

THE Smart & Silberberg STORES.

An Unusual Offering of CURTAINS.

Kash Kounts.

The firm of Jordon & Woodbury, of Boston, Mass., one of the largest curtain factories, have agreed to disengage, so decided to dissolve partnership. Upon talking it over they realized that assets in cash were easier settled than merchandise. So we got the merchandise and they got the cash. We could not get all we wanted, but got all we could. Now to make more business (between seasons) and turn the goods buickly we offer our customers a chance to buy a choice lot of curtains at less than one-half factory cost.

Remember the lots are small, but enough for your wants if you come in time.

THE RIGHT OF PRIVACY.

Was a Thing Unthought of in the Western Hotel.

The attitude of this great democratic country of ours toward the dignity of the individual, the security of the threshold, the right of privacy, reminds us of the old story of the Eastern man coming to that awful jumble of cowboys, bronchos, and desolation generally, called "God's country."

He reached a small town and put up at the Palace Hotel. When she to his room he was about to remove some of the dust of God's country from himself, but found there was no curtain on the window. Therefore, as he had already removed his shirt for the purpose of making his ablutions, he hung the shirt over the window.

In a few minutes the window was opened and a head thrust in. "What is the matter?" said the Eastern man. "Oh, nawthin' nawthin'" replied the head; "I just wanted to see what there was so—much privacy about."—Argonaut.

Why She Sat Quiet.

These two never meet without some lively side-stepping. One morning Morthy Ann was coming into the house with her basket of wash and ran into Betsy all diked out in her "Sunday Susan" clothes. "Mount Betsy, wha' yo' gwine all dressed up in you' dese-heabs?" cried Morthy Ann, devoured by a curiosity.

"Wha' I'm gwine?" exploded Betsy, fixing her with a lurid glare. "Wha' I'm gwine? I'm gwine wha' I'm gwine. dat's wha' I'm gwine! All de dese axin' me wha' I'm gwine!" Morthy Ann was transfixed.—Nadon's Magazine.

Paddy's Letter.

Those fond of Irish bulls may find some amusement in the following letter, which was written by an amorous swain of the Emerald Isle to his lady fair.

"My Darlin' Peggy:—I met you last night and you never came! I'll meet you again to-night, whether you come or whether you stop away. If I'm there first, sure I'll write my name on the gate to tell you of it, and if it's you that's first, why rub it out, darlin' and no one will be the wiser. I'll never fall to be at the tyrant's place, Peggy, for, faith, I can't keep away from the spot where you are, whether you're there or whether you're not.

"Your own Paddy."

Her Explanation.
 Teacher—For a correct understanding of this sentence, "They cleaned up $75 between them," it is necessary to explain that there was no verbal act of cleaning up. The words convey the idea of distribution, or parceling out, and may relate to the division of the proceeds of a financial transaction of the spoils of a questionable or dishonest venture.

Tommy Tucker—I understand the sentence all right, but I don't know what your talking about.—Chicago Tribune.

Too Generous.
 George—I have been invited to a "flower party" at the Pinkies'. What does it mean?

Jack—That's one of the newest ideas this season. It is a new form of birthday party. Each guest must send Miss Pinkie a bouquet containing as many flowers as she is years old, and the flowers must have a meaning. Study the language of flowers before ordering.

Florist's Boy (a few hours later)—A gentleman left an order for twenty of these flowers to sent to Miss Pinkie with his card.

Florist—He's one of my best customers. And eight or ten more for good measure.

Nothing Wasted.
 An old slave named Sambo had been in the habit of stealing his master's chickens. For a long time he had escaped detection, but was at last caught in the act and brought to his master.

"Now, you black scoundrel," said his master, "are you not ashamed of yourself for stealing my chickens?"

"Well, massa," answered Sambo, "I see don't see very much wrong in it, for I'm your property and the chickens are your property, and I only put one piece of property into another. You certainly got less chicken, but you got more nigger."

A Stern Necessity.
 A small girl in a Harlem apartment was observed by a friend of the family eating a certain cereal preparation. She seemed to eat saultily.

"Don't you like that, my dear?" inquired the friend. "Not partic'ly," replied the little maid. "Why do you eat it, then?" The daughter of the house paused with spoon on edge of bowl.

"It's got to be eaten," she answered, gravely. "The grocery man gives mamma a rag doll for every two packages she buys, and it's got to be eaten every morning." And she continued to eat the cereal.

Lucky for Him.
 "What do you think of the man who stole that immense sum of money?"

"Well," answered Broncho Bob, "I 'spose we'll have to go ahead and spend time and money on a trial. It's lucky for him it wasn't a boss."—Washington Star.

Unappreciative.
 Three Germans were sitting at luncheon recently and were overheard discussing the second marriage of a mutual friend, when one of them remarked:

"I tell you what. A man who marries de second time don't deserve to have lost his first wife."—Life.

Judge and Juror.
 Elmer had had company all day, and a sleepy boy was never put to bed. Just as his mother finished undressing him he said: "Mamma, I said my prayers on the way upstairs, so as to save time."

Chapped Hands.
 Wash your hands with warm water, dry with a towel and apply Chamberlain's Salve just before going to bed, and a speedy cure is certain. This salve is also invaluable for sore nipples, itching piles and skin diseases. For sale by Dunn & Fulton.

