular passengers. A few of the first class saloon cats have become quite celebrated, especially in the long-voyage boats that go to India and Australia. Large sums have been offered for one saloon cat on a great line."

"Auctions in Japan. They have a queer way of holding auctions in Japan, and these affairs are entirely without noise. The auctioneer puts up the object to be sold and asks for bids on it. Each bidder then writes his highest price on a bit of paper and deposits it in a box. The box is opened and the object given to the one who has offered the most for it."

"Lord Curzon's Writing. Lord Curzon's writing was so bad at Oxford that when he wrote to a relative and to a friend with whom he was wont to be candid about that relative's shortcomings, and put the letter in the wrong envelope no harm resulted. His kinsman couldn't read the letter, but surmised it must be a request for money and sent a check at once."

"Characteristics of Elephants. A herd of elephants is usually one family, and similarity of features can be traced in them with ease. Observations have shown that in one herd of twenty-one the trunk of each was long, the same breadth throughout, and not tapered to a point. In another of thirty-five the eyes of all were of one color."

"Tongues of Various Animals. The tongues of some animals are very dangerous weapons. A lion could speedily kill a man by merely licking him with his tongue. The tongues of all the members of the cat family are covered with curious recurving spines, formed of tooth cartilage."

"My face and neck were one mass of sores; the doctor said I had eczema and erysipelas. Finally I used San-Cura Ointment and slept all night for the first time in weeks, and in a short time was completely cured. Chas. Fay, Townville, Pa. 2c and 5c, at Dunn & Fulton's."

EUROPEAN PAUPER PRINCES

Instances in Which Titles Are a Menace to the Owner. Titles are not nearly so valuable an asset as Americans are inclined to suppose. A study of the curious phases of life in eastern and central Europe would reveal some astonishing facts concerning the degradation of royalty. In many parts of Europe the father's title is inherited by all his children, and there are said to be many villages in Austria, Poland and Russia in which all the peasants are legitimately descended from some princely ancestor. They are legally described as "princes" in all official documents, and on leaving their homes many of these peasant princes find themselves greatly handicapped by the burden of a high-sounding title. Unfortunately, however, they cannot get rid of their titles, and are driven to the expedient of trying to conceal their existence. In this they are not often successful, for by the police regulations no employe can be engaged without showing his "papers", in which the rank, age and occupation are stated. The reason that titles prove a handicap to the peasant so afflicted is that few people are willing to engage a workman of legally far higher rank than themselves. Thus the peasant prince finds himself without a job, and as often as he secures one the production of his "papers" is apt to end the engagement."

"The Royal Color. Purple has always been considered the royal color. The ill-fated Charles I. was, however, at his own desire, crowned in a robe of white. Although he was seriously reminded that the two exceptions to this rule, Richard II. and Henry VI. who wore white satin robes at their coronations; both had come to a violent end, one at Fotheringhay castle and one in the Tower, Charles I. was resolute in his decision, and, when, twenty-three years afterwards, almost to a day, his body was conveyed to its grave through a heavy snowstorm, the superstitions could not help remarking that the third "white king" had suffered a violent death."

WHOLE OR HALF TRUTHS.

Better be single in peace than married in war. The rack of success isn't located in a field of roses. The fellow who objects to discipline needs it the most. You can inherit ability, but you've got to hustle for experience. The optimist has an easy time of it. He smiles while others work. It doesn't cost anything to say "good morning" even if it's raining. Some folks ought to take their consciences out once in awhile for exercise. Silence isn't always golden. The talker with something to say is worth a dozen keep stills. The optimist who thinks that folks are civilized should yell "Fire!" to a crowded house and watch results.—From "Gumption" by N. C. Fowler, Jr.

"A Shopgirl's Pines. It was not a very cheerful memorandum and the shopgirl's look was not very cheerful either as, on pay night, she brought it home to her mother. It was a memorandum of the fines that had taken a good slice out of her wages, and it ran: Standing on chair ..... 10.10 Leaving less than one yard on ribbon roll ..... 10 Permitted patron to depart unserved ..... 25 Lateness ..... 50 Gum chewing ..... 10 Error in adding ..... 25 Writing indistinct duplicate ..... 10 Error in address ..... 10 Total ..... $43.35

"There are 100 rules posted up in our little shop," said the girl bitterly, "and an infraction of any one of them is finable."—New York Press.

"A Tough Problem. The following letter received at this office has been referred to the Lancaster Literary Society: 'I married a widower and went to live in the home where he had lived with his first wife. I find a number of her clothes in a closet—to wit, one brown dress skirt, two petticoats, three pairs of stockings, one pair of slippers and a black silk waist. How shall I dispose of them in a way that will be satisfactory to her relatives and the neighbors?'—Athens Globe.

He who murmurs against his condition does not understand it, but he who accepts of it in peace will soon learn to comprehend it.—Aun.
