lowing pathetic way. Would that every driver, not alone of livery horses, but "The livery horse has an unhappy life. He is driven by many men of many minds-and by some who have no minds at all. He is driven up hill and down; over rough roads and smooth ones; through mud; through dust." And the man behind the whip is always in a hurry. The livery horse must keep on running or trotting or backing, as the case may be. A livery horse, in the estimation of the driver, is a machine with neither rights nor reelings. It is an animal to be used for convenience. It may be thirsty, tired, hungry or ill. The driver does not care. He has paid (or is expected to pay) a certain sum for the old nag and the nag must earn the monev. It's no wonder the poor livery horse is poor. If he could free himself from the thraidom which circumstances have thrust upon him, and if he could convey his impressions of the average human being, he would easily prove that the animal who does the driving has neither onscience nor soul."

-Annual Opening, Meadville Commercial College,

SEPTEMBER 4th, 1906

We want to get in touch with bright, ambitious, intelligent young men and women. There is an insistent demand for competent bookkeepers, stenographers and telegraphers and we were unable to fill many of the calls that came to us last year. The

Meadville Commercial College,

Meadville, Pa., is better and stronger than ever before. It is one of two schools in the state of PENNSYLVANIA affiliated with the American Commercial Schools Institution, Washington, D. C.

The courses of study, faculty, etc., have been strengthened and improved during the past year and the very best courses are now given in Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Telegraphy, Typewriting, and English. Illustrated catalogue, sent on request, tells all about the school.

If you want to secure your education at the best school, a school that will look after your interests when you have completed the course, attend the
