Stunning models at $7.50, $10, $15

One of the best comments on our fall showing of millinery came to us from a well known out-of-town patron.

"What appealed to me most in your millinery," she said, "was the practical nature of every hat. They do not appear a bit fussy or gaudy and the colors are superb. You show such an assortment of them, too—particularly in street hats."

The hats at $7.50, $10 and $15, with the in-between prices, represent some of the most clever ideas of our own artists as well as adaptations from foreign models.

Extraordinary millinery at ordinary prices is our aim.

FOUR RACES IN COTTON FIELD

Whites, Negroes, Indians and Japanese Work in Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Okla., Oct. 1.—In the cotton fields of Oklahoma this year no less than four races of men—white, black, red and yellow—and five nationalities—American, Indian, Mexican, African and Japanese—are working almost side by side, while the crop is being gathered more promptly than usual, because of the introduction of new labor.

The Japanese are the latest cotton picking recruits, and Oklahoma is the first cotton-growing state to experiment with them. Thus far they have proved satisfactory, and they will be used next season also for tending and shopping the crop as well as picking it, thus to a degree supplanting negroes. Of course, the colored people are best pickers, but they have given much trouble in the past. Of the Indians, the Arapahoes and Cheyennes have done the best.

Five years ago pickers could be employed for as low as 75 cents a day and board, whereas now, if hired by the day, the price is $1.25 and board, and in rush seasons, the price goes as high as $2. Negroes as a rule prefer to pick by the hundred pounds, from 75 cents to $1 per hundred being the price, and rapid pickers make $3 and $4 per day.

FINDS ANCIENT PAINT SECRET

Indian Mound Explorer Discovers Pigment That is Said to Be Indestructible.

Bakersfield, Cal., Oct. 1.—The long sought secret of the composition of indestructible paint, used by the Egyptians and North American Indians, is believed to have been discovered by the finding of a heretofore unknown mineral substance in the Kern river oil field by F. H. Austin, who has been pursuing scientific investigation for two years.

Austin found this substance which he named "Diatine," while digging in ancient Indian mounds. He sent samples to the United States government geologists for examination and has received their report, which coincides with his own.

A string of beads of this material and one of asphaltum were found around the neck of an Indian skeleton. These beads stood the test of chloroform and the heat of a red hot stove without injury.

Running Down Cuban Rebel

Santiago, Cuba, Oct. 1.—Thirty additional men of the rural guard left here today on a special train to aid Captain Dougherty in running down Adolfo Lacalle and his band of 40 men, who have been located in the vicinity of Guan. Lacalle is paying cash for his supplies at the country stores.

HE KNEW A GOOD THING.

Found it a Paying Enterprise and Kept It Up.

A Russian grand duke, finding himself with a few days to spare in Paris, went one evening to the theater, and being a person of importance, thought himself bound to send a bouquet to the principal actress, says Il Rise. A month afterward, being in the same apartment, his servant announced that a lady wished to see him. Going to the room he found an unknown lady before him.

"I am afraid your highness does not recognize me," she said. "I am Mariquita, an actress, and I have come to thank you for your kind attentions."

"I recognize you now, madam," replied the duke, "but I think you are mistaken. I only sent you one bouquet."

"But it was your servant who brought them each evening," she said.

Accordingly the servant was called, and eventually, with much confusion, he said to his master: "When I took the first bouquet, your highness, the lady gave me a tip of five francs, and as the bouquet cost only forty sous I made three francs over it. So I repeated the performance, with the same result each time. I pray your highness' pardon."

Citizen—No; I have to work for very dollar I get.—Chicago News.

What He Was Afraid Of.

The late Charles Hodson, Chief Clerk of the American Embassy in London, served under eight American Ministers—under Lowell, Welsh, Bayard, Hay and so on.

"Mr. Hodson," said a New York importer, according to an exchange became an intimate friend of Lowell's during the poet's incumbency. He had all Lowell's books with autograph inscriptions, and he would errate many stories of Lowell's quick wit.

"At a dinner I once heard him say that Lowell was travelling on a Mediterranean steamer when a shabby musician took out a fiddle one evening after dinner and prepared to make a few pennies by playing a one or two.

