

Smart & Silberberg STORES.

The New Toy Store Is Ready.

"Toyland, this bright merry girl-and-boy-land," fills the big new basement of this big store. Fills it with everything that the minds of little folks can imagine or their hearts crave for playtime enjoyment. No need to tell you the details—you know—every child knows what to expect when this store promises anything new. Suffice it to say we've made great preparations and the result is most gratifying. Early last spring we began our buying. Orders were placed with the largest importers of foreign toys and in every instance only first hands were bargained with. Every dollar's worth you will now see was brought direct from either manufacturer or importer, our buying syndicate effecting thereby a saving of nearly one-third. You'll note quite a difference in our way of pricing.

SWEET FACED SUSAN.

She Gave an Awful Jar to the Young Man's Pride.

Day was trembling on the edge of night. The sun had dropped behind the hills and splashed the sky with red. For two hours Susan and Henry had been talking. Gentle reader, do you know what they were talking about? No? Suffice it to say, whatever it was, an amicable conclusion had been reached. Susan was sweet-faced and tender, and the amethystine tints of the evening touched her face softly, and the fading light threw a halo about her head. Yet she was no spring chicken. But what odds?

Henry had passed all the years of his bachelorhood in a boarding house and couldn't have told spring chicken from old hen to save half his salary. He folded her to his throbbing bosom and then slowly unfolded her. "We shall be happy," he whispered. "Yes, Henry," she murmured. "You say I shall believe, now, henceforth and for ever." "I can never be such a husband as you deserve, Susan," he almost sighed. "No, Henry," she said. "I suppose not; but at my time of life I can't afford to be too particular. Come in and have some supper." And Henry went in.—Sketch.

A Roland for an Oliver.

They had come to the parting of the ways, and at last Mrs. Tarty felt she could with safety indulge in a few trenchant and apposite remarks. "And now you are going, Jane," she said, "allow me to say that I trust you will leave me in orthodox ways—I mean in a proper conveyance. You remember when you came here, which was brought on a wheelbarrow." "Yes," said Jane, serenely; "that will be all right. My new master and mistress are coming for me in a motor car. I just caught sight of them going a little way down the street." "Pat," asked Mrs. Tarty, "why didn't they drive to the front gate?" "Well, mum," said Jane blantly, "I expect they didn't want people to think they were visiting here!"—Answers.

A Careful Calculation.

One day as Pat halted at the top of the river bank, a man famous for his acquisitive mind stopped and asked: "How long have you hauled water for the village, my good man?" "Six years, sor," said Pat. "Ah! How many loads do you take in a day?" "From ten to fifteen, sor." "Ah, yes! Now I have a problem for you. How much water at this rate have you hauled in all, sir?" The driver of the watering cart jerked his thumb backward toward the river and replied: "All the water yer don't see there now, sor."—Christian Advocate.

She Earned It.

A good story is told about a certain home missionary movement in which every participant was to contribute a fortnight that she had earned herself by hard work. The night of the collection of fortunes came, and various were the stories of the earnings of the money. One woman had made dresses, another had gone charring, and so on. The chairman turned to the woman in the front row. "Now, madam," said he, "how did you earn your fortune?" "I got it from my husband," she answered. "Oh," said he; "from your husband. There was no hard work about that." The woman smiled faintly. "You don't know my husband," she said.—Tatler.

An Interesting Occasion.

There is a prominent business man in Baltimore whose present wife is not the wife of his youth, nor yet of his early manhood, but the lady of his fourth choice. Just before the fourth marriage the Baltimore man was slightly disconcerted when he was approached by one of his numerous daughters, the offspring of the second venture into matrimony, who naively asked: "Papa, I suppose you're going to allow me to see you married, aren't you? You know, I've never been at any of your weddings!"—Exchange.

A Careful Patient.

A woman whose throat had troubled her for a long time, says a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, grew impatient at the slow progress she was making, and made complaint to her doctor, who said: "Madam, I can never cure you of this throat trouble unless you stop talking, and give your throat a complete rest." "But, doctor," objected his patient, "I'm very careful what I say. I never use harsh language, or anything of that kind."

Not Worth Much.

Biggs (to cabman)—What will you charge to take me and my wife to Blank's Hotel? Cabman—Half a crown, sir. Biggs—And how much for taking me alone? Cabman—The same, half a crown. Biggs (to his wife)—There, my dear, you see how much you are valued at.—Tatler.

Boyer—What makes you say that man renovates headgear? Is he a hatter?

