Attend a Good School

No young man or woman expects to take more than one shorthand or con-mercial course. It is usually the last course of study taken before entering business life, and one cannot be too careful in choosing the school. A mistake may mean total failure, while the right course in training would have resulted in splendid success. The teachers, the course of study, the pupils with whom be associates, the lessons, and all the surroundings, influence a pupil for good or evil at this period.

The Meadville Commercial College, Meadville, Pa.,

Is recognized as one of the leading com-mercial schools of the United States. It occupies a field entirely its own, its teachers are of the best, the attendance the largest, and it has a national reputation. Send for our new catalogue, Students may enter at any time. School now in

Burglars Visit Tionesta.

The safe in the Tionesta gas office was blown open by burglars last Wednesday night or early Thursday morning, but no valuables were secured, the cracksmer being frightened away after blowing off the outer door, which was completely demolished, the explosive used being receipt of a communication from R. A. nitro-glycerine. When Superintendent Clark came to the office, about 7 o'clock Thursday morning, he made the first discovery of the attempted robbery, finding things in a rather mixed condition when he entered the building. On the same night the till of the P. R.
