Answer To Question.

The question has been asked me, "What companies are in the Trust, or as they style themselves, The International Harvester Company of America?" My answer is: The Deering, Milwaukee, McCormick, Champion, Plano, D. M. Osborn & Co., Minnie Harvester Co., Aultman Miller & Co., and the Keystone Manufacturing Co. They have succeeded in getting the 20th century Kemp Manure Spreader. These people are trying to put down all competition, and their success lies entirely with the farmer. In Men's Rain Coats.

Twenty-seven Men's Raincoats, all sizes 34 to 44 and all the prevailing tan shades that cost the manufacturer not less than $15.00 to produce, but a change in the firm forced him to close out his stock of Raincoats, and in his stock was this lot.

Every one of these coats is made from a very fine tan worsted that we guarantee absolutely all-wool. A wonderful statement in this age of cotton and mercerized fabrics.

Every coat is silk lined through the shoulders and sleeeves

Every coat is a genuine "Priestly Cravenette," the best and highest priced waterproofing process known to the clothing trade.

In fact, as stated before, these coats cost not less than $15.00 to produce and when we say they are worth $8.00 more than our price for actual service we are stating the case mildly.

Remember they are all tans and the price is $12,00. Come in and examine them. Samples are in our windows.