Joyce—No, an alienist. Forty-eight kinds of house fly have been classified by naturalists.

—I had malaria two summers in succession and I got so bad I could not work. All the doctors here could not build me up. I had only taken Thompson's Blood-purifier and Kidney Cure for three days when I saw a great change. I think one more bottle will make me as strong as ever. N. A. Nason, Ashland, Wis. Dunn & Fulton.

A GUARANTEED CURE FOR PILES.

Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles. Druggists are authorized to refund money if Pazo Ointment fails to cure in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

MAKING IT PLEASANT FOR THEM.

By the Warm Greeting Extended to Her Guests.

Aunt Abigail had consented at last to give her house external treatment for chronic shabbiness. The painters did a good job finishing the front steps last, but forgot to put a board across the balusters to keep persons from running up or down the steps, and the good dame did not observe the oversight.

While she was clearing away the supper dishes, an hour or two after the painters had gone, there came a ring at the front doorbell. Aunt Abigail, full of wrath, hastened to the door and opened it. There stood the pastor and his wife. "I'm delighted to see you, Mr. and Mrs. Baxter," she said, with a frosty smile. "I'm delighted to see you—but I just knew somebody would come up those freshly painted steps before they were dry. Come right in and make yourselves at home, and don't forget, for goodness sake, to wipe your feet on the mat inside!"—Chicago Tribune.

Self Help.

Owing to circumstances which are not germane to this history, Ethel's mistress had to spend a week in London, and, having returned, she was making some necessary inquiries. "I hope you looked after the canaries, the parrot and the cat while I was away?" she said. "Oh, yes, mum," said Ethel; and then she wept. "B-but one d-day," she sobbed, "I forgot to give the cat her dinner." "Well, well," said the mistress, "don't cry. I don't suppose that did any harm." "N-no; but she went and 'elped' herself, mum," Ethel explained. "She ate the parrot and the canaries!"—Answers.

Paste Jewels.

Many a fire of love is kindled with bank notes. Duty is happiness grown humdrum. There is still many vacant lots in Don't Worry street. How poor is he who hath only wealth! Stained-glass sermons don't make whole-souled saints. The only way for a man to get over the illusions about his first love is to marry her. Much devotion and respect may be accounted for by the attractiveness of a widow's weeds. "When experience comes in the door youth files out the window."—New Orleans Picayune.

A Different Bird.

"My dear Sister Brown," said the minister, "I grieve to see that you wear a feather in your hat. The beautiful birds were given us that we might enjoy their music and—" "Yes, I know, Brother Partridge, but this came from the tail of the parrot whose crowing used to annoy you and you and Mrs. Fourthly helped to bring him the last time you ran over to dinner." "Ah, as I was saying, we have had a lovely winter so far."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Terrific Threat.

The little girl came home from school in the middle of the forenoon in a high state of excitement. "What is the matter, dear?" asked her mother. "Jimmy Trendway scared me." "How?" "Why, he's been having the manes, and he's got some of 'em left—d-d when I wouldn't give him a life if my apple he said he was going to throw a mump out of his pocket and throw it at me!"—Chicago Tribune.

With Conditions.

"I long for private life," sighed the senator. An aspirant for the place picked up his cane. "Yes," continued the great man, "were it not for the honor and the salary and the mileage I'd decline to serve longer than six or seven terms more." The ears of the aspirant were observed to wilt.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It Cured Her.

"Edith married a candy manufacturer, didn't she?" "Yes." "Well, now she can eat all she wants of the stuff." "No, she won't touch an ounce of it." "Why not?" "He's let her into the secret of the way he makes it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

At the Last Call.

When the trumpet has been sounded, and the last sweet song is sung, when the timbrels have been pounded, and the final bell's been rung, as the souls thro' space go soaring, will there come the daily stunt—Will we hear the con's voice roaring: "Please move forward. Up in front!"

An Ounce of Prevention.

Cooke—Do you think Dr. Knawker's cough medicine does any good? Ashley—Not unless the directions are followed. Cooke—What are the directions? Ashley—Keep the bottle tightly corked.—Woman's Home Companion.

Benner—Will there be many stories in that new building?

Jenners—"It is going to be a publishing house."

Chapped Hands.

Wash your hands with warm water, dry with a towel and apply Chamberlain's Salve just before going to bed, and a speedy cure is certain. This salve is also invaluable for sore nipples, itching skin and skin diseases. For sale by Dunn & Fulton.

