On Setting Sail.

The anchor's up, she swings around, The sailors sing before the mast, Upon the sea a calm profound And calm within the heavens vast; We leave behind the crowded shores And all the things we love and know,

As toward the wider ocean's roars The ship with all her freight doth

Alone against the starboard rall I watch a while the sea and sky, The winking harbor lights that fall And as the distance greatens, die; And then my fancy lightly wakes, Turns back from sky and shore and sea,

And, like a voice, the silence breaks With this clear question suddenly: "If what we leave upon the shore

Were folly, envy and conceit, If this good vessel speeding bore But those forsaking things unmeet Like meaner thought and grosser aim And lust that leaves the heart awreck And littleness and senseless blame

Would you be standing on the deck ?" Ah, no! I fear that I would gaze

With many others from the land And neither envy have nor praise For those who sought a stranger strand; Smile idly at their useless trip

And dub them imbeciles and clods, And then for meet companionship Go back unto my little gods! New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Galley Slave. I welcome thee, O sleep,

Not that thy power doth keep Me from the memory and the toil of day For be it day or night, Or sleep or waking sight,

I labor at the oar the selfsame way. But in the night what strength, Whatstroke of wondrous length!

With what asplendid and victorious sweep I drive the vessel on

Toward the waiting dawn Through huge and hollow, roaring seas of sleep!

There comes no weariness To make me slacken stress, No master's voice is beating in mine I feel no chain or thong. Strong as a god is strong,

I play with labor, deaf to hopes and fears! Pallid across my face

Doth come the dawn's first trace; break! Ah, how I hate the sun.

And my comrades every one, God who's asleep and hell fore'er awake!

New Orleans Times-Democrat. To Him That Hath.

Measure me not by what I may achieve. Nor mark my progress by the height I gain;

How can you know with what sore hurt and pain I strive for that which others but receive?

How can you know how I am weighted down, What dead men's sins press heavy on my soul? Or how I can but creep toward my goal, their crown?