—My arm was badly scalded with steam and was very painful. I applied San-Cura Ointment, which stopped the pain at once and the arm healed rapidly. I always keep it in the house. Gilbert Hard, Rinard's Mills, Monroe Co., O. San-Cura, 25 and 50c. Dunn & Fulton.

WHY SHE SAT QUIET.

There was an Expression of Opinion When the Fond Mama Left.

A certain gushing lady took her four-year-old daughter to a photographer. The little one could not be made to sit still. The camera man was as nice and suave as he could be, called the child all the sweet, endearing names he could think of, while using every device of gentle persuasion to make the little wiggler keep still. Finally he turned to the despairing mother and said:

"Madam, if you will leave your darling with me for a few moments, I think I can succeed in taking her lovely face to perfection."

The mother withdrew for a short time. Soon the photographer summoned her and exhibited a highly satisfactory negative. When they reached home the mother asked:

"Nellie, what did that nice gentleman say to you when I left you alone with him?"

"Well, he thaid," lisped Nellie, "if don't thit still, you ugly, squint-eyed monkey, I'll thake the life out of you'r trebleing ecath." Then I that very still, mamma!"

Inconveniently Tall.

The mayor of one of the communes of Augers had ordered a gamekeeper and a butcher to take a madman named Legend to the St. Genimes lunatic asylum. On the way the gamekeeper noticed that their charge was in one of his lucid intervals and concluded that he would never consent to be handed over to the authorities. It was decided, therefore, to make him drunk, and all three adjourned to the nearest inn. Legend took his liquor kindly. So did the others. And when the trio arrived at the asylum the governor could not make head or tail of their story. He therefore wired to the mayor, asking him which was the man who was to be detained. The mayor replied Legend, but the telegraphist spelled it in two words, "Le grand" (the tall one). The governor, on examining the three men, saw that one was much taller than the others, so he promptly clapped him into a strait waistcoat and sent the other two away. It was three days later before the error was discovered.

Bismarck Forgave.

Bismarck could forgive, but he wished to do it after proper solicitation. At the beginning of the Danish war Field Marshal Wrangel, who was at the head of the Prussian troops, was exceedingly annoyed at one point to be telegraphed not to advance farther, and he returned a message telling King William that "these diplomatists who spoil the most successful operations deserve the gallows." After that Bismarck ignored him completely, and one day they met at the king's table, where it was especially awkward to preserve a coldness. Wrangel called everybody "du," and presently he turned to Bismarck, who was seated next him, and said, "My son, canst thou not forget?" "No," was the curt reply. After a pause Wrangel began again, "My son, canst thou not forgive?" "With all my heart," said Bismarck, and the breach was healed.

The Redwood.

Redwood forests are practically unharmed by forest fires, and it is common practice for the lumbermen to fell the trees and peel the bark from them and when the dry season is on set fire to the felled timber and burn the branches and bark and other wreckage without practical injury to the saw logs, which procedure would mean disaster to any other wood. Redwood contains no resin or turpentine of any kind, and, owing to its great resistant qualities in severe climatic conditions, is free from cracking or decay, where others might lodge and start fires. When burning, it is easily extinguished with a small quantity of water. It has the appearance of burnt cork and is harder to ignite a second time than at first.—Scientific American.

Paris' Secondhand Market.

There is a curious old market near Paris in which everything is sold at second hand. Working girls can fit themselves out there from head to foot. As a writer says, "Mimi can sell her old felt hat and buy a straw one, exchange her old dress for a new one and, if she likes, buy a steak and a salad for her dinner, a paper bag of fried potatoes, sweets and some flowers for her window. Democracy is king here, and no more attention is paid to the millionaire who is looking for something marvelous which he may pick up cheap than to the man with the wooden leg who wants a new left boot in exchange for a dozen sardine tins, five gloves and a stocking."

Lord Kelvin's Bravery.

Lord Kelvin once performed a daring experiment before a class of students. In the course of his lecture he said that while a voltage of 3,000 or so would be fatal to a man a voltage of some 30,000 would be harmless. He was going to give a practical illustration on himself, but the students cried out, "Try it on a dog!" Lord Kelvin cast a look of reproach at his class. "Didn't I figure it out myself?" he said quietly, as he walked to the apparatus and safely turned the tremendous voltage into himself.

Chinese Cologae.

The Chinese ladies have an odd kind of cologae—that is to say, they constantly have upon their person a small bag of sweet smelling gum similar to that which was used by the ancient Egyptian women. Numerous costly jars recently unearthed at Pyramida contain the cosmetics and perfumes which were used by Egyptian princesses, all of which bear a resemblance to those in vogue today among Chinese ladies of the highest rank.

Sorry He Spoke.

He—I'd like to know what enjoyment you can find in going from store to store looking at things you haven't the least idea of buying. She—I know I can't buy them, but there is a sort of melancholy pleasure in thinking that I could have bought them if I had married George. Sends when I had the chance, instead of taking you.

Coldly Described.

"So you don't envy any of the world's men of genius?" "No," answered Mr. Cumrox. "I admire them, but I don't envy 'em. A genius is a man who gets a monument after he's dead instead of three square meals a day while he's living."—Washington Star.

She Was Stout.

"Do you remember how you used to put your arm round my waist when we were engaged, ten years ago? You never do it now." "No; my arm has not grown any longer."

The Average Englishman does not want his wife or sister to be anything but dull.

A beautiful and amiable idiot is his ideal of feminine perfection.—Lafont Field.