—For twelve years I suffered with a sore foot. All the doctors failed to cure it. San-Cura Ointment removed the pain, drawing out pus and making a complete cure in two weeks. Th-mas J. Kerr, Union City, Pa. San-Cura Ointment, 25 and 50c. Dunn & Fulton.

Egyptian Onions.

Egypt has been regarded by some people as the land of pyramids and mummies only, but it has from time immemorial had a reputation for onions. Ancient Egyptians swore by the onion and regarded the plant as sacred. The inscription on the pyramid of Cheops tells us that the workmen had onions given to them, and from the Bible we learn that the Hebrews, when slaves under Pharaoh, enjoyed these bulbs, and that when far away they remembered "the leeks and the onions and the garlic." The Egyptian onion is a handsome and useful vegetable, and by selecting the best strains of seed the quality tends, year by year, to improve. The Egyptian knows two varieties, the "Baali" and the "Miskaoui," but supplies of the latter kind are seldom sent abroad, as they absorb so much moisture from the frequently irrigated ground in which they are grown that they do not stand in sea voyage well. The "Baali" onion is the more popular Egyptian onion and is grown in yellow soil, which is sparingly watered while the bulbs are maturing, in order that the onions may stand a lengthy sea voyage with little risk of sprouting.

Cheap Living in Norway.

"It is a good scheme," said a rich man, "to spend the summer in Norway. The Norwegian climate is superb, the scenery is grand and the living is cheap—a dollar a day at the hotels and carriages at a half dollar a day. One fine thing about Norway is that in the summer the night only lasts a couple of hours, and if you go as far as the North cape there is no night at all, but the sun circles round and round the horizon and never sinks below. The Norwegian rivers abound in fish, and any one is free to angle for trout in them. The salmon rivers, though, are strictly preserved. Some of the salmon rivers are very fine and rent for as much as $2,000 a year. I know a man who has a river only two miles long that he pays $1,800 for. He often gets fish sixty or seventy pounds. The day I called on him his wife came in with a forty pounder, a twenty-two pounder and a fifty-one pounder that she had caught herself within three hours."

A Forest of Giants.

It is almost impossible for one who has seen only the eastern or Rocky mountain forests to imagine the woods of the Pacific coast. Pictures of the big trees are as common as postage stamps, but the most wonderful thing about the big trees is that they are scarcely bigger than the rest of the forest. The Pacific coast bears only a tenth of our woodland, but nearly half of our timber. An average acre in the Rocky mountain forest yields one to two thousand board feet of lumber; in the southern forest, three to four thousand; in the northern forest, four to six thousand. An average acre on the Pacific coast yields fifteen to twenty thousand. Telescope the southern and Rocky mountain forests, toss the northern on top of them and stuff the central into the chinks, and, acre for acre, the Pacific forest will outweigh them all.—American Magazine.

Stains on Books.

Ink stains may be removed from a book by applying with a camel's hair pencil a small quantity of oxalic acid diluted with water and then using blotting paper. Two applications will remove all traces of the ink. To remove grease spots lay powdered pipeclay each side of the spot and press with an iron as hot as the paper will bear without scorching. Sometimes grease spots may be removed from paper or cloth by laying a piece of blotting paper on them and then pressing the blotting paper with a hot iron. The heat melts the grease, and the blotting paper absorbs it.

The Little Toe to Go.

A comparative anatomist says that the little toe has got to go; that it is a useless appendage, already showing signs of degeneration or withering away. It is proved that the horse, in the course of several centuries, has dropped four toes and now travels on one, and some think that man's pedal extremities are bound to follow a similar line of evolution. In the horse it is the middle digit which has survived as the fittest. In man it will be the first or great toe.

In No Hurry.

An old citizen who had been henpecked all his life was about to die. His wife felt it her duty to offer him such consolation as she might and said: "John, you are about to go, but I will follow you." "I suppose so, Manda," said the old man weakly, "but so far as I am concerned you don't need to be in any blamed hurry about it!"

Past, Present and Future.

Mrs. D. Vorces—If I could only forget the past! But, alas, it is ever before me! Mrs. Oldm—You'll have a sad future with your past always present. Take my advice and leave the past behind for the present and live in the future for the future and not in the past.—Life.

An Experiment.

Suburbanite (to visitor)—Oh, how are you? Come right in! Don't mind the dog. Visitor—But won't he bite? Suburbanite—That's just what I want to see. I only bought that watchdog this morning.—Paris Hires.

Nothing in It.

First Burglar—Did Bill get much out of that last burglary? Second Burglar—No; he got so little that his lawyer advised him to plead guilty.—Judge.