"A little American girl stood beside Mr. Lowell. Watching the musician, she said:

"Why does he put a handkerchief under his chin like that when he plays? Is he afraid of soling his collar?"

"No, my dear," said Mr. Lowell. He is afraid of soling his violin."

Knew the Difference.

A certain major general in the British Army took a great interest in the subject of compulsory education, and would frequently pay a visit to the village school, which was situated near his country seat.

One day he had been giving them a brief sketch of the lines of some famous generals.

"Boys," he concluded, "you all know the great George Washington as a general. Perhaps you also know I am a general. Now, can any one tell me the difference between George Washington and myself?"

"I know, sir," answered a youngster at the back of the room. "Well, what is the difference? Speak up, my lad," said the general. "George Washington couldn't tell a lie, sir," shouted the boy in exultant tones.

It Happens Every Night.

At the end of one of the sessions of the world's conventions of the Women's Christian Temperance union in Boston, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens condemned the habit that so many men have of going out between the acts at the theater.

"I am in hearty sympathy," said Mrs. Stevens, "with a woman whose husband said heartily to her, at the end of an interesting drama:

"'Love, what a play! I don't believe there was a dry eye in the house when the curtain went down on the third act."

"'No," said the lady, bitterly; "but there seemed to be the usual number of dry throats."

Noses of Great Men.

Prominent noses seem to have been the property of many great men. Lycurgus and Solon had noses six inches in length, and Cvid was surnamed Naso on account of his large nose. Scipio Nasica derived his name from his prominent olfactory organ, and Alexander the Great and Cardinals Wolsey and Richelieu all had large noses. On the medals of Cyrus and Artaxerxes their noses came clear out to the rim of the coin. Washington's was the true aquiline type, indicative of firmness and patience, as was the nose of Julius Caesar. Mohammed had a singular nose. It was so curved that a writer has told us that the point of it seemed continually striving to insert itself between his lips. The noses of Franklin, Shakespeare and Dr. Johnson all had wide nostrils, betokening strength and love of thought. The nose of Napoleon was exquisitely though firmly chiseled. He often said, "Give me a man with plenty of nose!" Frederick the Great had so large a nose that Lavater offered to wager that blindfolded he could tell it among 10,000 by merely taking it between his thumb and forefinger.

The Fly That Buzzed For Mendelssohn

The following story is told of the music of the overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." While Mendelssohn was deep in the making of this same fine overture he went riding one day with a friend. In order, after awhile, to rest their horses the two boon companions dismounted and stretched themselves out under the shade of a great tree. Suddenly there came an excited "Hush!" from the great composer, who half arose very cautiously. A large fly was buzzing over them, and Mendelssohn was anxious to catch the true sound of the insect's hum as it gradually drifted farther away. Many days later when the overture had been completed the artist called his friend's attention to that passage in progression where the violoncello modulates in the chord of the seventh of the descending scale from B minor to F sharp minor. "There, that's the fly that buzzed past us at Schonhausen," said Mendelssohn.

Crushing a Critic.

School superintendents in New York among their many duties are expected to report on the personality of the teachers in their district. It is not always easy to get "a line" on that quality of a teacher, so many are lenient in the work. One of the superintendents, however, is never satisfied until he has made the test for orderliness by asking the teacher to open his or her desk. One day he found one of his fair subordinates with things in great confusion. She was evidently violating heaven's first law.

"My dear," said he to the blushing delinquent, "I don't believe you would make a good housekeeper."

The desk closed with a bang. There was fire in her eye as she calmly replied:

"Oh! Are you looking for a housekeeper?"—New York Press.

Stinkins—I'd like for you to give my nephew a job in your office.

Stinkins—What can he do?

Stinkins—Oh, he can turn his hand to almost anything, and he's as honest as the day is long.

Stinkins—Yes, but the days are growing shorter.

Lady—I thought you said you were a good wood worker.

Rusty Rags—So I am. I'm an expert pebbil sharpener.

Avoid the mistake of thinking you know enough. Beware of the idea that promotion and success are matters of luck. If you would succeed where others fail try a course at
